Police Complaints System

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any proposals for the reform of the police complaints system in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tom King: A proposal for a draft order in Council (together with an explanatory document) has been published today, setting out the Government's proposals to reform the police complaints and discipline system in Northern Ireland.

The proposed system would follow closely that which exists in the rest of the United Kingdom, and would be based on the same principle of accountability; police officers, whose training and experience best fit them for the task, would carry out complaints investigations, but subject to the guidance, control and supervision of an independent public authority whose task would be to ensure that the investigation had been carried out thoroughly, effectively, and efficiently.

The central feature of the proposals will be the establishment of the Independent Commission for Police Complaints for Northern Ireland; it will have extensive supervisory powers to control and direct the conduct of police complaints investigations. These powers mirror precisely those which have been given to the Police Complaints Authority in England and Wales.

In addition, the system in Northern Ireland will be supplemented by measures which give the Secretary of State and the Police Authority powers to direct the commission to supervise the investigation of matters not the subject of a formal complaint but which indicate that a police officer may have committed a criminal or disciplinary offence in cases which affect or appear to affect the public interest. The commission will therefore be able to exercise its supervisory powers in respect of the conduct of investigations into these matters.

I consider it essential that the system for handling complaints both commands the confidence of the public and is fair to the police themselves. I believe that these proposals represent a very considerable step forward and that, with the establishment of the commission, we shall have an independent organisation which can and will ensure that complaints are fully and fairly investigated. I firmly believe that this will serve to enhance the relationship between the public and the police and will foster a climate of mutual respect and co-operation in which the police will be better placed to protect the interests of the community by upholding the law and dealing more effectively with terrorism and crime.

I have arranged for copies of the proposal to be placed in the Library of the House and have made arrangements to consult interested parties about the proposals for reform. I look forward to receiving comments and views during the consultation period following publication of the proposal and I would intend bringing forward the appropriate legislation in due course.

Terrorism

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will give separately for magistrates' courts and Crown Courts for the first six months of the current year the number of cases involving non-scheduled offences in which pleas of not guilty were entered; in how many of these cases verdicts of not guilty were returned; and in how many of these cases trial was by jury;

(2) how many persons were charged with non-scheduled offences, how many were charged with scheduled offences and how many persons were found not guilty of all or some of the offences with which they were charged in the first six months of the current year.

Mr. Scott: The information on these murders will be available in the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as information on these murders has been obtained from the Royal Ulster Constabulary. My letter will cover all questions tabled so far.

Modern Language School Assistants

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken, in the light of the arrangement between the United Kingdom Government and other EEC Governments with regard to the exchange of modern language school assistants, to arrive at an arrangement with the Government of Ireland for the provision of Irish language school teaching assistants in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Blackwater Drainage Scheme

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the latest estimated cost of the river Blackwater drainage scheme; and what the effects have been of delays in the work programme experienced during 1985 and 1986, and the need for additional bank protection on reaches already completed.

Dr. Boyson: The latest estimated cost of works in Northern Ireland on the river Blackwater drainage scheme is £16·4 million. The alterations in the work programme have only marginally affected overall costs and, given reasonable weather conditions, the project will be back on programme in the autumn. A severe flood did cause erosion to newly excavated banks on the Oona tributary to the Blackwater. These have now been repaired.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he intends to initiate a new cost-benefit assessment of the river Blackwater drainage scheme in the light of the revised cost-benefit procedures adopted by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in respect of arterial land drainage schemes in England and Wales.

Dr. Boyson: No.

Arterial Land Drainage

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will revise the methodology for the cost-benefit appraisal of arterial land drainage projects; and if he will make it his policy to make summary cost-benefit information publicly available on request.

Dr. Boyson: The methodology is under review. The extent to which information may be made available will be considered on completion of the review.

Sectarian Intimidation

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of sectarian intimidation have been reported to the Royal Ulster Constabulary during the month of July.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Housing Executive tenants have sought transfer of housing as a result of sectarian attacks and intimidation; and how many have been rehoused.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive but I understand from the chairman that the information is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Irish Language

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many primary schools in Northern Ireland include the Irish language as a teaching subject; and what percentage that is of the maintained sector and of the primary school population as a whole.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the proposed date for publication of the Department of Education and Science's second language guidelines; and if those guidelines will cover the teaching of the Irish language in primary schools.

Dr. Mawhinney: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total number of pupils studying the Irish language in primary schools in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested is not available.

Foreign Languages

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many in-service courses per year have been organised at primary and post-primary level for (a) teachers of Irish, (b) teachers of French and (c) teachers of German since 1965.

Dr. Mawhinney: The following is the available information for such courses in Northern Ireland:

Orange Order Marches

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what quantity of concrete-filled barrels was supplied by the Department of the Environment to the organisers of Orange Order demonstrations in the constituency of Newry and Armagh during the past month; and what was the cost of such materials.

Mr. Needham: None.

Newry (Army Patrols)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his policy regarding Army units patrolling the town of Newry.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

RUC (Catering Establishments)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Crown exemptions from the health regulations are claimed at all Royal Ulster Constabulary catering establishments; and what representations he has received from police staff associations about removing this.

Mr. Scott: The Police Authority for Northern Ireland as the body responsible for providing a catering service for the Royal Ulster Constabulary does not claim exemption for health regulations in respect of RUC catering establishments.

Michael Tighe (Tapes)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the names of all those who have had responsibility for safeguarding the tapes recorded in the shed where Michael Tighe died in 1982 in County Armagh.

Mr. Scott: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend gave on 7 July 1986 at column 84.

DEFENCE

Plessey—GEC

Mr. Neil Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment he has made of the effect on competition in the provision of defence electronic equipment of the proposed takeover of the Plessey Company by GEC; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what changes he envisages in his Department's procurement policy if the proposed takeover of the Plessey Company by GEC proceeds;

(3) if his Department expects to put out more contracts to foreign suppliers in order to maintain competitive tendering in the defence field if the Plessey Company is taken over by GEC.

(4) what effect the proposed takeover of the Plessey Company by GEC will have on research and development in the defence field.

Mr. Lee: My Department, as a major customer of both GEC and Plessey, has given evidence to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the proposed merger of GEC and Plessey. The commission has recently reported its findings to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, who will publish the report in due course. It would be inappropriate to comment further on these matters at this stage.

Mr. Neil Thorne: asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what percentage of land tactical communications systems are currently supplied to his Department by Plessey Company and GEC;

(2) what percentage of naval communications equipment is currently supplied to his Department by Plessey Company and GEC.

Mr. Lee: It is not our practice to release information of this sort for reasons of commercial confidentiality. The Monopolies and Megers Commission has submitted its report to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. The commission has a duty to take into account all circumstances relevant to a merger of which market shares might be one aspect. My right hon. Friend is considering the commission's report and will be making a statement as soon as is practicable.

Community Programme Schemes

Mr. Prescott asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals exist to introduce community programme schemes provided by his Department.

Mr. Lee: Following consultation with the Property Services Agency, a number of tasks have been identified on the defence estate which may be suitable for work within the community programme. Three schemes have been approved, two at Chatham and one on Salisbury Plain, and others are currently under consideration.

Nimrod Aircraft (Operational Training Flight)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average cost of a Nimrod training flight of the type used for the despatch of spares to Virgin Challenger; and at what level of command arrangements for such flights are agreed.

Mr. Freeman: The cost of Nimrod operational training flights depends upon the duration of the flight. The hourly cost, at current price is £5,820 per hour. In accordance with standing instructions such flights are first approved by group headquarters.

Chile

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence what contact there has been with representatives of the Chilean armed forces by United Kingdom defence personnel in Chile since November 1984.

Mr. Freeman: We have had formal diplomatic relations with Chile since 1980, including a defence element. UK defence personnel have regular contact with representatives of the Chilean armed forces, both in Chile and the United Kingdom.

Service Training

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Defence, in the last five years, how many service personnel have collapsed, or been injured, and subsequently died when undergoing training; what were the circumstances in each case; on how many occasions inquiries were held; and how frequently training officers were reprimanded.

Mr. Freeman: I shall write to the right hon. Member.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Defence what advice has been issued to training officers regarding men taking strenuous exercise when wearing wet suits in hot weather.

Mr. Freeman: Divers in the armed services are required to undertake strenuous exercises in dry suits in order to simulate conditions and to build stamina and character. Rigorous standards of physical fitness are maintained both prior to and during training, which is conducted with first aid-trained supervisors present throughout. Article 6155 of the naval diving manual gives advice on heat illness, its prevention and first aid treatment. In addition, every Army Physical Training Corps instructor is issued with a comprehensive aide memoire which includes a section on "Heat Illness". This illustrates the two main types of heart illness, heat stroke and heat exhaustion. It also gives guidance on how to recognise the symptoms of both types and how they should be immediately treated until the casualty can receive qualified medical assistance.

Royal Ordnance plc

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Defence if any talks are taking place between his Department and Trafalgar House plc about a possible purchase of Royal Ordnance plc; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence earlier today.

Mr. J. Kay (Pension)

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will review the application for life commutation of pension by Mr. J. Kay of 1 Horn Lane, Brixton, Devon CPO (OPS) (M) Kay J. D066135J.

Mr. Freeman: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly.

Dr. Kurt Waldheim

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many officials of his Department are currently engaged on the search of records relating to British prisoners of war interrogated by Dr. Kurt Waldheim and German army group E during world war II; if he will take steps to increase the resources devoted to this search to a level which will permit a statement to be made on the outcome before the House rises for the summer Adjournment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Up to 12 officials from the Ministry of Defence are involved in various aspects of the search: these resources are adequate but it is unlikely that the search will be complete before the House rises.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the manpower strength of the Ulster Defence Regiment, and its reserve, as between full-time, part-time, male and female operatives on 30 June.

Mr. Freeman: Figures for 30 June are not yet available. Figures as at 31 May 1986 are as follows:

	Full time	Part time	Total
Male Officers	86	182	268
Female Officers	10	10	20
Servicemen	2,440	3,077	5,517
Servicewomen	190	546	736

Northern Ireland (Force Levels)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the manpower strength of the British Army in Northern Ireland giving details of the number of operatives for the following categories (a) Ulster Defence Regiment, (b) Regular British Army and (c) British Territorial Army on 30 June 1985.

Mr. Freeman: I assume the hon. Member's question meant to refer to figures for 30 June 1986. These figures are not yet available. The figures for 31 May 1986 are as follows:

	Number
Ulster Defence Regiment	6,541
Regular Army	10,161
Territorial Army	*3,550

* as at 31 March 1986.

The figures for the Ulster Defence Regiment include both full time and part-time soldiers. Soldiers of the Territorial Army are not used in support of the RUC in counter-terrorist operations.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement as to the range of military facilities available on the Falkland Islands for use by the United States of America.

Mr. Freeman: We maintain a garrison in the Falkland Islands to ensure there is no repetition of the events of 1982. The garrison has no wider purpose and there are no plans to make any military facilities on the islands available to the United States of America.

DROPS Equipment

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations his officials had with representatives of the Irish Army who had in use the DROPS equipment manufactured by T. T. Boughton Ltd. before excluding it from trials for the British armed forces contract.

Mr. Lee: None. I understand the Irish Army vehicle was used in substantially different roles to that envisaged for the British Army's DROPS requirements.

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he hopes to make a decision on the DROPS contract.

Mr. Lee: Later this year.

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Defence what approximate value he estimates is to be placed on the DROPS contract for the British armed forces.

Mr. Lee: The main DROPS production contract has not yet been placed and is still subject to competitive tendering. Overall the DROPS programme costs are expected to be of the order of £250 million.

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish correspondence between his hon. Friend the Member for Chertsey (Mr. Pattie) and T. T. Boughton Ltd. on 22 May 1984.

Mr. Lee: I have no plans to do so. It is not our practice to publish departmental correspondence of a commercially confidential nature.

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Defence what were the qualifications of the consultants who were employed to evaluate the DROPS proposals; and what was the extent of their experience in vehicle evaluation.

Mr. Lee: EASAMS Ltd. provided management consultancy support in the DROPS competition to the Department's procurement staff, who retained responsibility throughout for the direction of the work and all decisions. EASAMS had undertaken a variety of assignments previously for the Department, including in particular ones related to the services' logistic task and vehicle requirements. They had no commercial links with the competing firms or the industry generally.

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Defence why T.T. Boughton Ltd. was excluded from the trial for the contract for DROPS equipment.

Mr. Lee: Competitive proposals for DROPS main contractorship were submitted by 11 firms: six of them were eliminated in the first stage of the competition evaluation. Messrs Boughtons succeeded in reaching the final short list. Subsequently their proposals and those of two other competing firms were judged to have less merit than those of the two contractors selected to provide equipment for the subsequent trials and evaluations.

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now set up an inquiry into the exclusion of certain companies from the trial for DROPS.

Mr. Lee: No. Defence Ministers and senior officials have undertaken a thorough examination of complaints and assertions about the DROPS competition over the last three years. On each occasion the inquiries have failed to provide any evidence that the equipments proposed were not given every consideration or that the choice of equipment to take part in the subsequent competition trials was not made fairly and competently.

Ministry of Defence Police

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is now in a position to publish the Broadbent report on the Ministry of Defence police; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: 1. I welcome Sir Ewen Broadbent's report which has today been published as Cmnd. 9853.

2. Of the report's 21 recommendations, 17 are accepted, as follows:

(a) it is the Government's intention that there should be a Ministry of Defence Police Bill and that this be included in the legislative programme as soon as possible (recommendations (i), (ii), (iv) and (ix) (part)).

(b) the proposed review of the arrangements for escorting road convoys is being carried out (recommendations (iii) and (viii)).

(c) seaward protection units and dog detachments will be retained (recommendation (vi)).

(d) the number of police support units will be kept to a minimum (recommendation (vii)).

(e) an MOD police committee will be appointed on the lines and with the tasks proposed. The secretariat has been strengthened and will serve the police committee (recommendations (ix) (part) and (xvi)).

(f) there will be a single dedicated cell to carry out staff inspections throughout the whole of the force on the basis proposed and there will be periodic inspections by HMCICs (recommendations (xii) and (xiii)).

(g) the budget approach is accepted, but in working out the details it will be necessary to reconcile the chief constable's needs with those of line managers who have security responsibilities, and budgets of their own. Work is in hand. (Recommendation (xv)).

(h) the need for amplification of existing instructions and a closer definition of the roles of commanding officers, senior security officers and senior police officers is accepted (recommendation (xvii)).

(i) the police staff associations will have the right to make representations to the MOD police committee and staff facilities and arrangements for consultation have been revised on the lines recommended (recommendation (xviii)).

(j) the need for comprehensive training in Scottish practice and law is accepted. On training generally, the aim will be to make the most cost-effective use of Home Department's facilities where appropriate (recommendations (xix) and (xx)).

(k) the provision of MDP services to non-MOD bodies will be reviewed (recommendation (xxi)).

3. Of the remaining four recommendations, the thinking behind two ((x) and (xi)) in relation to close and effective communication between the service and MDP command structures is fully accepted and I believe that this can be achieved without the relocation of facilities and any major restructuring of the MDP's subordinate organisation. As regards recommendation (v) the CID element of the MDP is already considerably smaller than those of Home Office forces of similar size, and I do not think it is in the public interest that the scale of their present operations should be reduced. However, it is clearly sensible that the MDP should, to the maximum extent practicable, draw upon resources available elsewhere to support CID operations rather than attempts to duplicate these. Every effort will be made to ensure that, insofar as any problems over overlapping areas of operations may arise, these problems are anticipated and dealt with.

4. Finally, recommendation (xiv) concerning the introduction of a special constable scheme is the subject of continuing study since major issues on the practicability and effectiveness of such a force clearly arise.

5. Sir Ewen Broadbent's committee is to be congratulated on the quality of its report which the Government welcome as an important contribution to the future well-being and efficiency of the MDP. The committee clearly sees a continuing and important role for the MDP in providing policing and security services in relation to Crown property and servants. I endorse that conclusion and have full confidence in the MDP's capacity to discharge that role.

Royal Yacht Britannia

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for Defence how he intends to ensure that the best value for money is obtained in the refit of the HMY Britannia.

Mr. Lee: The Government will follow the best commercial practice in oversight and management of HMY Britannia's refit.

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of the refit of HMY Britannia to be undertaken by Devonport dockyard.

Mr. Lee: An estimated cost cannot be given at this stage.

United States Air Force (Weapon Storage)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to the implications for crisis management and stability of storing nuclear weapons by United States air force aircraft based in Britain in underground vaults.

Mr. Freeman: My Department is involved in continuing discussions with the United States Government on all aspects of the possible storage facilities.

United States Air Force (Weapon Deployment)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether approval has been given for an increase in the number of air bases at which United States air force nuclear weapons may be deployed in times of strategic alert.

Mr. Freeman: No recent approval has been sought or given.

Binary Chemical Weapons

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the Government have been consulted about the construction of storage facilities for the possible deployment of binary chemical weapons in time of crisis in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether the Government have been consulted by North Atlantic Treaty Organisation or United States officials on the contingency operations plan for the deployment of binary chemical weapons completed in June; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what public consultation will be held before a decision is made on the construction of storage facilities for the possible deployment of binary chemical weapons in time of crisis at United States bases in Britain.

Mr. Freeman: The United States have briefed NATO's military committee on their national plan for the contingency deployment of binary chemical munitions. The military committee noted this plan: if was not required to endorse or approve it. The details of this briefing are classified, but the United States plan does not designate any specific country as a destination for receiving binary munitions. The United Kingdom has not been approached about the possible contngency deployment of United States chemical weapons specifically in this country. If such a request were ever to be received, it would be a matter for decision by the Government of the day, in the light of the circumstances prevailing at the time. Any deployment to the United Kingdom at any time would require the consent of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether Her Majesty's Government have been consulted on the possibility of basing binary chemical weapons on maritime prepositioned ships off western Europe in peacetime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: No.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Sugar

Mr. Rippon asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what would be the import saving value at current prices of substituting British sugar beet production for the present import of sugar from Caribbean countries boycotting the Commonwealth Games.

Mr. Gummer: On the basis of 1984-85 deliveries to the United Kingdom, the saving on imports, at current prices, of substituting British sugar for imports of sugar from the six Caribbean countries holding quotas under the sugar protocol of the Lome convention who have withdrawn from the Commonwealth Games, is about £123 million. The breakdown is:

Country	£ million
Barbados	17·1
Belize	10·8
Guyana	46·2
Jamaica	32·2
St. Christopher and Nevis	5·4
Trinidad	11·4
Total	123·1

Agricultural Support

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing (a) the average cost of agriculture support to United Kingdom agriculture in the forms of tariffs, levies on imports, subsidies, acreage payments etc. in the three financial years ended in 1970-71, (b) the amount spent by the United Kingdom Government and the EEC in such forms including intervention buying, in 1985-86 and the latest forecast for expenditure in the current financial year and (c) the estimated total public sector outlay on agriculture, including the overhead cost of the United Kingdom Government and the EEC Commission in the current financial year; and if he will provide a comparison in 1986 prices as well as in current prices.

Mr. Gummer: The hon. Member is referred to figures available from the following published sources:

(a) the cost of agricultural support to United Kingdom agriculture in the years 1968-69 to 1970-71 is given in tables 18 and 19 to the annual review and determination of guarantees 1972 White Paper (Cmnd. 4928). Details of tariffs and levies on imports can be found in the Customs and Excise annual report 1971 (Cmnd. 4826).

(b) The provisional outturn for 1985-86 for support buying, and the estimate provision for 1986-87, are available from the Supply Estimates 1986-87 for class IV, vote 1.

(c) For estimates of public sector outlay on agriculture in 1986-87 I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 6 May at column 93. Details of the EC Commission's overhead costs relating to agriculture are not identified separately in the Commission's section on administrative appropriations in the Community budget.

EC (Food and Wine Sales)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing the exports of various foodstuffs and wine from the EEC to the Soviet Union and East Europe, respectively, in the most recent annual period for which figures are available; and what were the comparable figures in each of the previous 10 comparable annual periods.

Mrs. Fenner: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing the quantities and prices, expressed in pence and pounds, of the actual sales concluded by the EEC Commission under its recent regulations which enables it to dispose of butter at special prices to certain nations including the Soviet Union.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 30 April 1986 at column 442. It is still not possible to say what sales have actually been completed in respect of the 110,000 tonnes for which bids have been accepted to date.

Food Surpluses

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 21 July, Official Report, column 1, why provision is being made for an increase of 0·75 per cent. in the cost of storing common agricultural policy surpluses in 1986 over 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Intervention stocks of certain products have increased in 1986. As part of the price fixing settlement, however, the Council agreed to reduce the Community's contribution to the costs of storage. Taken together these factors result in an increase in overall provision.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his reply of 21 July, Official Report, column 1, why the provision made in the revised European Economic Community budget for the storage and withdrawal, respectively, of food surpluses in the current year has been reduced from the provision made in the original budget for the current year as set out in his answer to the hon. Member for Southend, East on 17 February, Official Report, column 3; what factors were taken into account in reducing these provisions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The principal reason for the reduction in the 1986 budget provision for intervention storage is the cut in Community reimbursement of storage costs, which was agreed by the Council after the original budget had been adopted. In addition, the forecasts of stock levels of cereals have been reduced. These changes more than offset the effects of higher estimated stocks of other products. The lower provision for withdrawals reflects a revised forecast of expenditure on fruit and vegetables, taking account of market and monetary developments.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is satisfied that the provision made in the revised European Economic Community budget for the storage and withdrawal, respectively, of food surpluses covers all contingencies which can be reasonably forecast; what contingency plans have been made for spending excesses following the decision on the revised budget for the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The provision for EAGGF guarantee expenditure in the new budget corresponds closely to the Commission's latest estimate of requirements this year. If any shortfall occurs payments which would otherwise be made in December will be deferred to 1987.

Milk Marketing Board

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any proposals for the privatisation of Dairy Crest or any parts of the Milk Marketing Board.

Mr. Gummer: No.

Sugar (Mauritius)

Mr. Rippon asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the present esitmated annual value at current prices of sugar imports from Mauritius.

Mr. Gummer: On the basis of 1984-85 deliveries, the annual value at current prices of sugar imports from Mauritius is about £132 million. this compares with a value of £41 million which it could expect to obtain for that volume on the world market.

Silage and Slurry

Mr. Wigley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will increase the grants available for the installation of silage and slurry effluent disposal systems to 75 per cent. in less-favoured areas and 60 per cent. elsewhere.

Mrs. Fenner: We have no plans to increase the grants available for waste disposal systems. These are already at twice the level available for most grant-aided investments under the agriculture improvement scheme.

Wheat

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the cost of producing a hectare crop of wheat on an efficient farm excluding the cost of the land; and if he will break down into the cost of (a) wages and salaries, (b) fertilisers and sprays, (c) depreciation and (d) other costs excluding rent.

Mrs. Fenner: As explained to the hon. Member in the reply given on 28 April, at column 312, production conditions, husbandry techniques and hence production vary throughout the country. This Department does not therefore produce figures for an efficient farm.

Sea Defences (Walton-on-the-Naze)

Sir Julian Ridsdale asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects a decision as to whether sea defence work at the Naze at Walton-on-the-Naze will proceed.

Mrs. Fenner: There have been several objections to the proposed coast protection works at the Naze and to the associated request for planning permission. It is now necessary to hold a public local inquiry and arrangements are in hand to set this up. No decision as to the acceptability of the coast protection works can be made until the results of the inquiry are known.

Sheep (Radiation)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the testing being carried out by his Department on effects of caesium on future offspring of lambs.

Mr. Jopling: Extensive tests are being carried out on sheep and lambs in the area designated for controls on the movement and slaughter of sheep so that these controls can be reduced as soon as the amounts of radiocaesium falls to acceptable levels. There is no reason to expect any adverse effects on future offspring of sheep in these areas, but as part of its general oversight my Department is assessing what scientific information is available on any possible genetic effects from exposure to radiocaesium.

Sir Peter Mills asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the latest position concerning controls on the movement and slaughter of sheep.

Mr. Jopling: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I are making a new order today under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 which will release further areas in south-west Cumbria from restrictions. These further releases, which will free some 280 holdings, 150 with sheep, from controls, are being made in the light of results of continued monitoring.

The order will retain restrictions on the movement and slaughter of sheep in the remaining areas. These areas will be reduced further as soon as the results of testing reveal a fall in radio-caesium to acceptable levels.

So far as compensation is concerned, the Government recognise that farmers who were prevented by the restrictions from marketing finished lambs at the usual time may have a higher proportion than normal rejected for variable premium because they will have become over-fat by the time they are eventually able to be sold and that these animals may also attract lower than average prices in the market. Where such losses have been sustained and can be substantiated, the Government will be prepared to meet them. Details of the application procedures will be announced shortly.

The Government also recognise that some farmers could face difficulties if it is found necessary to continue the restrictions to an extent which prevents them from moving store lambs and draft and cull ewes off their holdings at the normal time. We hope that it may prove possible to devise arrangements under which such movements could be permitted, subject to suitable restrictions to ensure that the animals concerned could not enter the food chain until it was wholly safe for them to do so. The farmers' unions have also drawn our attention to the fact that some of the farmers concerned are already being faced with extra expenditure. We shall be holding urgent discussions with the unions about these problems and also about what compensation might be appropriate to cover the direct losses which the farmers concerned may thereby incur.

Parliamentary approval for compensation payments will be sought in winter Supplementary Estimates for the class IV, vote 3, class XVI, vote 1 and class XVII, vote 1. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure will be financed by repayable advances from the contigencies fund.

I am placing a map indicating the newly derestricted area in Cumbria, plus the monitoring data available since 10 July, in the Library of the House. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales will be making a similar announcement in respect of restrictions in Wales.

I am also placing in the Library of the House the results of monitoring of the aquatic environment in England and Wales since Chernobyl undertaken by the Ministry's Directorate of Fisheries Research, Lowestoft.

Animal Farms (Fur)

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many establishments known to him in England and Wales were used for the raising of animals for the production of fur, by species, in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Fenner: The only figures available for establishments which rear animals for the production of fur in England and Wales are those for mink farms licensed for the purposes of the Destructive Imported Animals Act 1932. The licences issued in each of the financial years 1981-82 to 1985-86 were respectively 54, 50, 49, 45 and 47.

Swine Influenza

Mr. Harris asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence is available to his Department about an outbreak of a new disease of pigs, known as swine influenza; what information he has about the incidence and geographical distribution of the disease; and how the disease arrived in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Fenner: This disease is not notifiable and accurate statistics are not available about numbers of outbreaks. However, this year Ministry veterinary investigation centres have identified the infection in 10 herds located in Dorset, Norfolk, Somerset, Suffolk and Yorkshire. The origin of the disease is currently under investigation.

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether his Department has yet identified the swine fever strain responsible for the recent outbreak of the disease in the West of England; what information he has regarding the cause of swine fever outbreaks in other member states of the European Community in the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: Studies on the characterisation of the classical swine fever virus have not reached a stage which enables meaningful epidemiological conclusions to be drawn from individual isolates.

The origin of the outbreak of classical swine fever in Devon is still under investigation. Where identified, the main causes of disease outbreaks in other member states this year have been the movement of pigs and the feeding of inadequately processed waste food.

Aujeszky's Disease

Mr. Harris asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what controls exist to prevent the reintroduction of Aujeszky's disease into the United Kingdom through the importation of infected pigmeat products or live pigs.

Mrs. Fenner: Imports of pigmeat products are permitted from member states of the European Community provided they conform with the relevant animal health directives. The rules applied to imports from other countries are at least as strict. They provide that the products must be produced from pigs that were examined and found to be healthy and that were slaughtered in an approved slaughterhouse.

Imports of live pigs are not permitted except from countries of comparable animal health status. The safeguards include requirements that the premises of origin shall have been clear of Aujeszky's disease for the preceding 12 months, that during this period there shall have been no vaccination against the disease on the holding, and that the animals shall have been tested on two occasions for the disease whilst being kept in isolation for a period of 21 days prior to export.

Brewing Industry

Mr. Speed asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what current steps he is taking to encourage the brewing industry to use more English hops.

Mrs. Fenner: United Kingdom brewers' requirements for hops, including those produced by English growers, have been declining for a variety of reasons. Essentially, however, commercial considerations, including variety and price, dictate the purchasing policies of the brewers and it would not be appropriate for the Government to seek to influence their decisions.

Animals (Ear-punching)

Mr. Cohen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research into alternatives to ear-punching of fatstock has been sponsored or carried out by his Department; what representations he has received on this practice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to adopt alternative methods to ear-punching on sheep, in the light of the recent report published by the Farm Animal Welfare Council on 21 May, concerning the welfare of livestock at markets.

Mrs. Fenner: Over many years, the Agriculture Departments have examined numerous possible alternatives to ear-punching, including branding, tagging, dyes and tattoos. None of these has so far proved acceptable as a means of marking which is permanent and fraud-proof, and which can be readily and humanely applied. We have received a number of representations on ear-punching. Most recently, the Farm Animal Welfare Council has submitted a report on the welfare of livestock at markets which deals with ear-punching. We are seeking comments from all interested organisations on their report and will respond in due course.

Supply Estimates

Mr. McLoughlin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing the effects on Supply Estimates of the decisions on common agricultural prices for 1986-87.

Mr. Jopling: Since the Supply Estimates of the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce were prepared a number of changes have taken place in market prices, levels of production, exchange rates and trade volumes. Revised forecasts for 1986-87 have to take account of these changes as well as the effects of the decisions taken on the common agricultural policy prices. Most of the relevant expenditure is funded from the Community budget although expenditure on intervention purchases is not recouped until the goods are sold. Expenditure net of Community receipts is therefore forecast to change as a result of the price fixing decisions in only two sections (A and C of class IV.1). The common agricultural policy price decisions are estimated to increase the net call on Exchequer funds by about £23 million, as indicated in the table.

A winter supplementary Estimate will be submitted seeking parliamentary approval for any agreed change in provision for collection of the co-responsibility levy on cereals and for payments under the aid for small cereals producers and the milk outgoers schemes which were agreed as part of the price fixing. The supplementary Estimate will also make provision for payments and receipts on external trade following the accession of Spain and Portugal to the Community.

Class IV Vote 1

	Net expenditure before allowing for receipts from the Community	Receipts from Community £ million	Exchequer Expenditure
A. Supply Estimate 1986-87	1,490	(1,142)	348
B. Forecast before price fixing (25 April 1986)	1,682	(1,314)	368
C. Forecast after prive fixing	1,657	(1,266)	391
D. Effect of price fixing (C-B)	−25	−(−48)	= +23

Bass Fishery

Mr. Harris asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement about the bass fishery in England and Wales.

Mr. Gummer: Since the interim report on the bass fishery in England and Wales was made available to the House in March 1983 my scientists have continued their work in investigating this fishery.

Their report is now complete and I am pleased to say that they have found the stock to be in a generally satisfactory condition with no evidence of a persistent decline in the adult stock and there are signs that the majority of recent year classes are strong. Provided that there is adequate recruitment of maturing fish to the adult stock there is little risk of a collapse of the stock through inadequate spawning and there is no indication that a restriction on the overall level of exploitation is necessary.

None the less, despite the current comparatively healthy state of the stock, the report indicates that the bass fishery continues to expand both in level of effort and variety of fishing techniques and that it would be prudent to consider long term management measures particularly as much of the fishing activity is concentrated on the younger fish. The report suggests that in the longer term yields could be increased and the spawning stock safeguarded by an increase in the minimum landing size, the introduction of a minimum mesh size and the closure of nursery areas.

My scientists have also recently completed a comprehensive study of gill netting in coastal fisheries in England and Wales, the way gill nets are made and how they catch fish and examines methods for managing the major gill net fisheries. The report also refers to both the current fishing practices and the possible changes following the introduction of a 100mm minimum mesh size regulation as recommended in the bass report, and indicates that there is unlikely to be any adverse effect.

On the basis of the recommendations made in these reports my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I are disposed towards the introduction of an increase in the minimum landing size for bass from 32cm to 36cm; and a minimum mesh size of 100mm for all gill and similar nets with exceptions for pelagic fisheries in those areas where water authorities might consider a smaller millimetre mesh size continued to be justified. Our officials will now set in hand arrangements for consultation with all interested parties. As to the closure of nursery areas, we think this needs further detailed consideration at local level and to be successful would need the full co-operation of the sport fishing interests and local bodies such as sea fishery committees and water authorities. We are therefore inviting all those concerned to study carefully the report of my scientists and consider whether it would be appropriate to propose local arrangements which could be effectively implemented. Our officials will be ready to assist in any way if, for example, sea fishery committees wish to consider the introduction of appropriate byelaws for this purpose.

I am arranging for a copy of both reports to be placed in the Library of the House and copies will be made available to anyone who applies to the Department.

Radioactivity

Mr. Corbyn asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if all food supplies with a higher level of radiation than 350 becquerels have now been withdrawn; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling [pursuant to his reply, 22 July 1986, c. 116]: Monitoring carried out by my Department since the Chernobyl accident has shown the position of foodstuffs on sale in this country to be entirely satisfactory. It has not been necessary to withdraw any food supplies. Special measures have been taken in parts of Cumbria and north Wales to ensure that sheep entering the food chain are below internationally acceptable levels.

Spain (Imports)

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his assessment of the effect on the competitive position of United Kingdom exporters of barley to northern Spain of the insistence by the Spanish Government that goods can be shipped only by vessels under the Spanish flag.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 21 July 1986, c. 2]: It would be very difficult to estimate the effects of a measure which, as I understand it, applies to exports to Spain from all sources. The Government are pursuing the legality of the decree and officials have already raised the issue of its effects on the grain trade with the EC Commission.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Salmon Poaching

Mr. Wilson asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what difficulty has been experienced in raising prosecutions for salmon poaching in the Solway due to doubt on demarcation of the border; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: I do not know of any such difficulty having occurred in a particular case. I am, however, aware of the potential for problems in this area. I shall ask the procurator fiscal at Dumfries for a report on the situation and shall write to the hon. Member.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Immigration

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what instructions have been issued to entry clearance officers about the circumstances in which they require an applicant for settlement to submit to medical examination under paragraph 82 of HC 169.

Mr. Waddington: I have been asked to reply.

In Commonwealth countries and Pakistan certain categories of applicant for settlement as a dependant, other than a spouse or child under 18, of a person settled in the United Kingdom are required to have a medical examination before an entry clearance is issued. (This requirement does not apply to spouses or children under 18 who may not be refused admission on medical grounds.) Examining medical officers have not been appointed in other countries. Where there has not been a medical examination abroad the decision whether medical reasons make admission undesirable depends on the medical examination on arrival. Accordingly all persons coming for settlement are advised to have a medical examination before departure.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people were waiting for special quota vouchers to be issued in (a) June 1986, (b) December 1985 and (c) June 1985; when those issued with vouchers on those dates had applied; when those now applying can expect to receive vouchers; and how many applications there were for vouchers in 1985 and the first half of 1986.

Mr. Waddington: I have been asked to reply.

Following a count of applications outstanding in India, the number of persons worldwide awaiting a decision on their application for a special voucher was estimated to be 4,000 at the end of December 1985 and 3,900 at the end of March 1986, the latest quarter for which complete data are available. The corresponding estimate for June 1985 is 4,200. The waiting time to main interview for non-priority applicants interviewed in India at each of these three dates was about 8 years; priority applicants had waited in general up to 6 months. Applicants interviewed in other countries at the end of June 1985 had waited up to 3 months and, at the end of December 1985 and June 1986, up to 1½ months. It is expected that persons applying in India now will have to wait 4 to 5 years for their main interview if they do not qualify for priority, and up to 6 months if they do; current applicants in other countries will probably have to wait up to 1½ months. The number of applications newly received worldwide was 960 in 1985 and 480 in the first half of 1986.

Sub-Saharan Africa (Family Planning Aid)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of total value of British bilateral aid to sub-Saharan African countries in 1985 was used for family planning.

Mr. Eggar: In 1985, British bilateral assistance to sub-Saharan countries totalled £285 million. About £150,000 or ·05 per cent. of this was spent specifically on family planning activities as narrowly defined.

Medical Advisers

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Royal Society of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene about the downgrading of the post of medical adviser to the Overseas Development Administration and the depletion of medical advisers in his Department; and what reply he has given.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development has received two letters from the President of the Royal Society of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene. The latest express concern that the Overseas Development Administration should have access to good medical advice at senior level, and asks what steps the Minister proposes to take to fill vacant medical adviser posts in the ODA. I have replied assuring the Society that my right hon. Friend shares their concern that Britain should continue to make a major contribution to health care in developing countries, and that the Overseas Development Administration should have access to good professional advice, including medical advice, to enable it to carry out its programmes. I am confident that the arrangements which the Overseas Development Administration has made to recruit a second full-time medical adviser, and a full-time professional head of health and population division, will meet this requirement.

Rain Forests

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will increase aid to Third-world countries with the purpose of helping them to preserve their rain forests.

Mr. Eggar: The Government are conscious of the need to protect the tropical rain forest. We are very willing to consider funding appropriate forestry projects when asked to do so. British aid to forestry doubled in the period 1981-85.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to Indonesia, Brazil and Zaire concerning their tropical rain forests.

Mr. Eggar: We have made no formal representations to these governments. We have no forest projects in the countries concerned. We have reminded the World Bank of the need to ensure that environmental considerations are given appropriate weight in its programmes in the rain forest areas of Indonesia and Brazil.

Overseas Development Administration

Mr. Temple-Morris asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to publish the next annual review of the Overseas Development Administration.

Mr. Raison: The fourth annual review of the work of the Overseas Development Administration, entitled "British Overseas Aid in 1985", will be published on 28 July, price £6·95, and will be available from HMSO bookshops. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and will be available on request from the Vote Office.

Zambia

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonweath Affairs if he will list the principal items of capitalinvestment in infrastructure together with the sums allocated which form part of the £4 million aid to rural development in central Zambia announced on 7 July and state whether any conditions have been made in respect of this expenditure.

Mr. Eggar: The principal capital investment items have not yet been determined, as the capital aid will help to fund the annual minor works programmes of five district councils. The release of the funds will be conditional on regular reviews of the programmes by the Overseas Development Administration.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the breakdown in expenditure of the £3,069 million technical co-operation scheme for rural development in central Zambia announced on 7 July.

Mr. Eggar: The breakdown is as follows:

Item	£000
Staffing costs	2·13
Vehicles and equipment	0·47
Housing	0·20
Contingencies	0·27
Total	3·07

Commonwealth Countries (Aid)

Mr. Rippon asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the estimated cost in the current financial year of aid to be given to the following Commonwealth countries: Antigua, the Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Brunei, Cyprus, Dominica, the Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guyana, India, Jamaica, Kenya, Lesotho, Malaysia, Mauritius, Nigeria, Papua New Guinea, St. Kitts, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Sri Lanka, Tanzania, Trinidad and Tobago, Uganda, the Virgin Islands, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

Mr. Eggar: An estimate of the cost of financial aid to particular countries arising from agreements signed up to April 1986 is in Table 3 of the Overseas Aid Vote (Supply Estimates 1986-87 Class II, 5), copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library. Further allocations may be made during the year. Countries may also benefit from regional technical co-operation.

Aid Projects

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all current and projected aid projects to Nicaragua, El Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica and Guatemala.

Mr. Eggar: The following is the information on British bilateral aid:—

NICARAGUA
There are no current projects and none are in prospect.

EL SALVADOR
Vehicles and equipment for social development.
No other projects are in prospect.

HONDURAS
Current Projects
National Forestry School.
Agricultural Equipment.
National Water Authority. Exploration and exploitation of Water Resources and provision of pipes, drills and pumps.
National Institute of Agriculture, vehicle maintenance and provision of Land Rovers.
Installation and maintenance of Hospital Equipment supplied under Capital Aid.
National Coffee Institute — crop diversification and pest control and provision of spraying equipment.
Prospective Projects
Forest Genetics Research Programme.
Equipment for a Soils Analysis Laboratory for the National Coffee Institute.

COSTA RICA
Current Projects
Central American School of Animal Husbandry.
Advice on establishment of an Appropriate Technology Unit.

Prospective projects

GUATEMALA
There are no current Projects and none are in prospect.

Aid is also provided through the joint funding scheme to support small development projects co-financed with British voluntary agencies. So far this year agreement has been given for two projects in El Salvador, four in Honduras and three in Nicaragua.

All these countries are in receipt of aid from multilateral agencies to which Britain contributes.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Milk Marketing Board and Dairy Crest

Sir Adam Butler asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how long it is since he received the Touche Ross report on the Milk Marketing Board and Dairy Crest; and when he expects to give his reaction to it.

Mr. Jopling: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I received the report on 23 December 1985. Touche Ross concluded that in most respects separation between the Milk Marketing Board and Dairy Crest Foods had been achieved, as required by Community and domestic legislation. However, it considered that Dairy Crest's strategy could be constrained by the board's interests in maintaining and increasing markets for milk, and that Dairy Crest Foods' rate of return might not have been acceptable to a commercial company.

The report required careful consideration and consultation with the industry. Agreement has now been reached between the Government, the Milk Marketing Board and the Dairy Trade Federation on arrangements designed to strengthen competition in the dairy industry, to ensure fair competition between all buyers of milk, to clarify the separation of Dairy Crest Foods from the Milk Marketing Board and to reinforce the Government's supervisory role. Under the existing umbrella of the milk marketing scheme, Dairy Crest Foods will become a body legally distinct from the Milk Marketing Board and will work to clearly stated commercial objectives. In the Joint Committee, which will remain the essential vehicle for negotiations on price and supplies, the Milk Marketing Board and the Dairy Trade Federation will continue to negotiate on an equal footing and to respect the requirements of United Kingdom and Community law. The National Farmers' Union of England and Wales and the Farmers' Union of Wales have been consulted and have endorsed the proposed arrangements.

I am arranging for the text of the agreement to be placed in the Library.

Agricultural Produce (Marketing)

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further policy he has in the area of marketing of British agricultural produce following enactment of the Agricultural Marketing Act 1983.

Mr. Gummer: The Government are providing some £14 million of pump priming funds to FFB in the five years up to 1987-88 and up to £7·5 million during the following three years if funding by the industry is satisfactory. The Council of Food From Britain will be restructured shortly and I expect one of its first priorities to be the setting of new marketing objectives and strategies.

Water Pollution

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many serious water pollution incidents were caused by farm works in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and how many of these resulted in prosecutions leading to a conviction.

Mrs. Fenner: The information requested is not available on a comparable basis for a full 10-year period. However, the Water Authorities Association and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have just published a joint report on water pollution from farm waste 1985, covering England and Wales. That report includes details of pollution incidents caused by farm waste since 1979, of prosecutions brought by water authorities in respect of those incidents, and of the results of those prosecutions. I have arranged for a copy of the report to be placed in the Library of the House.

Fish Farming

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from water authorities in England and Wales about river pollution caused by fish farming.

Mr. Gummer: Two water authorities have made representations to my Department about river pollution from fish farms.

The Wessex water authority has expressed concern about the development of fish farming in its area and in 1983 called for all fish farm to be made subject to planning controls and water abstraction licensing and for controls to be introduced on the use of biologically active chemicals. In 1984 the authority sent my Department a report "An appraisal of the effect of fish farming on river quality in Wessex".

The Yorkshire water authority, in its 1985 annual report to Parliament, referred to pollution difficulties caused by the development of fish farming on one river in its area.

These concerns were also expressed to the long-term water research requirements committee, on which my Department was represented, by those water authorities and the scope for further research was reflected in its report "Water Research in the Longer Term" which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment published on 15 July.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will outline the nature and extent of the review of his Department's peacetime emergency plans following the Chernobyl disaster; whether, when completed, he intends to publish it; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: My Department is playing its full part in the Government's review of contingency arrangements following the Chernobyl accident and will make any necessary changes to its emergency plans. Any revision of the Department's emergency arrangements would be notified to those required to implement them, as well as other departments and emergency services.

Public Bodies

Mr. Wigley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a list of all the bodies in Wales to which he has sole or joint responsibility for making appointments.

Mr. Jopling: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Cattle Purchases (Cost)

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 22 July, what were the numbers of cattle purchased at Kirkby Lonsdale; at what cost; and what was the cost of the work undertaken to try to establish the cause of the cornebacterium pyogenes mastitis problem.

Mrs. Fenner: It is not the Ministry's practice to divulge details of individual transactions, which are a matter of commercial confidence. The cost of the work undertaken by the Ministry to try to establish the cause of the disease problems has been £62,000.

Radiation

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will specify the derived emergency reference levels that are currently in use in the United Kingdom for meat produce.

Mrs. Fenner: Recent action in relation to meat has not been based upon derived emergency reference levels but took account of recommendations by a group of radiological experts from within the European Community.

Food (Radioactivity)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Minister of Agriculture Fisheries and Food if he will specify the relationship between the derived emergency reference levels for meat, milk and vegetables, and the individual radiological doses they relate to.

Mrs. Fenner: Derived emergency reference levels, published by the National Radiological Protection board, require consideration to be given to the imposing of restrictions on consumption of water, milk and other foodstuffs when projected levels of effective dose equivalent are above 5 millisieverts in a year or projected dose equivalents to single organs exceed 50 millisieverts in a year.

Food (Irradiation)

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether he is satisfied that irradiated fresh fruit and vegetables are not being imported from other European countries and sold through normal retail outlets, contrary to the United Kingdom Food (Control of Irradiation) Regulations; and if he will make it his policy to enforce the present ban on such imports until such time as the regulations are appropriately amended;

(2) how many samples of food have been tested to detect any irradiation treatment at ports of entry into the United Kingdom since 1 January 1985; and what proportion of samples were found to have been irradiated;

(3) how many prosecutions for the importation of irradiated food contrary to the United Kingdom Food (Control of Irradiation) Regulations have been initiated since 1 January 1985; how many have resulted in successful prosecutions; and what information he has as to how many allegations of such breaches of the regulations have been referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions for consideration.

Mr. Whitney: I have been asked to reply.

I shall write to the hon. Member.

South Africa

Mr. Caborn asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will provide details of goods procured by his Department from (a) South Africa and (b) Namibia for each year from 1980 to 1985, including the total value for each year and the value of each category of items for each year;

(2) if he will give details of all contracts involving his Department and majority-owned South African companies since June 1979.

Mr. Gummer: Records are not maintained in a form which enables this information to be provided.

Basmati Rice

Mr. Janner asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the reply of 18 July, Official Report, column 626, who has asked the Commission to reconsider the proposal to reduce the levy for imports of 15,000 tonnes of basmati rice; what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the proposals; and if he will make it his policy to ensure that any change in the regulations for the import of such basmati rice does not harm trade with India or damage the European Community's domestic rice milling industry.

Mr. Gummer: During the current discussions a majority of member states, including the United Kingdom, have asked the Commission to reconsider their proposal. The Government have urged the Commission to come forward with the proposals that take proper account of the interests of the European rice milling industry and the exporting countries concerned.

Swine Fever

Mr. Hicks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the source of the imported diseased pigmeat that led to outbreaks of classical swine fever in the United Kingdom has been established; and what action he proposes taking.

Mrs. Fenner: It has not been possible to identify the exact source of the imported pigmeat products which investigations suggest caused the recent outbreaks of classical swine fever.

We have written to the Agriculture Commissioner in the European Commission to underline the need for urgent action to control the disease. In particular we have pressed for more stringent measures to stamp out disease outbreaks and for tighter control of movements and trade. Officials are following up these matters within the European Community. An urgent reappraisal of the processing needed to overcome the survival and infectivity of the virus in pigmeat products is underway.

Mr. Hicks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those EEC countries that use vaccination for the purpose of elimination of classical swine fever; if he is satisfied with this method in respect of those countries' exports of pigmeat into the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: All member states except the United Kingdom, the Republic of Ireland, Luxembourg and Denmark have in recent years used vaccination as one aspect of their programme for the eradication of swine fever.

The Community's objective is the eradication of the disease and the ending of vaccination in all member states; we support this. In the meantime imports of fresh pigmeat are not permitted from areas of the Community where vaccination is practised.

European Community (Food Sales)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, if he will publish a table showing the exports of various foodstuffs and wine from the EEC to the Soviet Union and East Europe, respectively, in the most recent annual period for which figures are available; and what were the comparable figures in each of the previous 10 comparable annual periods.

Mrs. Fenner [pursuant to her reply, 24 July 1986]: The most recent annual information readily available relates to calendar year 1985 and was set out in the reply of 13 May 1986 at columns 443-44: exports of wine in 1985 to the USSR and to the rest of Eastern Europe, not shown in that reply, were 35,000 tonnes and 28,000 tonnes respectively. Corresponding information for the years 1976 to 1984 was shown in the replies of 20 February 1986 at columns 331-34 and 25 March 1985 at columns 1-2.

Star-Kist Tuna

Mr. David Marshall asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to prevent the import into the United Kingdom of any of the 18 million tins of Star-Kist tuna fish found not fit for human consumption in Canada.

Mr. Whitney: I have been asked to reply.
I shall write to the hon. Member.

TRANSPORT

M1

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth of 11 December 1985, Official Report, column 658 about the M1 motorway, the review of motorway capacity has now been concluded; when he expects to make an announcement about its findings; what consultants have been engaged in the review; and whether it will be published in full and a copy placed in the Library.

Mr. Moore: The examination of motorway capacity is being undertaken by my officials and is continuing. I expect to commence a review of the trunk road construction programme later this year and hope to take account of the examination in that exercise. The results of the programme review will be published in the normal way.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the forecast traffic flows for 1994 and 2004 for the those sections of the M1 between the M25 and M6 assuming completion of the proposed M40; if he will give the design flow range for a three-lane motorway under the revised standards issued recently as departmental standard TD 20/85; and what plans his Department has for relief of the congestion on the M1 after the M40 has been constructed;

(2) if any initial examination has been made of technical requirements in widening any of the M1 between M25 and M45.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The forecast traffic flows for 1994 and 2004 on those sections of M1 between the M25 and M6 (assuming completion of M40) are as follows:

Junctions	1994	2004
6A—8	116—140,000	125—160,000
8—10	108—120,000	116—140,000
10—13	77—96,000	82—110,000
13—15	66—89,000	71—102,000
15—19	58—78,000	62—90,000

The revised departmental standards set as the starting-point in the assessment and design of road carriageways a range of 50,000—79,000 vehicles per (annual average) day for a dual 3-lane motorway.

The review of the capacity of M1 referred to by my predecessor in her replies on 14 November 1985 to my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth is continuing.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the forecast percentage relief to the M1 due to construction of the M40 at high and low growth traffic levels in 2004.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The forecast is that the relief at either high or low growth will lie in the range 10-19 per cent.

London Regional Transport

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list for each bus route awarded by tender by London Regional Transport to other operators in 1986 to date the amount to be paid annually by each to the other, together with a list of those bus routes advertised for tender awarded to London Buses Ltd., listing for each any amount credited to that route by London Regional Transport in respect of social needs;

(2) if he will state for each of the bus routes operated by contractors for London Regional Transport for whole or part of the year 1985-86 the amount paid to London Regional Transport or the amount paid by it to each operator, together with an estimate of the equivalent amounts expected to be paid in the current financial year.

Mr. David Mitchell: Detailed information on the amounts paid by or to London Regional Transport for the operation of particular routes by London Buses Ltd. and other operators is a matter for them. Some of the information will be commercially confidential. For 1985-86 LRT's published accounts show that the contribution to group turnover of tendered services operated by London Buses Ltd. was £1·1 million, of tendered services operated by others £2·0 million, and of contract and express carriage business £3·8 million.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the plant, property and vehicles sold, leased, or let to other undertakings by London Regional Transport relating to bus operations arising from the provisions of the London Regional Transport Act.

Mr. David Mitchell: Such transactions would be a matter for the management of LRT.

London Regional Transport Central Driving School

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the contribution to road safety and standards of driving public service and other vehicles made by the London Regional Transport central driving school at Chiswick; what is the approximate current cost per qualified public service vehicle driver; and what estimate he has of the future cost of such training;

(2) what information he has for each of the years 1975 to 1985 on the numbers of qualified public service vehicle licence holders passing through the London Regional Transport central driving school at Chiswick, together with the approximate percentage these figures constitute of numbers in (a) England and Wales and (b) south-east England.

Mr. David Mitchell: The central driving school at Chiswick is the responsibility of London Buses Ltd. I suggest that the hon. Member addresses his questions to it.

River Crossing (Dartford)

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Transport why the guidelines for the four shortlisted schemes for the construction of the third River Thames crossing at Dartford have been substantially changed in the letter from his Department to the promoters dated 21 July.

Mr. Moore: In my reply to the question from my hon. Friend the Member for Billericay (Mr. Proctor) on 8 July, column 116, giving the four schemes from three promoters which had been shortlisted for the construction of the new crossing at Dartford, I said that I had to satisfy myself about certain technical and financial aspects of their proposals. The Department's letter of 21 July is part of that process.

The letter amplifies the guidelines by dealing with some matters which became apparent during our consideration of the promoters' bids, but had not been explicitly addressed in the guidelines. It invites promoters to revise their proposals so that we can compare them as far as possible on a standard basis to incorporate certain safety features we regard as essential, to clarify the financial basis and to take account of some relaxation in the Port of London Authority requirements for navigation clearances for bridge height and the depth of immersed tubes in the river bed. All four schemes are affected by these matters in different ways. We reserved the right in the guidelines to require changes in promoters' proposals if we thought that they were necessary.

The issue of this letter will not delay appreciably my decision on a scheme.

East London River Crossing

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether properties that would be affected by the proposed east London river crossing which were previously owned by the Greater London council will be acquired by him from the London residuary body; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: All the properties included in the draft compulsory purchase order will, if it is made, be acquired from whoever owns the title to them at the time.

South Africa

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will provide details of goods procured by his Department from (a) South Africa and (b) Namibia for each year from 1980 to 1985, including the total value for each year and the value of each category of items for each year;

(2) if he will give details of all contracts involving his Department and majority-owned South African companies since June 1979.

Mr. Moore: This information is not available.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide details of all agreements concerning air links between South Africa and the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Scheduled air services between the United Kingdom and the Republic of South Africa operate under a bilateral air services agreement of 26 October 1945 as amended by exchanges of notes dated 15 September 1959, 1 December 1972, 25 March 1974 and 2 November 1984/24 February 1985. These have been published as Cmnd. 7858, Cmnd. 889, Cmnd. 5222, Cmnd. 5614 and Cmnd. 9582 respectively.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of passengers (a) entering the United Kingdom from South Africa and (b) departing from the United Kingdom to South Africa from each of the United Kingdom's international airports for the years 1980 to 1985.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The number of passengers entering the United Kingdom from South Africa and departing from the United Kingdom to South Africa on direct flights between the United Kingdom and South Africa are shown in the table below. All the passengers used Heathrow airport (except in a few cases where the flight was diverted at short notice for operational reasons). The figures do not include passengers travelling between the United Kingdom and South Africa who changed planes at an intermediate point.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide the total value of (a) exports to South Africa and (b) imports from South Africa via each of the United Kingdom's airports for the years 1980 to 1985.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The following figures are available from Customs and Excise. Not all the trade moved directly between the United Kingdom airports and South Africa: some transferred to or from other air services at other United Kingdom or foreign airports. In the case of imports, South Africa was the country of consignment but not necessarily the country of origin.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the highways, sections of highways, or other land which have been transferred to the London Residuary Body under section 62 of the Local Government Act 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: This is a matter for the London Residuary Body.

Street Works Advisory Committee

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Street Works Advisory Committee he proposes to establish will have any executive functions; and whether it will employ any staff.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No; the Street Works Advisory Committee will be a purely advisory body and will have no executive functions. It will also not employ staff.

Motor Cycles

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he will issue the findings of his review of the package of motor cycling measures introduced under the Transport Act 1981.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I propose to issue a discussion paper shortly and to invite the views of all interested organisations and individuals. Copies of the paper will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of complaints he receives on motor cycle noise relate to unmodified standard motor cycles and motor cycles with modified or illegal replacement exhaust systems, respectively.

Mr. David Mitchell [pursuant to the answer, 24 July 1986]: The information is not available. People who complain about noisy motor cycles do not say whether they are modified or not. As lower noise limits for vehicles with four or more wheels begin to take effect, unmodified standard motor cycles complying with the current limits will become more prominent and more likely to give rise to complaint. That is why we need tighter limits for new machines as well as better enforcement to deter illegal modifications.

London Airports (Price Regulation)

Mr. Couchman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what are the Government's proposals for price regulation at the British Airport Authority's London airports.

Mr. Moore: In January 1986 the then Secretary of State for Transport appointed National Economic Research Associates (NERA) to assist in the development of a price regulation formula. I have today published its report. This endorses the approach outlined in the Airports Policy White Paper (Cmnd. 9542) that airport charges should not be allowed to increase by more than the rate of inflation less some fixed amount, x, representing a targeted increase in productivity.

This system of price regulation will support the aims for privatisation by providing real incentives for private sector management to increase efficiency. It will also provide reassurance for airport users against abuse of monopoly.

The price regulation formula will form a key condition of the initial permissions to levy charges that the Secretary of State will grant to each of the British Airports Authority's London airports under Part IV of the Airports Act 1986.

There will be an overall RPI-x formula applying across the BAA's London airport system, allowing some flexibility for adjustment of charges between the three airports. However, the Government intend to place some contraints on this rebalancing between Heathrow and Gatwick in order to provide some assurance to the users of these airports. It will not place any constraints on price rises at Stansted (other than the system-wide formula), since the BAA will need to raise charges there to a level which reflects the cost of the new development, in order that a proper return is achieved on the new investment and losses are progressively eliminated.

NERA queries the need to make Stansted subject to price regulation in the first quinquennium. But in view of the concerns which have been expressed about Stansted I consider it appropriate to designate Stansted, making it subject to mandatory conditions.

The Government recognises the case for some restraint on the levels of off-peak charges, as recommended by NERA, and will consider whether this should be included in the initial price regulation conditions.

Airport charges will be regulated by reference to an average of a number of independent forecasts of the Retail Price Index for the forthcoming year. Any inadequacies in the forecast will be corrected when out-turn figures are available. After weighing NERA's views about the application of the formula, I have concluded that the RPIx limit should apply to the average revenue yield per passenger: this flexible approach avoids creating incentives to price inefficiency which might be offered by the alternative approach of applying the formula to a basket of revenue-weighted tariff items.

The determination of the numerical value of x will take account of a wide range of factors including forecasts of traffic growth and the costs of developments to meet that growth. The Government are minded to accept NERA's recommendation that x should not vary with traffic growth during the quinquennium.

Since NERA completed its report, the BAA has suggested that the formula should be adjusted if it has to incure additional costs as a result of increased national security standards at airports. Because changes in security standards are outside the BAA's control the Government accept in principle that an adjustment is reasonable, provided the BAA has a continued incentive to implement security standards economically. The Government are therefore minded to agree that the permitted rate of change of charges should include an adjustment in respect of verified cost changes brought about by variations in the security standards imposed by Government.

Details of the first price formula, including the value of x, will be announced nearer to the time of flotation of BAA.

Copies of the NERA report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Civil Aviation Authority

Mr. Norris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what objectives he has set for the new chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority.

Mr. Moore: I wrote yesterday to Mr. Christopher Tugendhat with a statement of his objectives as chairman of the authority. I have placed a copy of my letter in the Library.

Trunk Roads (Blight Notices)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many blight notices have been issued as a consequence of proposed trunk roads in London during the last five years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: 106 have been accepted by the Department during the last 5 years in connection with proposed new trunk roads in London.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many London properties under (a) draft compulsory purchase order and (b) blight notice as a consequence of proposed trunk roads are already owned by his Department; and what is their net market value;

(2) what is his estimate of the net market value of London properties under (a) draft compulsory purchase order and (b) blight notice as a consequence of proposed trunk roads; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Three hundred and sixty nine blight notices have been accepted by the Department to date in connection with proposed new trunk roads in London; of these 28 relate to properties which were under draft compulsory purchase order. All of these properties are either owned by the Department or in the process of being acquired. We hope soon to have details from the London Residuary Body of the properties originally acquired by the GLC in connection with Rochester way relief road. Estimates of the current market value of all these properties are not available.

Trunk Roads (Compulsory Purchase Orders)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many properties in London are in receipt of draft compulsory purchase orders as a consequence of proposed trunk roads.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Two hundred and forty eight complete properties and part of the curtilages of a further 60 are currently included in draft compulsory purchase orders for proposed new trunk roads in London.

Property Acquisitions

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many properties have been served with (a) compulsory purchase orders or (b) blight notices as a consequence of improvements to the north circular road proposed by his Department; what estimate he has of their net market value; and how many are already owned by his Department.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Six hundred and ninety two properties are currently included in draft compulsory orders relating to proposed improvements or extensions to the north circular road and a further 197 are the subject of made orders. The Department owns 857 properties required for these improvements, nearly all of which were acquired on acceptance of blight notices.

Valuation figures are not readily available in the form requested. Land acquisition costs for all north circular road proposed improvements are currently estimated at £44·79 million.

Community Programme

Mr. Prescott asked the Secretary of State for Transport what plans exist for new community programme opportunities to be provided by his Department.

Mr. Moore: I intend to promote new community programme opportunities for carrying out environmental improvements on motorways and trunk roads.

Road Tunnel (Plumstead)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated construction cost of the proposed road tunnel in Plumstead announced on 18 July; and what was the estimated construction cost of the proposed viaduct which it supersedes.

Mr. Moore: Sixteen million two hundred thousand pounds and £8·1 million respectively at 1984 prices.

A120 (Dualling)

Sir Julian Ridsdale asked the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for extending the A120 dualling so as to complete the section from near Great Bromley to the ports of Parkeston and Harwich.

Mr. Moore: There are no current plans. However the future needs of the A120 form part of a study of east-west routes across the region which the county councils concerned are carrying out on our behalf. They are due to report in September.

Pilotage

Sir Julian Ridsdale asked the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of savings to be achieved from his Department's proposals on the reorganisation of pilotage, showing the savings to be derived from each of the main proposals.

Mr. Moore: I expect the proposed transfer of responsibility for pilotage to the harbour authorities to lead to the more efficient use of pilots, the removal of compulsory pilotage where it is not needed on safety grounds, and economies in administration and operation as a result of the integration of pilotage with other port services. The savings that are achieved will depend on decisions made by the harbour authorities in the light of local circumstances, but there is widespread agreement that very substantial reductions in the number of pilots required can be achieved, with accompanying important savings in cost.

French Ports (Investment)

Sir Julian Ridsdale asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to how much the French Government have contributed to investment costs in France's six major ports over the last 10 years.

Mr. Moore: I do not have this information. We are seeking within the Community to ensure that such information should be ascertainable from the published accounts of Community ports.

Motorway Service Areas

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether, in the light of increased traffic flow, he intends to review the approximate 30-mile interval between motorway service areas.

Mr. David Mitchell: It remains general policy to provide motorway service areas at approximately 30-mile intervals, but to consider the provision of additional sites in between wherever traffic demand appears to justify it.

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has for an additional motorway service area on the M11 north of Birchanger near Stansted.

Mr. David Mitchell: None.

M3 (Maintenance)

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on major works of maintenance on the M3 motorway between junctions 4 and 7; and for how long maintenance work has necessitated introduction of a contra-flow system for the years 1980-81 to 1985-86.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There have been no major works of maintenance on the M3 motorway between junctions 4 and 7 in the years 1980-81 to 1985-86; and there have been no occasions on which maintenance work has necessitated introduction of a contra-flow system.

Woolwich Ferry

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the number of days on which the Woolwich ferry service has been disrupted by mechanical or industrial problems between 1 April and 21 July, indicating the number of days on which the service was totally suspended.

Mr. Moore: 75, including 19 with no service.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will outline the nature and extent of the review of his Department's peacetime emergency plans following the Chernobyl disaster; whether, when completed, he intends to publish it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: The Department is playing its pat in the Government's examination of the impact of the Chernobyl incident for civil contingency planning.

In the light of this review, any changes to contingency plans will be notified to those involved.

Public Bodies

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a list of all the bodies in Wales to which he has the sole or joint responsibility for making appointments.

Mr. Moore: I am responsible for making appointments to the traffic area for South Wales and the Milford Haven conservancy board.

Greater Manchester PTA (Funding)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what account he is taking of the decision on the level of funding for dial-a-ride schemes in Greater London in determining the component for funding such schemes in Greater Manchester included in the 1987-88 expenditure limit for the Greater Manchester passenger transport authority; what assessment he has made of the level of expenditure of the authority for such services if funded on a similar per capita basis to that agreed for Greater London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The level of funding for dial-a-ride schemes outside Greater London is a matter for local authorities to decide, in the context of their overall priorities. In London the dial-a-ride scheme is funded by a nationalised industry, London Regional Trasnport. I am aware of Greater Manchester's proposals for special needs transport and these were carefully considered before determining the authority's expenditure level.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what account he has taken of the costs incurred by the Greater Manchester passenger transport authority in setting up the Initial Bus Company in determining that authority's expenditure level for 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: In determining Greater Manchester passenger transport authority's expenditure level for 1987-88, we took account of its total expenditure requirements, including the costs which may be incurred by the authority following the establishment of the Initial Bus Company. We will, of course, consider carefully any redetermination application which may be submitted by the authority, including any representations on such costs.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, in view of the time scale for decisions on the level of rail services in the area and in Cheshire and Derbyshire in 1988-89, he will make it his policy to give the Greater Manchester passenger transport authority notice by the end of the current year of the likely level of funds to be made available to it in that year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to my reply on 20 June to the hon. Member for Withington (Mr. Silvester), column 666.

Parked Coaches (Engines)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will seek to make it an offence for coaches parked in the street to run their engines for the purpose of maintaining heating or air conditioning, when there are no passengers on board and no journey is in progress.

Mr. David Mitchell: I am not aware that this practice causes any problems, and I have no plans to review the revelant regulations which permit a vehicle to be parked with its engine running if needed to operate ancillary equipment.

Midland Link Motorways

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on current responsibilities for emergency repairs to the midland link motorways.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The current responsibilities are as announced by the then Minister of State for Transport on 19 August 1985: Birmingham city council is the Department's agent for the surface maintenance of the midland links, including emergency repairs; and the structures below deck level remain the responsibility of the Department's consultants. Emergency repair work is being handled as normal under these arrangements.

Greater London Council

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport what amounts are still outstanding for Government grants to the Greater London council from his Department.

Mr. Moore: I am aware of no outstanding amounts.

British Rail

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to meet the chairman of British Rail to discuss improvements to rail services in the north-west; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: We have no present plans to discuss further improvements. It is anticipated that significant transport benefits will flow from the new Windsor link in Manchester and from the planned introduction of the new fast sprinter trains between Blackpool and Manchester.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the current extent, frequency, nature and mode of transport, of nuclear spent fuel transportation in the United Kingdom, including such material from sources in other countries.

Mr. Moore: The arrangements for ensuring safety in the transport of all radioactive materials including spent fuel, to, from or within the United Kingdom are based on the International Atomic Energy Agency regulations which do not depend for their effectiveness on the choice of route or mode of transport. Accordingly, my Department does not collect details of individual movements. Spent fuel is regularly transported, normally by rail, between power stations and BNFL's reprocessing plant at Sellafield. Similar consignments from overseas are brought by ship to Barrow, although other ports are occasionally used. Smaller quantities of spent fuel from various research and experimental reactors are also transported to Sellafield, mainly by road.

National Holidays Ltd.

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer of 15 July, Official Report, columns 458-9, what assurances he received when giving approval to the sale of the National Bus Company's subsidiary National Holidays Ltd. to a subsidiary of the Pleasurama Group, Smith Happiways Ltd. regarding the period of time during which all the present management and employees would be employed.

Mr. Moore: The Pleasurama Group has indicated to the National Bus Company that it is not its intention within the foreseeable future to make any significant alteration to the number of employees within National Holidays.

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the reply of 15 July, Official Report, columns 458-9, by what percentage the management and staff bid for the sale of the National Holidays subsidiary of the National Bus Company was below the accepted bid.

Mr. Moore: This is a matter of commercial confidence between the parties concerned.

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport what were the capital assets of National Holidays Ltd., a subsidiary of the National Bus Company, on 15 July; what they were in July 1984 and 1985; and which firms bid for National Holidays Ltd.

Mr. Moore: National Holidays' audited accounts show net assets of £297,000 at 31 December 1985 and £168,000 at 31 December 1984. Audited mid-year figures are not available.

In addition to Smiths Happiways and the management team, two other parties submitted bids. Tenderers are given assurances by NBC's advisers that their identities will not be disclosed.

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport on what date the first tender was called for regarding the sale of National Holidays Ltd.; what procedure of tender was undertaken; on what date the successful tenderer bid; and at what price the successful tender was accepted.

Mr. Moore: I understand that initial bids were invited by 18 April 1986 from parties who had expressed a firm interest in National Holidays Ltd, and that following negotiations the successful bid from Pleasurama plc was made on 25 June. The sale price was £2·3 million.

Roads

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total sum spent on the repair and maintenance of roads within the county of Avon for the years 1979-80 and 1985-86, in actual prices and in real terms.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The total sums spent on the repair and maintenance of roads within the county of Avon for the years 1979-80 and 1984-85 are given below. The figures for 1985-86 are not yet available.

	1979-80 £ million cash	*1984-85 prices	194-85 £ million cash
Local Roads	9·4	15·2	15·5
Trunk Roads	1·8	2·9	†5·9
Total	11·2	18·1	21·4

* 1984-85 prices calculated using Highway Maintenance Price Index.

† Includes £3·1 million on Severn Bridge.

Nuclear Materials (Transport)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether trains transporting nuclear materials through Leeds are scheduled to be held up for any length of time within Leeds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The timing and routeing of radioactive consignments are a matter for British Rail. I am informed that irradiated nuclar fuel from power stations would not normally travel via Leeds. Low-level radioactive materials may sometimes travel via Leeds as routine freight consignments.

Spare Wheels

Mr. Conlan asked the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he will take to ensure that owners of secondhand vehicles without manufacturers' manuals, equipped with temporary-use spare wheels, are aware of the restrictions on the use of such units.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Temporary use spare wheels/tyres can be readily recognised as they are different in size from the standard wheels/tyres. Most are marked with the 50 mph speed limitation.

Department of Transport press notices issued on 21 March 1986 and 18 July 1986 drew attention to the speed restriction.

I do not envisage further measures to deal with the rare possibility of some old second-hand vehicles being fitted with tyres not marked to show the 50 mph limitation.

National Bus Company

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the procedure adopted in asking for tenders; and what type of tendering is done for the privatisation of the various subsidiary projects involved in implementing the National Bus Company's disposal programme.

Mr. Moore: Sale of NBC subsidiaries will generally involve press and other marketing to elicit expressions of interest; the invitation of tenders from those who confirm their interest; and negotiations with those who submit firm offers which in NBC's judgment would form the basis for a successful sale.

Night Flights (London)

Mr. Higgins asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to what aircraft flew over London prior to landing at Heathrow between 5.20 am and 5.40 am on Thursday 24 July; what is the minimum height above ground, as opposed to sea, level at which aircraft are allowed to fly when passing over, or south of, central London; if he will make it his policy to restrict night flights into London airports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: During the period mentioned three aeroplanes flew over central London before landing at Heathrow; a Lufthansa Boeing 737 and two British Airways Boeing 747s. All aeroplanes overflying built-up areas normally have to be at a minimum height of 1,500 feet above ground level.

Night flights into and out of the London airports have been restricted for many years. Restrictions have existed in their present form since 1978. They were last reviewed in 1981 and are now under review again.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Official Report

Mr. Viggers asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will state the average hour of day at which the Official Report reaches those hon. Members who have home delivery.

Mr. Biffen: Nine am.

Visitors

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Lord Privy Seal if, pursuant to his answer of 22 July, he will raise with the Services Committee the possibility of reducing the extent to which visitors to the Palace of Westminster increase the costs of running the Palace by a system of voluntary contributions from visitors.

Mr. Biffen: I have no present plans to do so.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Comprehensive Education

Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of secondary schoolchildren now receive their education in comprehensive schools.

Mr. Dunn: In January 1985, 91 per cent. of pupils aged 11 and over in the maintained schools sector were receiving non-selective education in middle or comprehensive secondary schools.

School Organisation

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to issue a new circular on school organisation.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend hopes to issue a draft for formal consultation with the partners in the education service shortly. The plan is to issue the final document towards the end of the year.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about preparations for the general certificate of secondary education.

Mr. Chris Patten: The first GCSE courses start in schools next term. A thorough programme of training and preparation for all teachers of the GCSE has been taking place throughout this year and will continue over the next year or so. This has enabled teachers to prepare for the first examination courses with the guidance of the GCSE syllabuses available in schools. Substantial resources have already been directed, by local authorities and the Government, to books and equipment for the GCSE, amounting on average to £14,000 per school in this financial year alone.

Higher Education

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out in tabular form the proportion of total recurrent income derived by the public sector institutions of higher education from central Government, local government and private sources of finance, respectively, in each year from 1970 to the latest available date.

Mr. Walden: The information requested is not available. The majority of public sector institutions of higher education are maintained by local authorities to which the Government pay a block grant in support of expenditure on all services.

Students (Financial Support)

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science by how much in real terms the standard student grant for a home student on a first degree course has moved over the periods 1979 to 1983 and 1983 to the latest available date.

Mr. Walden: Between the academic years 1979-80 and 1983-84 the main elsewhere rate of grant fell by 8 per cent. in real terms, and by a further 4 per cent. between 1983-84 and 1985-86.

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will estimate what proportion of student financial support is now provided by private loans and overdraft facilities.

Mr. Walden: No.

Young Children and 16-Year-Olds

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give, for England, the participation rate of three and four-year-olds and the percentage of 16-year-olds staying on at school in 1979 and 1986.

Mr. Dunn: The participation rate of three and four-year-olds in school and the percentage of 16-year-olds staying on at maintained schools in England in 1979 and 1986 are given below:

	January 1979	*January 1986
	Per cent.	Per cent.
Participation rate of under 5's†	37·0	43·0
Percentage of 16-year-olds staying on at school‡	24·4	26·9

* The figures given for January 1986 are provisional.

† Percentage of under 5's in nursery schools and nursery classes and infant classes in primary schools expressed as a percentage of the estimated 3 and 4-year-old population.

‡ Percentage of 16-year-olds remaining at school expressed as a percentage of the 15-year-olds one year earlier.

University of London (UGC Grant)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the recurrent grant from the University Grants Committee to each of the university of London's postgraduate medical and dental institutes for each year since 1979 in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The University Grants Committee makes a block grant to the university of London. The funds allocated to the university's constituent schools and institutes are determined by the university court from within the total it has available.

Nursery Teachers and Nurses

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the ratio of nursery teachers and nursery nurses to children in nursery schools and nursery classes attached to infant schools provided by local education authorities at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Dunn: In January 1985 the ratio of qualified teachers and nursery assistants (class I) to children in nursery schools and nursery classes attached to maintained primary schools in England was 1:10·8. Information for 1986 will be available shortly.

Children's Day Places

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list the number and type of children's day places provided by each local education authority and the percentage of children in the relevant age group catered for at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Dunn: Information on day nurseries provided by local authority social services departments for children under five is collected by the Department of Health and Social Security. Figures for numbers of premises and places in each LEA in England are given in "Children's Day Care Facilities at 31 March 1984, England" (A/F/84/6), copies of which are available in the Library.

Pre-school Provision

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list for each local education authority in England at the latest date for which figures are available the number and proportion of three and four-year-olds attending (a) nursery classes, (b) nursery schools, (c) play groups, and (d) total pre-school provision; and what are the waiting lists in each case.

Mr. Dunn: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

School Meals

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many local education authorities have still failed to take up resources made available under the Education, Grants and Awards Act 1984, for the supervision of school meals.

Mr. Dunn: Out of 97 LEAs in England, only 11 have so far made no bid for education support grant resources for midday supervision. All these authorities have indicated informally that they expect to submit bids shortly. One authority has withdrawn its bid.

Student Grants

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the value of the student grant for each year since 1979, including 1987's award, at 1979 prices.

Mr. Walden: The value of the main elsewhere rate of grant, expressed at 1979 price levels and adjusted to take account of the change in travel arrangements from 1984-85, is as follows:

1980-81	1,234
1981-82	1,189
1982-83	1,152
1983-84	1,140
1984-85	1,126
1985-86	1,096
1986-87	*1,095

* Estimated

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science why the extra weeks allowance for students is lower than the average amount per week of the ordinary grant.

Mr. Walden: The difference arises because the basic student grant makes provision for expenditure on certain items, namely clothing and books, which can reasonably be expected to last for the whole year. Students would receive a double subsidy from public funds if the extra weeks allowance also provided for these items.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the equipment grant for medical students in their clinical years for the forthcoming academic year; and what was the comparable figure in the last five years.

Mr. Walden: The special equipment grant for medical students is intended to cover the course as a whole and is not an annual entitlement. Students whose courses begin on or after 1 September 1986 will not be eligible for a special equipment grant. Students who commenced their courses before 1 September 1986, which should include students beginning their clinical studies in the forthcoming academic year, will be able to continue to claim the special equipment grant up to a maximum of £90.

The comparable figures for the special equipment grant over the last five years are as follows:

Academic year	£
1981-82	70
1982-83	75
1983-84	80

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if the review of student grants includes arrangements for the reimbursement of travel costs, particularly those incurred during term time.

Mr. Walden: The review will cover all aspects of financial support for students studying at first degree or equivalent level.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any estimate of the proportion of students who do not receive their full parental portion of the grant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: No. My Department does not collect information on the payments made by parents to their student children. We have seen evidence however, to suggest that non-payment is less widespread than in the mid-seventies.

Public Bodies

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a list of all the bodies in Wales to which he has sole or joint responsibility for making appointments.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has responsibility for only two appointments to bodies in Wales. These are one member of the council of the university of Wales institute of science and technology and one member of the council of St. David's University college, Lampeter.

Youth Service

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to the answer of 23 April to the hon. Member for Bradford North, Official Report, columns 150-152 how many local education authorities have still to reply to the Department of Education and Science circular 1/85 about the youth service; and what steps are being taken to ensure that they do so.

Mr. Dunn: Six local education authorities have yet to respond substantively and each is now being asked to do so as a matter of urgency.

Schools (Governing Bodies)

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to (a) which governing bodies of schools in England and Wales allow student governors under 18 years of age to participate in the business of the governing body and to sit as part of that body and (b) as to which governing bodies of further education colleges in England and Wales allow student governors under 18 years to do likewise.

Mr. Dunn: This information is not collected by the Department.

Coventry Lanchester Polytechnic

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science why the hon. Member for Warwick and Leamington has not received any reply to his letters of 1 May and 18 July on behalf of the Coventry Lanchester polytechnic.

Mr. Walden: I replied to my hon. Friend on 23 July.

Public Expenditure Survey

Mr. Neale asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has received advice from the Advisory Board for the Research Councils in relation to the public expenditure survey for 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I am publishing today the advice I have received from the board. Copies are available in the Library. This advice will be considered carefully in discussions on the 1986 survey and I will inform the board of my conclusions in due course.

Examinations

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what evidence he has about the relationship between examination results and the organisation of schools in local authorities on a selective basis.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The statistical analysis carried out by the Department and published in statistical bulletin 13/84 demonstrated a strong relationship between examination results achieved by pupils at schools in each local authority and social background data for each authority. When these factors are taken into account, the analysis showed a slight positive but statistically significant correlation between some of the measures of examination results and the proportion of pupils attending grammar schools.

Social background factors accounted for nearly 70 per cent. of the relationship with examination results observed in the statistical analysis whilst the proportion of pupils attending grammar schools accounted for some 1 to 2 per cent. for three out of the six measures of examination results. After allowing for social background, the statistical analysis indicated that a local authority with 15 per cent. of its pupils in grammar schools could expect 2 per cent. more of its pupils attaining five or more higher grades at O level/CSE than a local education authority organising its schools wholly on a comprehensive basis. The analysis showed no such statistical relationship in connection with pupils with six or more lower grade O-level/CSE results or with one or more A level passes.

Interpretation of this analysis needs to be treated with caution because:—

(a) Given the dominant influence of social background factors, the analysis is dependent on the choice and accuracy of measurement of social background factors.

(b) The results of a statistical analysis should not necessarily be taken to imply a causal relationship between the two factors for which a correlation has been identified. Social background factors do not determine examination attainment and other studies have shown that this varies markedly for children from similar backgrounds attending different schools. Similarly the small positive correlation between certain examination results and the proportion of pupils attending grammar schools does not necessarily imply an advantage for schools organised on a selective basis. It might, for example, arise from other features of grammar schools which may also be present in some comprehensive schools.

(c) The analysis was conducted at local authority level because data on social background is not readily available below this level of aggregation. The analysis did not explore the variations in examination results either within or between individual schools, or factors which might bear upon such variations.

Other evidence available to me and based on similar analyses at local authority level is not inconsistent with the Department's analysis. In view of the uncertainties over interpretation, my right hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, North-East (Sir K. Joseph) announced in 1984 that he was willing to consider proposals for further research designed to examine in more detail the factors affecting performance in individual schools. Some proposals have been received and are under consideration within the Department.

Inventions

Mr. Maclean asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress has been made since his predecessor's statement of 14 May 1985, Official Report, columns 97-100, over the exploitation of inventions arising from work funded by research councils.

Mr. Walden: Universities were invited to make proposals for new arrangements to exploit research council funded inventions on 14 May 1985. The majority have submitted accounts of their proposed arrangements. In most cases these accounts have satisfied a scrutiny group set up to ensure that there are suitable arrangements in place. The group under the chairmanship of the secretary of the Science and Engineering Research Council includes representatives of the five research councils, my Department, the Department of Trade and Industry, the Treasury, the University Grants Committee, the National Advisory Body for Local Authority Higher Education, the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals and the Committee of Directors of Polytechnics.

Authorisations to operate the new arrangements have recently been issued to 33 universities and university colleges. In the first instance authorisations have been given for three years. Annual reports to research councils will be required on the working of the arrangements in each institution. Apart from the 33 recently authorised, most of the other universities are still discussing their proposals with the scrutiny group.

Similar invitations were extended early in 1986 to polytechnics in inner London, Scottish central institutions and to local education authorities in England and Wales in respect of other polytechnics and colleges in receipt of research council funding.

The research councils are also developing arrangements for exploiting their in-house research inventions, consonant with the policy announced on 14 May 1985. These proposals are part of a pattern of measures designed to give greater financial incentives and to reinforce the autonomy of individual institutions. The Government are glad to see the keen response in this case.

Ethnic Statistics

Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has received the report of the working group on the collection of education statistics on an ethnic basis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have received the report of this working group and I accept its main recommendations. These are that the collection of ethnic statistics of school pupils would be of great benefit to schools and local education authorities as a basis for making appropriate provision and for monitoring achievement; that authorities should institute systems for the collection of information which parents and pupils provide on a voluntary basis on ethnic origin, mother tongues and religious affiliations; and that authorities should consult the local communities about arrangements for ensuring confidentiality. I cannot however accept the recommendation that the Government should provide extra funds for this purpose. The cost to local education authorities should be very small.

In addition, I propose that this information should be aggregated centrally by my Department in order to assist me to fulfil my responsibility to secure appropriate education for all pupils. The collection of these aggregate statistics will not involve the provision to my Department of data in a form which would enable any individual to be identified.

I intend shortly to issue a draft circular for consultation. I have placed copies of the working group's report in the Library.

O and A-level Results

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will initiate an inquiry into the reasons why secondary schoolchildren in England secure, on average, significantly less success in O and A-level examinations by comparison with children in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten [pursuant to his reply, 26 June 1986, c. 249-50]: Information drawn from the school leavers surveys of England and Northern Ireland is as follows:

School Leavers
England and Northern Ireland 1983-84

	England	Per cent. Northern Ireland
1+A-level pass	17·2	22·5
No A-level pass but:—
5+ Higher grades [1] at O/CSE	10·7	8·7

Schools Leavers Surveys, England and Northern Ireland. Data on examinations for England is subject to sampling error.

Notes
1. Higher grades defined as a O-levels grades A-C and CSE grade 1.
2. Other grades defined as O-level grades D, E and CSE grades 2-5.

These data do not include any CSE, O-level or A-levels achievements by young people after leaving school. In England many 16 to 19-year-olds study in FE colleges rather than schools: the proportion is smaller in Northern Ireland. Taking into account achievements in both schools and FE colleges, it is estimated that 20 per cent. of young people in England attain 1 or more A-level passes compared with 23 per cent. in Northern Ireland. A range of other qualifications are, of course taken by 16 to 19-year-olds.

Below A-level, the figures for schools show that about 38 per cent. of English pupils achieve one or more higher grades passes compared with about 34 per cent. in Northern Ireland.

Such comparisons between examination results, whether at CSE, O-level or A-level, are, however, invalid unless other factors are taken into account.

My right hon. Friend has no plans to initiate an inquiry. We have said that we will consider research proposals on the factors affecting pupil performance.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of secondary schoolchildren in England and Wales left school without any O or A-level passes for the most recent year for which figures are available, and what were the comparable totals in each of the previous five years.

Mr. Dunn [pursuant to his reply, 26 June, c. 250]: Information for England is give in the table. Information for Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

THE ARTS

Newspapers (Ban)

Mr. Greenway asked the Minister for the Arts what action he proposes to take over the continued banning of News International newspapers by some local authorities from their public libraries.

Mr. Luce: My inquiries have shown that five authorities against whom complaints have been made have never imposed or have now lifted a ban, 13 are maintaining a ban and two have not yet replied. I am not satisfied. I therefore propose to take the first step in the formal exercise of my default powers under the Public Libaries and Museums Act 1964. I have instructed my officials to write on my behalf to the 15 authorities from whom I have not yet received satisfactory replies. The letter clarifies the legal position, advises all authorities which are or may be in breach of the law to reconsider their position and requests the relevant documentary evidence. I am placing the text of the letter in the Library of the House.

HOME DEPARTMENT

District and Metropolitan Borough Councils

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report, for each county, the average number of electors per councillor in district or metropolitan borough councils.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested for each county in England and Wales is given in the table, based on the numbers of local government electors on the 1986 electoral registers as shown in "Electoral Statistics — Local Government 1986" (OPCS monitor EL86/1).

Sri Lankans

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Sri Lankans have arrived in the United Kingdom without visas since the mandatory visa requirement was imposed; how many of them have (a) applied for political asylum, (b) been granted asylum, (c) been refused asylum, (d) been detained, (e) been given temporary admission and (f) been returned to third countries.

Mr. Waddington: I regret that information in the form requested is not available.

Immigration

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications from (a) husbands, (b) fiancés, (c) wives and (d) fiancées have been (i) decided, (ii) granted and (iii) refused at each post in the Indian sub-continent in each quarter since January 1985; how many such applications in each category and for each quarter were refused (1) wholly and (2) partly because of the primary purpose rules; what was the refusal rate in each instance; and what percentage of those refusals was (x) wholly and (y) partly on primary purpose grounds.

Mr. Waddington: Information for the whole of the Indian subcontinent on husbands and fiancé(e)s granted or refused entry clearance to the United Kingdom is given in table 9 of the quarterly Home Office statistical bulletin "Control of Immigration:Statistics—First Quarter 1986" (issue 15/86). Corresponding information on wives in 1985 is given in table 7 of "Control of Immigration: Statistics, United Kingdom, 1985" (Cmnd. 9863). The information available centrally indicates that no wife or fiancée applying in the subcontinent for entry clearance to the United Kingdom was refused solely or partly on primary purpose grounds in 1985 and the first quarter of 1986. With regard to the other information requested, I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many British overseas citizens from India have (a) arrived in the United Kingdom, (b) been refused entry and (c) been removed since June 1984.

Mr. Waddington: The available information relates to the numbers of British overseas citizens, British protected persons and British subjects under the British Nationality Act 1981 who are (a) admitted and (b) removed from the United Kingdom after having been refused leave to enter. Calendar year figures are published in the annual Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics, United Kingdom". Between June 1984 and December 1985, 26,100 such persons were admitted into the United Kingdom and 60 were removed after being refused entry. No information on the numbers admitted in 1986 is yet available but 19 were removed in the first quarter of 1986. A reliable breakdown by country of origin cannot be provided.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were detained (a) in total, (b) overnight excluding Queen's building and secondary examination areas, (c) overnight in Queen's building and (d) overnight in secondary examination areas in (i) 1984, (ii) 1985 and (iii) the first quarter of 1986; and if he will publish a table showing the nationality of the people so detained in each category and for each period.

Mr. Waddington: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children have been detained overnight in (a) Harmondsworth detention centre, (b) secondary examination areas and (c) any other authorised places of detention in (i) 1985 and (ii) the first quarter of 1986.

Mr. Waddington: The available information is as follows:

Children under 17 detained overnight in 1985

Location	Number
Harmondsworth	223
Secondary examination areas	Nil
Other authorised places of detention	26

Information for 1986 is not yet available.

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what disciplinary action is taken against immigration officers for breaches of the code of practice in after-entry cases; what guidance is given as to the legal status, as evidence, ascribed to statements obtained from suspects by immigration officers in breach of the code; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I will reply as soon as possible.

Citizenship

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many grants of citizenship for (a) registration with entitlement, (b) adult discretionary registration, (c) registration of minors and (d) naturalisation, the nationality division expected to process during 1985-86 when the budget for that year was set.

Mr. Waddington: The information available is as follows:

Forecast of citizenship applications to be granted 1985-86

	Number
Registration	32,060
Naturalisation	19,275

Note:
Separate forecasts are not made for each type of registration.

Sunday Trading

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the Government's current policy towards Sunday trading;

(2) whether the Government are prepared to support the partial deregulation of Sunday trading;

(3) what consideration the Government have given to partial deregulation of Sunday trading.

Mr. Mellor: In the light of recent events, the Government have no present plans for further legislation on this matter. We shall consider carefully any workable proposals for partial deregulation which attract widespread support.

Community Programme

Mr. Prescott asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans exist for new community programme opportunities to be provided by his Department.

Mr. Hurd: In October 1985 I announced an initiative to promote community programme opportunities in local crime prevention projects. At the end of May, 161 projects providing 5,055 places had been approved under the initiative. Proposals for further projects continue to be received. To help sustain this progress my Department is preparing a booklet, giving examples of the successful crime prevention projects which have been established using the community programme.

Public Sector Corruption Index

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the function of the public sector corruption index; how it operates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The public sector corruption index was set up in 1978 in response to a recommendation of the Royal Commission on standards of conduct in public life. The index is operated by staff of the Metropolitan police within the Metropolitan and City police company fraud department. It is provided as a common police service to forces to co-ordinate and supply information nationally on matters of corruption in the public sector.

Metropolitan and City Fraud Branch

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Metropolitan and City fraud branch was established; and what has been its joint establishment size, by rank.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Metropolitan and City police company fraud department was set up in 1946 with an establishment of three officers. The present establishment (excluding the City cheque squad, which is not engaged on company fraud work) is 219. The Commissioners of the Metropolitan and the City of London police consider that to give a breakdown of the establishment by rank could impair the department's operational effectiveness.

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what has been the budget for the Metropolitan and City fraud branch for each year since 1979 under the following headings (a) uniformed and civilian staff, (b) administrative costs, (c) publicity and (d) central establishment costs and incidental costs incurred during investigations;

(2) what proportion of the total cost of the Metropolitan and City fraud branch is met by the Metropolitan and City police forces, respectively.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I will write to the hon. Member.

Fraud

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average number of officers by rank allocated to fraud branch cases; how many staff days on average are required to deal with each case; what proportion of cases result in a successful prosecution; and if he will give these figures for each of the past seven years;

(2) what proportion of referrals for investigation by the Metropolitan and City fraud branch come from (a) City institutions, (b) members of the public, (c) companies registered outside the United Kingdom, (d) investigations into other cases, (e) the stock exchange and (f) the Bank of England.

Mr. Mellor: For the only information which is readily available, I would refer the hon. Member to the replies given to questions from the hon. Member for Thurrock (Dr. McDonald) on 27 March at column 550. I understand from the Commissioners of the Metropolitan and City of London police that it is not possible to provide further information save at disproportionate cost.

Prisons (Drugs)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has of drug traffickers smuggling cocaine and heroin through the customs and into prisons by carrying them in plastic charges secreted in their body orifices; and if he has any plans to strengthen the powers available to the police to require body searches in such cases.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Attempts are made from time to time by prisoners returning from home leave or by domestic visitors, to smuggle drugs into prison establishments by means of concealing them within their body orifices. The prison rules enable a prisoner to be given an intimate search if there is reason to suspect that he may be concealing drugs. If a visitor is suspected of attempting to smuggle drugs into a prison establishment it is normal practice for the prison authorities to ask the police to investigate the matter. The powers in section 55 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 for the police to require body searches were recently considered by Parliament and we have no plans to change them.

Questions about the evidence and manner of drug smuggling through the customs are for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Parliamentary Constituency Boundaries (Reviews)

Mr. Moate asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the timetable for the next full review of parliamentary constituency boundaries.

Mr. Mellor: The Parliamentary Boundary Commissions for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are required to review all the Parliamentary constituencies in their areas and submit a report to the appropriate Secretary of State not less than 10 or more than 15 years from the date of submission of their last report. Their next general reviews will therefore have to be completed between 1993 and 1998, except for the Northern Ireland review, which has to be completed between 1992 and 1997. This means that these reviews are unlikely to begin before 1990 at the earliest, the timetable thereafter being determined by the amount of work involved and the time required to comply with the procedures prescribed by the House of Commons (Redistribution of Seats) Acts 1949 to 1979.

Deer Poaching

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many firearms and shotgun certificates have been cancelled by courts in England and Wales under convictions for deer poaching in the last five years;

(2) what forfeitures have been ordered by courts in England and Wales under convictions for deer poaching in each of the last five years;

(3) how many persons have been charged with, and how many convicted of, offences under the Deer Act 1980; and what was the total amount of the penalties imposed in each year since enactment.

Mr. Mellor: The information readily available to me, which may be affected by variations in the completeness of recording, is given in the table. Corresponding information for 1985 is not yet available. No information is collected centrally on forfeitures or on cancellation of firearms and shotgun certificates following conviction under the Deer Act 1980.

Persons proceeded against at magistrates' courts in England and Wales for offences under the Deer Act 1980

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984

Fully suspended sentence	—	—	8	4	—
Unsuspended sentence	3	—	—	3	—

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is satisfied with the operation of the legislation relating to offences of poaching of deer in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Government have no plans for any changes to the present controls. Enforcement is the responsibility of the chief officers of police in the areas concerned.

Iranian Citizens (Asylum)

Mr. Portillo asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, further to his answer of 22 May, Official Report, column 263, what factors led him to determine the number of years to elapse before Iranians granted exceptional leave to enter or remain could be given indefinite leave; what period is in force for other asylum applicants granted exceptional leave; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The period of seven years was in accordance with recommendation 32 of the report of the Home Affairs Committee on refugees and asylum. The considerations which the Government took into account in accepting the recommendation are set out in paragraphs 102-105 of their reply (Cmnd. 9626) to the Committee's report.

House of Commons (Mass Lobby)

Mr. Hayward asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 17 July, to the hon. Member for Kingswood, if the figure for the number of police man hours involved in policing the mass lobby of the House of Commons of 8 July includes the time spent on the placing and removing of crash barriers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the crowd control barriers were set up and removed by members of the Metropolitan police civil staff and that no overtime was incurred.

Hong Kong

Sir Patrick Wall asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department which categories of people now in Hong Kong will be permitted to enter Britain for settlement on the handover of the colony to the People's Republic of China.

Mr. Waddington: Besides those with the right of abode in the United Kingdom, who are thus entitled to come here, and those meeting the requirements of the immigration rules, former service men in Hong Kong who served in the defence of Hong Kong in the second world war, together with, at the discretion of the Secretary of State, certain other very limited numbers of people who have been exposed to special factors and considerations, will be admitted both before and after 1997.

Sir Patrick Wall asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has of the numbers of inhabitants of Hong Kong who will have the right of entry into Great Britain.

Mr. Waddington: It is estimated that there are some 15,000 people in Hong Kong who have the right of abode in the United Kingdom and thereby have the right to enter this country.

Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1986

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the final estimate of the cost to public funds of the requirements of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act during 1986; and what has been the cost since 1 January.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I will write to my hon. Friend about such information as is available.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he expects the review following Chernobyl of emergency arrangements for peacetime disasters, and the potential rôle for civil defence in such disasters to be completed; and if this review will be published;

(2) if, in the light of the Chernobyl disaster, he intends to put resources into informing the public about the nature of radioactivity and simple precautions that they could take in the event of a future nuclear accident;

(3) if he will detail the specific ways in which the introduction of the Civil Protection in Peacetime Act has increased the capacity of local authorities to act effectively, if faced with the contingency of a peacetime Chernobyl-type nuclear disaster in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Government's review of emergency arrangements in the light of Chernobyl including public information and the rôle of local authorities is in hand. It is to soon to say what conclusions will be reached or how they will be presented.

Nuclear Power Stations (Hostilities)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department has carried out any studies on the effects of British nuclear power stations being targeted in a situation of hostilities.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No. I would refer the hon. Member to the guidance on the Government's planning assumptions in section 2 of the emergency planning guidance to local authorities; a copy is in the Library.

Community Radio

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has made any assessment of the implications for the incidence of pirate radio of his decision not to proceed with an experiment in community radio; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: There is at this stage no evidence that the decision not to proceed with the community radio experiment has led to a significant increase in the incidence of unlicensed broadcasting, the detection and prevention of which are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. The issue raised by the possible introduction of community radio are to be addressed in the Green Paper covering radio broadcasting in the round, which we intend to publish in the autumn. I hope that unlicensed broadcasting, which can have serious consequences, will not take place, and that those who want to see changes to the present arragements for radio will contribute to the discussions which the Green Paper is intended to stimulate.

Mr. Frank Skuse

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the cases in which the forensic scientist Mr. Frank Skuse gave evidence in the 10 years before his retirement.

Mr. Hurd: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Prisons

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any grades working within the prison service of his Department qualify for efficiency or performance bonuses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Civil Service performance bonus scheme has been applied throughout the prison department. The scheme applies to staff from grade 3 to grade 7 in the unified grading system and any departmental equivalents not already within the unified grading structure.

Civil Defence

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when was the most recent study carried out by his Department into evacuation in wartime and the likely efficacy of the Government's civil defence policy; and if he has any plans for future studies.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We keep this matter under continuous review.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if United States Government representatives will be involved in liaising on details of the implications of the United States-United Kingdom lines of communication agreement for the forthcoming home defence exercise in region 10, to be staged in November.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This agreement does not come within the scope of the exercise.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for future regional civil defence or home defence exercises involving local authorities and regional emergency committees.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a Question from the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) on 30 June at columns 369-70. There are no specific plans at present for subsequent exercises, but we intend that as planning progresses exercises will be a regular activity for these organisations.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is satisfied with the progress of the construction of the home defence headquarters for region 81, North Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Yes. A site has been chosen, although construction has not yet started.

Scientific Advisers

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to replace his Department's 1977 training manual for scientific advisers.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This is under consideration.

Police (Civil Defence)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he is satisfied with the procedures for civil defence and home defence planning and training in the police forces; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he is satisfied with the role of the Association of Chief Police Officers in civil defence and home defence planning and training in the police forces; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he is satisfied with the liaison between the armed forces and the police forces over civil defence and home defence planning and training; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he will make a statement on Government research into the rôle of the police in civil defence and home defence; and if he will make a statement.;

(5) if he is satisfied with the liaison arrangements as regards contingency planning, preparations and training in the United Kingdom police forces and armed forces, and the relevant North Atlantic Treaty Organisation committees responsible for civil defence and home defence planning; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Yes, although no doubt, within the range of the hon. Member's questions, some increased satisfaction could be obtained.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to replace the 1975 document, "Police Manual of Home Defence."

Mr. Giles Shaw: The police manual of Home Defence was replaced by guidance to the police service on war emergency planning in 1985. A copy is in the Library.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, when he expects his information pack on the police role in civil defence to be completed; how he expects this document to be used in explaining the police rôle tc civil defence volunteers; what other functions he expects the pack to perform; and if it will be available to the general public.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Information on the role of the police in wartime will be included in the training package being prepared by a Home Office working party, and should be available in the autumn. The package will provide recommended material — in the form of instructional notes, student notes and other training aids—for use in the tuition of civil defence volunteers.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he has any plans for the police and armed forces to be involved in the training of civil defence volunteers.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We are satisfied with the present contribution made by the police; the armed forces are not involved.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those civil defence publications and other materials that his Department will make available in 1986; when they will be available; and what other materials he has plans for thereafter.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No detailed decisions have yet been taken, but we expect the material to be issued this year and will include: new public information material comprising a film and a booklet; a package of volunteer training material; guidance on the preparation of plans, the planned programme for implementation of the 1983 regulations and research findings.

It is too early to say what will be published thereafter.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many letters have been sent out to local authorities by Mr. Eric Alley, civil defence adviser to his Department in the period from 21 November 1985 to 1 July 1986; with which authorities Mr. Alley has engaged in correspondence; and if he will publish the text of all such correspondence in the Official Report.

Mr. Giles Shaw: In the period from 21 November 1985 to 1 July 1986 Mr. Alley, civil defence adviser, wrote approximately 66 letters to local authorities. The authorities with whom he has engaged in correspondence are listed below:—

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the voluntary organisations that Mr. Eric Alley, civil defence adviser to his Department has met in the period since his appointment, with which such bodies he has engaged in correspondence; and if he will publish the text of all correspondence in the Official Report.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Mr. Alley has met representatives of the WRVS and the National Voluntary Civil Aid Services. A meeting with the national joint emergency executive committee of the Red Cross and St. John is currently being arranged. He has corresponded with all three. It would not be appropriate to publish the texts.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to issue local authorities with guidance on the role of voluntary organisations in civil defence; and if he intends to identify specific such organisations.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Guidance is already included in emergency planning guidance to local authorities issued in 1985.

Nuclear Blast Simulations

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those nuclear blast simulations conducted in the United States of America during the last five years with which his Department's scientific research and development branch has been associated, the specific reason for its involvement, the cost of involvement in each simulation to his Department, and arrangements for similar involvement in forthcoming such simulations.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information requested is as follows:

Year of trial	Cost of United Kingdom involvement £
1981	20,000
1985	421,152

The purpose was to obtain information on the effects of nuclear explosions, and in particular to test and develop ways of achieving protection. A further trial is planned for 1987 but the cost is not yet known.

Public Bodies

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a list of all the bodies in Wales to which he has the sole or joint responsibility for making appointments.

Mr. Hurd: I have sole or joint responsibility for making appointments to the following bodies in Wales:

The Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales
The Welsh Fourth Channel Authority
Boards of visitors and local review commitees at prison department establishments located in Wales.

Greater London Council

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what amounts are still outstanding for Government grants to the Greater London council from his Department.

Mr. Hurd: Some grant claims are still awaited, but we estimate that £4·1 million will eventually be due to the London residuary body.

Fire Brigade Committee

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department why he has refused the request from the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority to set up a fire brigade committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Further representations on this matter have been received and the outcome will be communicated to the hon. Member in due course.

James Wallace

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will institute inquiries into the allegations about security contained in a letter recently sent to him by the hon. Member for Great Grimsby about the case of James Wallace.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I will reply as soon as possible.

Entry Refusals

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if, pursuant to his answer on 11 July, Official Report, columns 283-86, he will publish for each month and each nationality the percentage of total passenger traffic that the figures then provided represent;

(2) how many people were refused entry to the United Kingdom in each month between April 1984 and March 1985, inclusive; if he will publish those figures by nationality of those refused; and if he will show the percentage of total passenger traffic for each country and in each month which those figures represent.

Mr. Waddington: I will write to the hon. Member.

Police (Early Retirements)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the figures for early retirement through ill-health in ratio to force numbers for the police forces in Manchester, West Yorkshire, and Humberside for the latest available three years.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constables of Greater Manchester, West Yorkshire and Humberside that the numbers of ill-health retirements during the last three years, in ratio to the authorised establishments on 31 December of each year, are as follows:

Ratio of ill-health retirements to the authorised establishment

	1983	1984	1985
Greater Manchester	1:124	1:61	1:53
West Yorkshire	1:126	1:87	1:95
Humberside	1:247	1:99	1:79

Strip Search

Dr. Gilbert asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the right hon. Member for Dudley, East may expect a reply to the questions which he put in his letters of 14 March, 12 May and 24 June concerning one of his constituents who was strip searched, while suffering from a medical condition known to the authorities, at one of Her Majesty's prisons on a visit to her husband on 16 February.

Mr. Mellor: I will reply as soon as possible.

Sports Grounds (Safety)

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will designate under the Safety of Sports Grounds Act 1975 sports stadia and grounds in England and Wales to implement recommendation 2 of the final report of the Popplewell inquiry.

Mr. Hurd: I have made an order which will shortly be laid before the House to designate a total of 52 sports grounds in England and Wales where there is accommodation for more than 10,000 spectators, including 26 grounds used for association football, three used for rugby league, 16 used for rugby union and seven used for cricket. The effect will be to require the responsible persons in all cases to apply for safety certificates from the appropriate local authorities if they wish to admit spectators to the grounds. The order will come into operation on 23 August. Its provisions have been drawn to the attention of the clubs concerned.

Local Radio

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the scope for reducing financial burdens on independent local radio.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that the Independent Broadcasting Authority has now identified improvements in the method of apportioning expenditure between its television and radio branches which would have the effect of significantly reducing the costs which have to be recovered through independent local radio programme contractors' rental payments to the authority. I warmly welcome this outcome. The future of the regulatory arrangements for independent local radio and their costs will be considered in the Green Paper on radio which we propose to publish in the autumn.

Football Hooliganism

Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any further information about recent trends in the incidence of football hooliganism and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: The Association of Chief Police Officers for England and Wales has now collected figures for attendances and arrests at Football League matches, and ejections from grounds, during the 1985-86 season. The figures for divisions 1 and 2, with comparable statistics for the 1984-85 season, are as follows:

	Division 1			Division 2			Overall
	1984-85	1985-86	Percentage Change	1984-85	1985-86	Percentage Change	Percentage Change

The reduction in arrests was in fact slightly greater than I indicated in the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Bradford, North (Mr. Lawler) on 4 June at columns 564-65.

Temporary Admissions

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people were temporarily admitted to the United Kingdom (a) after refusal of leave to enter and (b) pending further examination in 1984; and if he will publish a table showing the nationality of those temporarily admitted in each category;

(2) how many people absconded after a grant of temporary admission in 1984.

Mr. Waddington: I will reply as soon as possible.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Metropolitan police oficers and civilians are engaged on traffic matters within force headquarters; and if he will provide a breakdown by branch and rank and describe the functions of each branch.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers and civilians are engaged on traffic matters locally in the Metropolitan police district area; and if he will provide a breakdown by rank and location.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 14 July 1986, c. 338]: Most police officers and civilians engaged full time on traffic enforcement matters outside force headquarters are assigned to B8 branch (traffic division) or to traffic warden centres. Details of the numbers and ranks are given below. There are some additional divisionally based staff, both police and civilian, dealing with traffic process work but no central record of their numbers is kept and details could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

ENVIRONMENT

Government Land Sales

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the sale of publicly owned land at preferential rates.

Mr. Tracey: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Woking (Council House Rents)

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what losses in central Government funding Woking borough council ratepayers can expect to suffer, following that council's decision to reduce council house rents by an average of 50p per week.

Mr. Waldegrave: The result could be a loss of block grant of up to £71,000 in 1986-87, and a substantially larger amount in a full year, although this will depend on whether the council make offsetting reductions in expenditure or balances.

Queen Elizabeth II School, Woking

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning Surrey county council's application for planning consent on the site of the former Queen Elizabeth II school in Woking; and if he will now call in this application for a public inquiry.

Mr. Tracey: Representations have been received from Woking borough council. The application is being referred to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State as a substantial departure from the approved development plan for the area. When the application has been received he will decide whether to call it in for his own decision and hold a public inquiry.

Liverpool City Council

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been allocated to Liverpool city council through the urban aid programme in each of the past seven years.

Mr. John Patten: The urban programme allocations to Liverpool city council in the past seven years, including grant aid made available through the Liverpool inner city partnership and the special Merseyside allocation have been as follows:

	£ million
1979-80	12·520
1980-81	16·000
1981-82	15·700
1982-83	22·264
1983-84	22·248
1984-85	21·116
1985-86	20·608

Special Protection Areas

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he is yet in a postion to list as special protection areas under EEC directive 79/409 on the conservation of wild birds (a) Morecambe Bay, (b) the Wash, (c) the Severn estuary, including the Taff/Ely estuary site of special scientific interest, (d) Chichester and Langstone harbours, (e) Duich Moss, (f) Islay, (g) the Solway firth and (h) the Mersey estuary.

Mrs. Rumbold: My officials are currently considering proposals from the Nature Conservancy Council for the listing of the Wash, Chichester and Langstone harbours, Duich Moss and the Mersey estuary sites. The listing of these sites involves a number of complex and sensitive issues which we shall try to resolve as quickly as possible.

We have as yet received no proposals from the Nature Conservancy Council concerning the listing of the remaining sites.

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those areas which have been notified as sites of special scientific interest by the Nature Conservancy Council and have subsequently been forwarded to him with the recommendation that they be listed as Ramsar sites or special protection areas; and if he will state the date on which those recommendations were received from the Nature Conservancy Council.

Mrs. Rumbold: My Department is currently considering the following sites of special scientific interest for listing as Ramsar sites or special protection areas.

Site	Date Received in DOE
The Wash (Ramsar/SPA)	16 March 1984
Loch Eye (Ramsar/SPA)	10 September 1985
Loch of Skene (Ramsar/SPA)	10 September 1985
Mersey Estuary (Ramsar/SPA)	28 November 1985

Homes Insulation

Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the allocation to St. Helens district council under the homes insulation scheme for 1986-87; and what is the percentage change from 1985-86;

(2) what was the total amount of money allocated to local authorities in England and Wales for loft insulation grants for 1986-87; and what percentage change this represents on 1985-86;

(3) what was the total amount of money allocated to each local authority in England and Wales for loft insulation grants in 1986-87 stating the percentage change in each case over 1985-86.

Sir George Young: The allocation of resources to local authorities in England for 1986-87 under the homes insulation scheme has not been completed, as allocations from the reserve continue to be made. In Wales my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales is responsible for the homes insulation scheme.

Urban Housing Renewal Unit (Leeds)

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals the urban housing renewal unit has received from Leeds city council; and with what result.

Sir George Young: In my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Sherwood (Mr. Stewart) on 26 March (at col. 501-2), I announced approval in principle to a major proposal to renovate and revitalise the Gipton South estate.

Discussions are in progress with Leeds city council on proposals concerning the Belle Isle, South Seacroft and Halton Moor estates. The urban housing renewal unit has also received a proposal concerning the Granges, Chapeltown but has indicated to the council that it does not fall within the unit's remit. Discussions are also taking place with the Council concerning properties at Newhall road.

Greater Manchester PTA (Funding)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to vary the grant related expenditure assessment for public transport to spread the costs incurred by Greater Manchester passenger transport authority as a result of establishing the Initial Bus Company in Greater Manchester more evenly between the Government and the ratepayers in the area; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend is currently consulting the local authority associations on options for changes to grant related expenditure assessments for inclusion in the 1986-87 rate support grant settlement. These include changes to the passenger transport GREA in respect of some aspects of the establishment of public transport companies.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what will be the net effect at current prices, on the 1987-88 budgets of (a) Gateshead metropolitan borough council and (b) Newcastle city council, following his statement on rate support grant made to the House on Tuesday 22 July.

Mr. Waldegrave: As my right hon. Friend told the House on 22 July, it is not yet possible to give details about the rate support grant payable in 1987-88 to an individual authority; and it is of course open to those authorities which my right hon. Friend has selected for rate limitation for 1987-88 to apply for a retermination of their expenditure levels which he announced in his statement.

Radiation

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a detailed breakdown of the derived emergency reference levels for the radioactive contamination of food that have been in use by his Department since the Chernobyl accident.

Mrs. Rumbold: The derived emergency reference levels were published by the National Radiological Protection Board and I am therefore asking it to write to the hon. Member to explain how they are calculated.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a breakdown of the comparative derived emergency reference levels currently in use in each of the EEC countries including the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Rumbold: There has been no official compilation of values for DERLs in the member states of the European Community. However, publications of the World Health Organisation and informal exchanges of information indicate a range of values from 250 bq/kg for vegetables in Greece and the Federal Republic of Germany, up to 5000 bq/kg for any foodstuffs in emergency conditions in Italy.

Food (Radioactivity)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on when the National Radiological Protection Board will recalculate its derived emergency reference levels for radioactive contamination of food in line with its own recommendation that the public dose limit should be no more than 1 mSv per annum.

Mrs. Rumbold: Dose limits for routine situations lasting for many decades do not constrain the choice of reference levels such as DERLs for application after an accident, but they can be used as comparisons. The question of DERLs is still under active consideration by a group of experts of the European Commission, on which a member of NRPB staff serves; this group will doubtless take into account the values of the dose limits.

Rates (Leicester)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of people pay rates in full (a) nationally and (b) in Leicester; and if he will estimate the numbers in receipt of rent rebates.

Mrs. Rumbold: In 1985-86, one in three local electors in Great Britain were estimated to be paying rates directly and in full. In the same year two thirds (3·8m) of council tenants were estimated to be in receipt of rent rebates. The corresponding figures for Leicester were one in four electors and 24,000 tenants respectively.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a list of the trustees of the City Parochial Foundation responsible for the setting-up of the Trust for London.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given him by my hon. Friend the Member for Mitcham and Morden (Mrs. Rumbold) on 11 July at column 31.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if the content and format of the first annual report and statement of accounts of the London residuary body has been agreed; and when the report will be presented to Parliament.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be issuing a direction to residuary bodies under section 78 of the Local Government Act 1985 as to the form of their statements of accounts. These statements in respect of the 1985-86 financial year will be laid before Parliament after they are audited.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what questions about borrowing in 1986-87 were raised by the London residuary body in its communication to his Department on 8 July; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the total amount of proposed borrowing by the London residuary body in 1986-87 for which his consent is needed.

Mrs. Rumbold: The letter raised questions about the availability of borrowing consent

(a) to enable successor authorities to redeem debt owed to the London Residuary Body; and

(b) to enable the London Residuary Body to finance certain capital payments.

The amount of borrowing required for the latter purpose in 1986-87 will depend on a number of factors, including decisions about the use of capital receipts accruing to the London residuary body, on which we are at present considering representations from interested parties.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how much the London residuary body is seeking to claim from his Department in respect of outstanding Government grants to the Greater London council;

(2) what is the total amount of Government grants to the Greater London council still outstanding.

Mrs. Rumbold: I have nothing to add to the answer given to the hon. Member on 16 July at Column 544.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by borough the amount each has received from the London residuary body since 1 April.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member on 11 July at column 310. My Department does not have information about any amounts which have been distributed at any particular point in time.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will call for a report from the chairman of the London residuary body on the amount of money spent on furniture, crockery expenses and ex-gratia payments to staff by the London residuary body since 1 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I see no need for such a report.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, if he will make a statement about the transfer of Greater London council seaside and country homes from the London residuary body to the Anchor housing association.

Sir George Young: Negotiations for the transfer are currently taking place. I am being kept informed of progress.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what directions, advice or guidance he has given to the London residuary body since 1 April.

Mrs. Rumbold: Guidance to all residuary bodies on financial rights and liabilities was issued by the Department on 11 July. This will be consolidated into the wider guidance on property, rights and liabilities to be issued shortly.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment at what date the level of remuneration payable to chairmen and members of the residuary bodies will be considered.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Surbiton (Mr. Tracey) on 5 June 1986 at column 497. The remuneration of the members of public boards has been increased from 1 July 1986 consequential on the decisions reached on the report of the Top Salaries Review Body.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether a response has now been sent by his Department to the London residuary body concerning its request for consents to borrowing dated 8 July; and whether the requests of the London residuary body have been approved by his Department.

Mrs. Rumbold: No.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he can give a date by which full payment may be expected to the London residuary body of claims for Government grants from the Greater London council; and if he will list the Departments with which such claims are outstanding.

Mrs. Rumbold: I have nothing to add to the answer given to the hon. Member on 16 July at column 544.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the reasons discussed with the chairman of the London residuary body for the delay in announcing the release of £18 million from the Greater London council balances in April.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 23 July at columns 338-39.

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will request the London residuary body to bring forward proposals to make available ex-Greater London council light industrial properties which it controls to the London borough of Hackney and to other inner city boroughs which have a demand for rented industrial units;

(2) if he has any plans to bring forward a draft property transfer order for the London residuary body to hand over ex-Greater London council light industrial properties to the London borough of Hackney and to other inner city boroughs.

Mrs. Rumbold: No. The disposal of these properties is a matter for which the London residuary body is responsible.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether there have been any discussions between his Department and officials of the London residuary body concerning the making of special payments to staff; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: This is one of the matters about which the London residuary body informed the Department of its decisions.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether there have been any discussions between his Department and the London residuary body concerning the future of computer services in London currently provided by the London residuary body; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: This is one of the matters about which the London residuary body has kept the Department informed.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make a direction to prevent the London residuary body from seeking to renegotiate prices for sales of property authorised by the Greater London council to two housing co-operatives at 3-12 Clark street and 20-26 Ford square, Tower Hamlets and 85-88 Brent Terrace, Barnet; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: No.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether there have been any discussions between his Department and the London residuary body regarding the organisations and authorities to be consulted on the future of Hampstead heath; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: This is one of the matters about which the London residuary body has informed the Department of its decisions.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions have taken place between his Department and the London residuary body regarding the body's budget forecast for the income during the period 1 April and 31 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: There are frequent discussions between this Department and the London residuary body about financial matters.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether there have been any discussions between his Department and officials of the London residuary body concerning any charge to be made for the use of the County Hall by the Inner London education authority, and the financial terms for the Inner London education authority after 1 September 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: This in one of the matters about which the London residuary body has kept the Department informed.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the hon. Member for Newham, North West can expect to receive replies to questions raised in an Adjournment debate on 23 May on the London residuary body, Official Report, column 648, to which a reply by correspondence was promised.

Mrs. Rumbold: My hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, wrote on 6 June. The London residuary body expects to reply soon to matters for which it is responsible.

Hampstead Heath

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the future of Hampstead heath.

Mrs. Rumbold: This is a matter for the London residuary body. It has invited comments by 30 September on a consultation document on the future of Hampstead heath. The LRB will make recommendations to the Secretary of State in the light of those comments.

Residuary Bodies

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the final version of the property guidelines for residuary bodies; and if a copy will be made available in the Library.

Sir George Young: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Mitcham and Morden (Mrs. Rumbold) on 11 July 1986 at column 312.

Thamesmead

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if the means of transfer of Thamesmead from the London residuary body have been decided; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is proposed that the means of transfer should be by conveyance from the London residuary body to Thamesmead town.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if there will be any ministerial involvement in the negotiations between the London residuary body and Thamesmead Town Ltd. as to the purchase price of land and property at Thamesmead; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: By virtue of paragraph 61 of schedule 2 to the Housing (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 the consent of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be required before the disposal takes place.

GLC Seaside and Country Homes

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Association of London Authorities made a formal request to his Department that Greater London council seaside and country homes should be transferred to a housing association where fair rents apply; and how the request was communicated.

Sir George Young: The proposal for transfer to a housing association was first put to me on 3 October 1985 by the inter-borough nomination scheme, with unanimous support from member boroughs. I have received other letters of support, notably one from the chairman of the housing and works committee of the London Boroughs Association and another from the GLC which referred to support expressed by the Association of London authorities.

South Africa

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of all contracts involving his Department and majority-owned South African companies since June 1979.

Sir George Young: This information is not available.

Rosehill Estate, Willenhall

Sir George Young: We will do so shortly.

Out-of-town Shopping Centres

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, if he will make it his policy to call in all applications which for out-of-town shopping centres exceeding 100,000 sq.ft. within the Greater Manchester area.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend's policy is to deal with each planning case on its merits, with call-in the exception rather than the rule.

Council House Sales

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue guidelines to local authorities as to how long they should keep right-to-buy documentation, and as to the circumstances in which such documents should be destroyed; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: This would normally be a matter for local authorities' own discretion; but if the hon. Member is aware of any difficulties perhaps he would write to me.

County Hall, London

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if the London residuary body has received the consultants' report on the future of county hall; if a copy will be made available in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I understand that the LRB expects to receive the consultants' report within the next few weeks. If the LRB decides to make the report public, I will arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Green Belt

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 414, he proposes to monitor implementation of his policy for the conversion of redundant agricultural buildings in the green belt.

Sir George Young: We shall in the normal way be taking note of the general implications of cases which come to our attention. We have no plans at present for formal research into this topic.

Textiles

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money has been earmarked under the European regional development fund non-quota scheme for textile areas for West Yorkshire; over what period of years; and how much has so far been committed.

Sir George Young: For infrastructure projects the information is:

West Yorkshire allocation: £9,010,000; eligible period: 1 February 1984—31 January 1989; amount committed so far £1,561,350.

Grant of £9,010,000 is also available for small firms under the Department of Trade and Industry's business improvement scheme in the same period.

Rents

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will bring up to date the information on council house rents in his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby on 1 December 1982, Official Report, columns 208-9.

Sir George Young: Following are the figures corresponding to those for 1972 to 1982 given in my reply to the hon. Member on 1 December 1982:

	Rent component weight (out of 1,000)		Percentage increase in year to January of which, local authority rent approximately	in rent component	in Retail Prices Index
1983	36	32	11·0	4·9
1984	35	31	4·8	5·1
1986	29	26	7·4	5·5

The weights are based on information obtained from the "family expenditure survey" and represent total rent payments by the households covered by the index, net of standard housing benefits except where households are also in receipt of housing benefit supplement, averaged over all index households not only those living in rented accommodation. For consistency, other forms of housing benefit have been treated as income, as supplementary benefit was before it, and therefore have not affected the retail prices index. The current weight for rents of 29 out of 1,000, was based on an estimated average weekly expenditure of about £5·40 in January 1986.

Mudchute Farm and Park Association

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the reasons for which all applications for revenue funding made by Mudchute Farm and Park Association in the Isle of Dogs were rejected by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: No application for revenue funding by the Mudchute Farm and Park Association has been rejected by the Department.

London Docklands Development Corporation

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will direct the London docklands development corporation to compile a register of all the freehold and leasehold acquisitions and holdings in the area of London docklands by each member of the London Docklands development corporation board, its staff, its consultants and their families; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: No.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps he has taken to ensure that all grant and funding monies distributed by the London Docklands development corporation and drawn from the J4 local community budget have been allocated solely to local community projects, and that on no occasion funds from this local community budget have been passed to commercial companies or private individuals, and if he will make a statement;

(2) what was the sum of money paid (a) from the London Docklands development corporation J4 local community budget and (b) from other London Docklands development corporation local community financing resources to (i) Albatross Industries Ltd, and (ii) other private companies in the London docklands, during each of the past three years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 24 July 1986]: The London Docklands Development Corporation's J4 budget includes contributions to capital works on schools, parks, museums and other community facilities and are usually paid to local authorities or charitable trusts. The Community budget as a whole, including J4, is not used to make beneficial payments to commercial companies or private individuals, but on some occasions, the corporation makes payments directly to companies (such as building contractors) who have carried out works for the benefit of the community. No payments have been made to Albatross Industries Ltd. from the community budget.

Local Plans

Mr. Franks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what rôle he plays in the determination of the procedure, timetable for objectors' evidence, and general organisation for a local plan public inquiry.

Mr. Tracey: The local planning authority is required by section 13(1) of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 to arrange a public local inquiry to be held for the purpose of considering objections to a local plan which are made in accordance with the relevant Regulations, (The Town and Country Planning (Structure and Local Plans) Regulations 1982 (as amended) (SI 1982 No. 555 and SI 1984 No. 6 and SI 1986 No. 443); and the Town and Country Planning (Local Plans for Greater London) Regulations 1983 (as amended) (SI 1983 No. 1190 and SI 1986 No. 443), unless all objectors indicate in writing that they do not wish to appear. The Inquiry is held by an independent inspector. Procedures which local planning authorities are required to follow are set out in the Regulations. Advice on the procedures is contained in "Local plans: Public local inquiries — a guide to procedure 1984", published by this Department and the Welsh Office.

Mr. Franks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria he uses in deciding whether to call in a local plan.

Mr. Tracey: The Government's policy on calling in local plans is set out in the memorandum on structure and local plans accompanying DOE circular 22/84. This says that the call-in power will be used in only a limited range of circumstances where central Government intervention is clearly justified. The Secretary of State would not normally consider calling in a local plan until the authority had given notice of their intention to adopt the plan. Particular circumstances in which the exercise of call-in powers might be appropriate are where the plan raises issues of national or regional importance; or where the plan gives rise to substantial controversy, for example, extending beyond the area of the plan-making authority.

Greater London (Planning Appeals)

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning appeals were considered by his Department in each of the Greater London boroughs for each of the years 1983, 1984 and 1985; and what percentage were upheld in each of those years.

Sir George Young: The number of planning appeals considered by my Department in each of the Greater London boroughs for each of the years 1984 and 1985 are as follows. Comparable figures for 1983 are not readily available. Also shown are percentages of appeals allowed.

Yorkshire (Atmospheric Monitoring)

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to investigate the lack of monitoring facilities in the Yorkshire region for airborne dust caused by atmospheric nuclear tests.

Mrs. Rumbold: I am satisfied that the environmental radioactivity surveillance programme carried out by the National Radiological Protection Board and the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority is perfectly adequate to monitor fall out in Yorkshire and elsewhere in the United Kingdom arising from atmospheric nuclear tests.

Northern Ireland Flag

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 22 July, Official Report, column 111, why the flag of Northern Ireland is not flown alongside those of Scotland, Wales and England on public buildings in Whitehall on suitable state occasions.

Mr. Tracey: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Flag of St. Patrick

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 22 July, Official Report, column 111, why the flag of St. Patrick for Ireland is flown on public buildings in Whitehall during state visits to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tracey: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 22 July, Official Report, column 111; if St. Patrick's flag for Ireland has been adopted by Her Majesty's Government as the flag for Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I have been asked to reply.

No. The flag of Northern Ireland is the Union flag.

Crown Suppliers

Mr. Sayeed asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the future of the Crown Suppliers.

Sir George Young: The Crown Suppliers have had another successful year's trading. Despite the fact that over 65 per cent. of their business is now untied and optional, they have more than met their financial objective for 1985-86. They have achieved this by raising their level of service, speeding up deliveries, reducing resource costs and offering still better value for money for the products and services they provide to an increasing number of public sector customers. This process will continue. They operate of course under the constraint that, as Departments are increasingly free to purchase goods and services elsewhere, the Crown Suppliers are expected to compete for work within the public sector, yet they cannot, generally speaking, seek business outside it as they would if they were a private concern.

The team of officials which last year reviewed the future of the Crown Suppliers concluded on the information available to them that whilst privatisation would be possible, it would not, in their view, be in the public interest. They recommended that the Crown Suppliers should be retained as a central purchasing agency in the public sector with rather greater autonomy in accounting and staffing matters, but that further consideration should be given to contracting out certain of their non-procurement activities. The central unit on purchasing has come to a similar conclusion about the central procurement function, but has made rather more radical suggestions about the Crown Suppliers' other activities.

Despite these recommendations, my right hon. Friend and I believe that, taking into account the wider commercial benefits, privatisation may yet prove to be a valid option. When he announced the original review last year, the then Secretary of State the right hon. Member for Wanstead and Woodford made it clear that advice would be sought from a merchant bank as and when necessary. Our final decision about privatisation must take account of the costs and benefits to Government, including the marketable value of the organisation and the effects on other Government Departments. I have therefore decided, without commitment, that it would be timely to seek the advice of an outside financial institution about the feasibility of privatising all or part of the Crown Suppliers, including the possibility of some form of management/staff financial participation in the business. I have also instituted a further detailed examination of the various recommendations for change proposed by the original review team and by the central unit on purchasing with the aim of implementing those recommendations which could be advantageous in terms of cost and efficiency. Meanwhile, the Crown Suppliers will continue to offer their present comprehensive service.

Homeless Families

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 12 June, Official Report, column 307, what steps he is now taking to determine the effect of the Pulhoffer judgment on the housing of homeless families by local authorities.

Sir George Young: This aspect will be covered along with others in our forthcoming postal survey of all housing authorities of their policies and practice under Part III of the Act, including the circumstances in which they accept people as homeless and the use of different kinds of accommodation for homeless people; in detailed case studies of selected authorities; and in my officials regular discussions with authorities. We shall also be monitoring the regular quarterly statistics returned by authorities on homelessness and pursuing with them the reasons for any substantial changes in, for instance, the proportion of applicants found not to be homeless. In addition we will be taking account of any further relevant court judgments and any evidence which the voluntary bodies choose to submit to us from their experience in advising homeless people.

Countryside (Changes)

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish the report he has received from Huntings Technical Services Ltd. following its research project on changes in the countryside.

Mr. Waldegrave: Yes. I have now received the report from Huntings Technical Services for their work carried out under contract to this Department and the Countryside Commission. They examined how the main features of the landscape of England and Wales have changed since the late 1940s. Copies are being placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

This report makes a valuable contribution to our understanding of changes that have taken place in the countryside. It has produced a whole range of statistical information which will be of value to the researchers, will enable further monitoring and analysis to take place, and provide a better factual base on which to build our plans for the future.

The main findings of the report demonstrate the significant expansion of the area of built-up land, and the growth in the area of farmland under crops. It also demonstrates the growth in the total area of forestry, mainly caused by the expansion of coniferous forests, together with a substantial fall in the area of semi natural vegetation. The study also indicates that the total length of hedgerows in England and Wales has fallen dramatically. The detailed figures in the survey are subject to considerable margins of statistical error, but the broad conclusions are believed to be reliable. Further detailed studies are being undertaken.

Sport in Schools

Mr. Haselhurst asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking in the light of recent representations about standards of sport in schools.

Mr. Tracey: Over the past seven months I have met representatives from a number of organisations in the sport and education fields. These meetings have proved useful in identifying particular issues of importance to both interests. There is a need for further discussion, and for this purpose I have agreed with my hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Department of Education and Science that senior officials in our Department will jointly host a seminar in the autumn on the subject of sport in schools. Interested organisations will shortly be invited to send representatives.

Our common aim is to ensure that children receive the full range of benefits that sport can contribute to children's education, and that our schools and governing bodies should work together to that end.

Homelessness

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish estimates prepared by his Department comparing the public expenditure implications of maintaining homeless households in receipt of supplementary benefit in commercial board and lodging accommodation, with providing such households with local authority rented accommodation by building new dwellings for them; and if he will publish separate estimates assuming the household concerned is (a) a single person, (b) a couple without children, (c) a single parent with one dependent child and (d) a couple with two dependent children accepted as homeless and in priority need of accommodation by (i) a London borough and (ii) a non-metropolitan local authority.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 18 July 1986, c. 658]: I shall write to the hon. Member.

UK 2000 (Mr. Branson)

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in the light of Mr. Richard Branson's statement on 20 June, that he had not yet accepted the chairmanship of UK 2000, he has anything to add to his answer of 17 July, Official Report, column 628, on this subject.

Mrs. Rumbold: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Great Lines, Brompton, Gillingham

Mr. Couchman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the sale of the Great Lines, Brompton, Gillingham, Kent, by the Property Services Agency on behalf of the Ministry of Defence.

Sir George Young: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Departmental Offices, Coatbridge

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the letter dated 22 July from the parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Ealing, Acton (Sir G. Young) to the hon. Member for Monklands, West regarding the proposed office at Coatbridge to house staff of the Departments of Health and Social Security and Employment.

Sir George Young: Yes. The text is as follows:

DE and DHSS Offices: Coatbridge

Michael Ancram has written to me about the comments you recently expressed to him over the proposed office at Coatbridge to house DHSS and DE staff.

As you know, during the Adjournment Debate on 25 March 1986, I undertook that I would examine with colleagues ways in which improved working conditions could be provided. In particular, we have investigated various options for phasing the developers' costs over the next few years. Unfortunately, two of the options proposed would result in an unacceptably high increase in the total cost of the project, and all rely upon funds not yet known to be available in future years.

The Coatbridge scheme is indeed of high priority, but I am dependent as to the outcome of this current PES round. You will be aware of the timetable for setting expenditure programmes, and I doubt if we will be able to give a further statement about the project until the PES round is completed in late September.

It was because I could not allow a contractual commitment to be entered into without funds being earmarked that I have had to hold the project up. There was no question of using savings on the project to finance a development in a New Town. It was simply that the project priorities had to be decided in conjuction with client Departments and, where funds are limited, some projects will go ahead and others will not.

I also understand that you have asked to see a copy of Mr. Gosling's reply to a letter from Males and McDonald, the developers involved in this project. I have pleasure in enclosing a copy.

I know that our continued inability to go ahead must be a disappointment; I will write again as soon as PSA's funding position for future years has been determined.

Canary Wharf (Exhibition)

Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the Canary Wharf development corporation project in London docklands to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Sir George Young: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Tree Preservation Orders

Mr. Crouch asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy towards the use of tree preservation orders; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The purpose of tree preservation orders is to ensure the protection of trees in the interests of amenity. I hope that local planning authorities, who make such orders, will continue to do so in appropriate cases. However, I am aware that recent compensation claims have caused some concern, and that an appeal against a decision of the Lands Tribunal is currently before the Court of Appeal. Once the outcome of that appeal is known we shall be considering the position as necessary.

EMPLOYMENT

Action for Jobs Campaign

Mr. Caborn asked the Paymaster General what is the budget for the action for jobs campaign.

Mr. Lang: The Action for Jobs campaign is designed to raise awareness of the opportunities provided by the Government's employment, training and enterprise measures on which we shall be spending some £3,000 million this year. An initial £3·5 million was set aside for the first stages of the campaign and we shall shortly be announcing a television advertising campaign costing some £1·9 million. This represents less than one fifth of one per cent. of expenditure on the opportunities which are available.

Wages Councils

Ms. Richardson asked the Paymaster General what is the number of (i) women and (ii) men who are presently covered by wages councils and who are employed in work places presently covered by section 1, part I of schedule 1 to the Hours of Employment (Conventions) Act 1936, sections 125, 126, 128 and 131 of the Mines and Quarries Act 1954, sections 86, 88, 91, 92, 93 and 94 of the Factories Act 1961 and the Baking Industry (Hours of Work) Act 1954.

Mr. Trippier: Approximately 400,000 workers covered by wages councils are employed in work places of a kind defined in article 1*(b)* of part I of the schedule to the Hours of Employment (Conventions) Act 1936. Most of those work places are also of a kind likely to be covered by the Factories Act 1961. About three quarters of the workers concerned are women.

Workers in mines and quarries are not covered by wages councils. Some male workers in Scotland who are engaged in both baking and retail work are covered both by the Retail Food Wages Council and by the Baking Industry (Hours of Work) Act 1954.

Enterprise Boards (Labour Market Initiative)

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General what steps he intends to take to expand and promote work such as that undertaken and sponsored by local authority enterprise boards as part of the EEC labour market initiative; and what steps he intends to take to ensure that such boards will continue to be allowed access to appropriate EEC funds for training and industrial development.

Mr. Lang: The labour market initiative put forward by the United Kingdom, Italy and the Republic of Ireland at the 5 June meeting of the European Community Labour and Social Affairs Council contains a number of proposals designed to promote the creation of jobs. To the extent that this is also an aim of local authority enterprise boards the initiative and the work of the boards are complementary. In relation to EC funds, decisions on training programmes for which enterprise boards may make application for support under the European social fund are a matter for the European Commission. In respect of grants for industrial development purposes made from the European regional development fund, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will consider the most appropriate means of dealing with applications from local authority enterprise boards from that fund in the light of his Department's current review of the local authority capital control system.

Bristol, East

Mr. Sayeed asked the Paymaster General how many people are currently participating in each of the Government-funded training and enterprise programmes in Bristol, East; and what were the comparable figures in 1979 and 1983.

Mr. Trippier: I regret that the information is not available in the precise form requested. However, the table below shows the number of people engaged on training and enterprise programmes at the end of June 1986, together with comparable figures for June 1983 where these are available. Comparative information is not available for June 1979.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Paymaster General if, pursuant to his answer of 2 July, Official Report, columns 553-4, he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the seasonal, temporary or casual jobs, by age, further divided into standard categories of ethnic origin.

Mr. Lang: Estimates of the number of persons in seasonal, temporary or casual jobs are available from the labour force survey since 1981 and are presented in the following table which shows separately the numbers of non-white ethnic origin. More detailed information about the ethnic origin of seasonal, temporary and casual workers is not available because of the small sample numbers involved.

[1] Estimates relate to the spring of each year. Figures for 1985 exclude those on Government schemes, whereas earlier years include those on schemes if reported as in employment.

[2] In 1981 the relevant question identified occasional or casual (including seasonal) jobs. Figures refer to all persons whereas earlier answers gave estimates of employees only as the self employed were not asked if they worked full or part-time.

[3] Includes those who did not state their ethnic origin.

[4] Preliminary estimates.

[5] Less than ten thousand.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report the number of full-time and part-time employees in the labour force in 1979, 1981, 1983, 1984 and 1985 aged 16 to 19 years, 20 to 24 years and 25 years, showing separately males and females by the standard Department of Employment categories of ethnic origin.

Mr. Lang: The regular quarterly employees in employment series does not identify age or ethnic origin.

The labour force survey provides information on a different basis but allows the above analyses. The available information for the years requested is given in the table below. The amount of ethnic detail that can be given is limited by considerations of sample size.

Mr. Deakins asked the Paymaster General what provision exists in the unemployment figures for counting in the total of unemployed claimants, the number of self-employed persons who cease to be self-employed and do not take up other employment.

Mr. Lang: The monthly unemployment count includes some previously self-employed people since many claim supplementary benefit or national insurance contributions. According to the labour force survey in Great Britain, in the spring of 1984 there were about 130,000 previously self-employed people without jobs and actively seeking work and 150,000 people claiming benefits who had been or were still self-employed.

Mr. Caborn asked the Paymaster General what are the unemployment figures for the Sheffield, Central and Faversham constituencies by wards.

Mr. Lang: The following information is in the Library. The table shows the numbers of unemployed claimants on 12 June 1986 in each ward in the Sheffield Central and Faverham parliamentary constituencies.

Factory Inspectors

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General how many of the factory inspectors with responsibility for the Hays Chemical Co. plant in St. Helens have degrees in chemistry or chemical engineering; and if he will make a statment.

Mr. Trippier: Of the three factory inspectors based in the chemicals group of the Health and Safety Executive's Merseyside area office responsible for the inspection of this plant, one has a degree in chemistry. The area office can draw on the technical advice and support of the field consultant group based in Manchester which included four fully qualified chemical inspectors as well as specialists in other disciplines.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the number of specialist inspectors of factories with special reference to the work load of the Health and Safety Executive's area offices.

Mr. Trippier: On 1 July 1986, 194 specialist inspectors were employed by HSE in giving technical advice and support to other parts of the organisation. Of these 100 were stationed in the seven field consultant groups each providing support to between two and four Health and Safety Executive areas. A recruitment campaign is at present under way.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to review the technical qualifications and background of those factory inspectors called upon to inspect the non-nuclear areas of the United Kingdom's nuclear power complexes; when the decision was made to appoint the inspectorate to perform this function; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: No. The decision to transfer responsibility to the factory inspectorate was made shortly before implementation on 1 April 1986.

Small Firms

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Paymaster General if he has any further plans to help alleviate the hardship caused by cash flow problems encountered by small businesses due to the late payment of bills.

Mr. Trippier: The "Payment on Time" booklet is a worthwhile step in encouraging a change of attitude towards good payment practice. I shall keep in mind the possibility of further initiatives in this area.

Community Programme

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General what were the mean and average overhead costs during 1985 for each community programme entrant, broken down by type of expenditure to include administration, supervision and materials.

Mr. Lang: During 1985-86 there were 241,200 entrants to the community programme, including managers or supervisors. Average wage-related costs per entrant were £2,405. Other cost elements per entrant were as follows:

Operating Costs	275
Agency Fees	62
MSC administration and marketing	76
Other expenditure	17

These Manpower Services Commission expenditure categories do not directly correspond with administration, supervision and materials, the categories requested.

Administration consists both of direct MSC expenditure and fees claimed by agents, each of whom operate a number of community programme projects. In addition agencies may either set up a project under community programme rules to handle administration of the agency centrally or use up to 20 per cent. of the total operating costs made available by the MSC to fund central services.

Supervision expenditure consists of a proportion of both agency fees and wage-related costs (approximately 20 per cent. of wage-related costs related to managers and supervisors).

Materials expenditure is included in operating costs (this element also includes some expenditure on capital items and training).

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General what information he has about the comparative average amount in benefits claimed by (a) entrants to community programmes immediately prior to their entry and (b) people who are eligible for a place on a community programme but who decline to take it up; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: According to the fourth community programme participants' survey, the average amount in benefits claimed by participants interviewed in the survey, immediately prior to entry to the programme, was £30·41. The average includes those participants who were not claiming any benefit.

There are no figures available on average benefit levels received by those people eligible for a place on the programme who did not enter the scheme.

Workplace Creches

Mr. Freud asked the Paymaster General what information is available to his Department on the availability of workplace creches and the average charges made for such facilities; what steps he is taking to encourage such provision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My Department does not collect information about the availability and cost of workplace creches. We certainly encourage employers to introduce measures to improve equal opportunities in employment as appropriate to their circumstances. The Equal Opportunities Commission code of practice, which was approved by Parliament and came into force last year, mention workplace creches as one of a number of arrangements which can assist both employer and employee by helping to provide continuity of employment to working parents.

Public Bodies

Mr. Wigley asked the Paymaster General if he will publish a list of all bodies in Wales to which he has sole or joint responsibility for making appointments.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My right hon. and noble Friend has sole responsibility for the appointment, nationally, of chairmen of the committees for the employment of disabled people, eight of which operate in Wales.

Mining Industry (New Technology)

Mr. Dormand asked the Paymaster General what assessment he has made of the implications for employment policy of the introduction of new technology to pits in the north-east.

Mr. Lang: The introduction of new technology may lead to job losses in the short term, but in the longer term the improvement in productivity and hence competitiveness is good for jobs.

Miss Juliett Kent

Mr. Rooker asked the Paymaster General if, pursuant to his reply of 18 April, Official Report, column 529, he will give the reasons why the proceedings to recover wages owed to Miss Juliett Kent of Birmingham have not yet started.

Mr. Trippier: Proceedings have been issued in the county court. Progress of the case is now in the hands of the legal representatives of both parties and the officials of the court. I am not in a position to say when the hearing will take place.

YTS (Leavers' Survey)

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General, for each survey of leavers (ad hoc, 15 per cent. and 100 per cent.) conducted since the YTS began, if he will publish in the Official Report the number and percentage of leavers in each who were (a) in full-time work with the same employer, (b) in full-time work with a different employer, (c) in part-time work, (d) on a full-time course at a college or training centre, (e) back at school, (f) on another YTS, (g) doing something else and (h) unemployed, showing for each survey the total number of usable questionnaires returned, the percentage response rate and the number of those who responded who were early leavers.

Mr. Trippier: The precise information requested is not available. The table gives the result of the Manpower Services Commission surveys conducted on YTS leavers and represents the response to the question "What are you doing now?"

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will publish for each month of the 100 per cent. YTS leavers' survey, the destinations of leavers in each of the Manpower Services Commission regions.

Mr. Trippier: The tables give the destinations of YTS leavers for each Manpower Services Commission region monthly between April 1985 and January 1986. Response is to the question "What are you doing now?" The data for each month is taken from the 100 per. cent. YTS leavers survey and represents the position of leavers surveyed 3 months after leaving YTS.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report the information available from the 100 per cent. YTS leavers' surveys about (a) the range and average wages earned, (b) the hours worked and (c) the types of jobs done by those leavers (i) in full-time work with the same employer (ii) in full-time work with a different employer and (iii) in part-time work.

Mr. Trippier: The latest summary information for leavers between April 1985 and September 1985 is given in the tables following. There is no information collected in YTS leavers survey on hours worked. Leavers earnings are given by the leavers and may be subject to reporting error.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will place in the Library the full result of all the 100 per cent. YTS leavers' surveys which have been conducted.

Mr. Trippier: As the hon. Member will know, key monthly statistics from the 100 per cent. survey of YTS leavers are regularly placed in the Library.

The Manpower Services Commission is currently preparing a full report covering the survey results and I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library in due course. It will be the first of a regular series.

The survey produces a wealth of information about young people who enter YTS and it is impossible to predict all the facts and figures which individual Members will wish to know. For that reason I will continue to respond to specific requests for information as they arise.

Earnings and Unit Labour Costs

Mr. Gould asked the Paymaster General whether he will bring up to date the figures for the increase in average hourly earnings and unit labour costs given in the reply on 21 November 1978, Official Report, column 550; and if he will include a table showing the increase between the first half of 1979 and the latest available date.

Mr. Lang: The figures for the periods to 1985 are set out in the following tables:

Construction Sites (Inspection)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General if he will consider transferring responsibility for the inspection of construction sites from the factory inspectorate to another body with specialist technical expertise of the construction industry.

Mr. Trippier: No. Each area office of the Health and Safety Executive has a group of inspectors responsible for the construction industry. All have the necessary technical expertise, knowledge and experience to carry out their inspection activities.

Construction Industry Training Board

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General if he has received representations on the extent to which the composition and terms of reference of the construction industry training board adequately reflect the effect of new technologies on the industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: No recent representations of this kind have been received. The functions and powers of the construction industry training board, as of other industry training boards, are laid down in the Industrial Training Act 1982. The board is due for reconstitution in 1988, and Ministers will review its composition to ensure that, so far as possible, the board continues to be fully representative of the industry.

United Kingdom-Based Companies

Mr. Adley asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement about the criteria he uses when deciding whether to allow work permits to foreign citizens involved in the management of United Kingdom-based companies.

Mr. Lang: For approval under the work permit scheme the employer must demonstrate that an overseas worker is suitably qualified for a specific management post and that there is a genuine need for his or her services.

Small Businesses

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to amend the current definitions of small businesses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The principal definition of a small firm in the manufacturing sector is one employing 200 or fewer people. I have no plans to amend this definition.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

UNESCO

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will arrange for an exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation in November; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: No.

South Africa

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which of the measures taken by the United Kingdom affecting trade with South Africa required the prior approval of the EEC Commission and Council.

Mrs. Chalker: The 12 member states of the European Community agreed at Luxembourg in September 1985 on a package which included certain restrictive measures against South Africa to be implemented by national action. Neither these nor the other measures taken by the United Kingdom against South Africa have required the prior approval of the EEC Commission and Council.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of any NATO meetings, conferences or seminars or such events organised by NATO to which South Africa was invited in either a full or observer capacity.

Mr. Renton: As far as I am aware, representatives of South Africa have not been invited to NATO meetings, conferences or seminars or such events since 1982.

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his latest discussions on attempting to end apartheid in South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary is currently in Southern Africa on the second stage of his presidency mission. On 23 July he met the South African State President P. W. Botha and Foreign Minister R. F. Botha. The discussions were candid, courteous and substantive. He will have a further meeting with President Botha on 29 July.

Mr. Dicks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which African countries have indicated to Her Majesty's Government either privately or by any other means that they would be unable or unwilling to implement economic sanctions against South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: Communications between Governments are confidential. However, there have been indications from a few African countries of their concern at the implications for them of the imposition of general economic sanctions against South Africa.

Mr. Alec Archibald

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about Alec Archibald, the Scot held by the Thai authorities.

Mr. Eggar: Mr. Archibald was sentenced under Thai law to a cumulative total of three years and nine months for a number of offences. He has since been sentenced to serve an additional nine months and is now expected to be discharged from prison on the 17 of September 1988.

We are in touch with his family.

Council of Foreign Ministers

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will publish the minutes of the meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers which contains the text of the 1984 intergovernmental agreement both in English and in French.

Mrs. Chalker: The text of the 1984 intergovernmental agreement was published as Command 9395. Council minutes themselves are confidential.

Hong Kong

Sir Patrick Wall asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs where the official lease to the colony of Hong Kong is now lodged.

Mr. Renton: The convention between the United Kingdom and China regarding an extension of the Hong Kong territory, signed at Peking on 9 June 1898, contains the terms on which the New Territories were leased to the United Kingdom. A copy is in the Public Record Office.

Sir Patrick Wall asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in the detailed negotiations with the People's Republic of China over Hong Kong particularly over (a) religious freedom, (b) the safeguarding of religious trusts and (c) free passage abroad.

Mr. Renton: The agenda and proceedings of the Sino-British Joint Liason Group meetings are confidential. But section XIII of annex I to the Joint Declaration of the Governments of the United Kingdom and the People's Republic of China states that the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region Government shall maintain the rights and freedoms as provided for by the laws previously in force in Hong Kong, including among others, freedom of the person, of travel and of belief. It also provides for schools, hospitals and welfare institutions run by religious organisations to be continued.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Chinese Government have made any recent objections to the development of democracy in Hong Kong at official meetings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: The contents of our official exchanges with other governments are confidential. As I told the hon. Member in my reply to his question on 10 February, there will be a review of the further development of representative government in Hong Kong in 1987. Decisions on any further developments must await the outcome of that review.

Hong Kong (Nuclear Accidents)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Hong Kong Government have any contingency plans for evacuating the territory in the event of any nuclear accident.

Mr. Renton: The Hong Kong Government are drawing up plans to ensure the greatest possible degree of safety for the people of Hong Kong in the unlikely event of a nuclear accident. To this end, the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority has been retained as consultant to the Hong Kong Government.

Nuclear Power Plant, Guangdong Province (China)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultation has taken place between the Chinese Government and the Hong Kong Government concerning the building of a nuclear power plant in Guangdong Province; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We have been in touch with the Chinese authorities for several years both on our own behalf and on behalf of Hong Kong, for which we are responsible, over various aspects of the planned nuclear power plant in Guangdong Province in China. I have no doubt that these contacts will continue and that they will provide the means for a useful and important exchange of views.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government will make representations to the Chinese Government concerning the siting of the proposed nuclear power plant in Guangdong Province, in view of its close proximity to the colony; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: As I said in my reply of 15 July to my hon. Friend the Member for Christchurch (Mr. Adley), at col. 440, we have been following very closely the expressions of concern in Hong Kong about the proposed nuclear power plant project. We remain in close touch with the Chinese authorities on various aspects of the project.

Dr. Francis Bertrand

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Zimbabwe on behalf of Dr. Francis Bertrand; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Dr. Bertrand was tried by a Zimbabwean court in 1982. He was convicted and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment. An appeal against conviction and sentence was dismissed. Dr. Bertrand renounced his Zimbabwean citizenship in May 1985. Since that time we have given him full consular protection normally afforded to a British national.

Public Bodies

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a list of all the bodies in Wales to which he has the sole or joint responsibility for making appointments.

Mr. Eggar: The only such body is the University college of Wales, Aberystwyth, where my right hon. and learned Friend is solely responsible for nominating a member of the advisory board to the Wilson chair of international politics.

English Language

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much Her Majesty's Government have spent on the promoting of the English language and English language teaching in foreign countries during each year since 1979.

Mr. Eggar: Since 1983 we, through the agency of the British Council, have spent the following sums on the promoting of the English language and English language teaching in foreign countries:

1983-84	55
1984-85	63
1985-86	*68

*Estimated outturn.

Expenditure by subject was not recorded before 1983.

Economic Summit

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which country the 1987 economic summit will be held.

Mrs. Chalker: Italy.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which month the 1987 economic summit will be held.

Mrs. Chalker: It has yet to be decided.

Nicaragua

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings Her Majesty's ambassador to Nicaragua has had with (a) trade unions, (b) human rights groups, (c) aid agencies, (d) churches and (e) political parties in the last year.

Mr. Eggar: As part of their normal duties, our diplomatic staff accredited to Nicaragua maintain regular and frequent contacts with political parties, human rights groups and the Roman Catholic Church. They also meet representatives of aid agencies and trade unions.

El Salvador

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings Her Majesty's diplomatic representatives in El Salvador have had with (a) trade unions, (b) human rights groups, (c) aid agencies, (d) churches and (e) political parties in the past year.

Mr. Eggar: As part of their normal duties our diplomatic staff accredited to El Salvador maintain regular and frequent contacts with political parties, human rights groups and the Roman Catholic Church. They also meet representatives of aid agencies and trade unions.

Chile

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings Her Majesty's ambassador to Chile has had with human rights groups in Chile in the last three months.

Mr. Eggar: Whilst Her Majesty's ambassador to Chile has himself been on leave for part of the period in question, Her Majesty's embassy has been in regular and frequent contact with Chile's human rights group.

Entry Certificates

Mr. Corbyn: asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why the entry clearance officer in the British high commission in Calcutta required Pranab Kumar Saha and Mr. Indrani Saha to cancel valid visas to visit the republic of France and the republic of Italy before granting a short visit entry certificate (X 7742279 and X 774380); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible with the information requested.

Single European Act

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the recent impact on the United Kingdom of the provisions of the Single European Act.

Mrs. Chalker: The Single European Act will not come into force until it has been ratified by all EC member states.

When it does come into force it will represent an important practical step towards enabling this country to realise more fully the benefits of our membership of the European Community.

Daniel Anderson

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has relating to the disappearance of Daniel Anderson, a Scot employed by the Circo Italiano Magico company in Mexico.

Mr. Eggar: The disappearance of Mr. Anderson in Mexico in late May has been reported to the Mexican police. Information supplied by Mr. Anderson's family in Edinburgh as to his possible whereabouts is being followed up.

Drug Liaison Officer

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of India concerning their refusal to admit drug liaison officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Lewes (Mr. Rathbone) on 22 July, at column 142, and to the answer I gave to the private notice question by my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Fylde (Sir E. Gardner) on 24 July, at column 591.

ENERGY

Home Insulation

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will consult further with voluntary organisations with a view to extending their participation in home insulation projects.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend is giving his full backing to the continuing expansion of the voluntary sector insulation projects, of which there are now 272 compared with five when my Department started to sponsor them in 1981; another 200 are at the planning stage. The Energy Efficiency Office has frequent contacts with Neighbourhood Energy Action, whose grant from my Department was increased this year by over 50 per cent.

Sizewell Inquiry

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he has yet received the report of the inspector in relation to the Sizewell inquiry.

Mr. Goodlad: No.

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on (a) the annual quantities of depleted uranium that the Central Electricity Generating Board has sold, both within and outside the United Kingdom, for use in industrial and other processes not related to nuclear power and (b) the annual revenue obtained by the Central Electricity Generating Board from the sale of depleted uranium for industrial purposes.

Mr. Goodland: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Walthamstow (Mr. Deakins), on 23 July 1985, at column 474, on this subject. This has been the only sale of CEGB-owned depleted uranium for non-nuclear purposes. The value of the sale is a commercial matter for the CEGB.

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on (a) the industrial uses of depleted uranium in the United Kingdom, (b) which United Kingdom companies are currently utilising, or have in the past utilised, depleted uranium for these processes and (c) what are the future industrial uses of depleted uranium envisaged.

Mr. Goodlad: This information is only available at disproportionate cost.

Coal Consumption

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, further to his answer of 21 July on coal consumption, he can provide a more detailed breakdown, by sector, of coal consumption by the cement and other mineral products industry.

Mr. David Hunt: Provisional figures for disposals by the NCB of indigenous coal to the cement and other mineral products industries are:

	1985 000 tonnes
Cement	1,810
Other Mineral Products	185
Total	1,995

These figures exclude coal imports, deliveries to small industrial consumers and deliveries in Northern Ireland, whose allocation between industry sectors is not known.

British Gas Corporation

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will state his latest planned timetable for the privatisation of the British Gas Corporation.

Mr. Peter Walker: Now that the Gas Act 1986 has received Royal Assent, I intend that the Office for Gas Supply should be set up on 18 August and that the new regulatory arrangements for the gas industry set out in the Act (including those for the new Gas Consumers' Council) should come into force on 23 August. A copy of the authorisation which will be granted under section 7 of the Act permitting British Gas to operate as a public gas supplier will be placed in the Library of the House shortly. I intend that the transfer date when the property, rights and liabilities of the British Gas Corporation will be vested in British Gas plc will be 24 August.

Subject to market conditions I expect that the sale of British Gas shares should take place during the second half of November this year.

British Nuclear Fuels Ltd.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on the 14 May, Official Report, column 469, on British Nuclear Fuels Ltd.'s information campaign in 1986, he will state whether British Nuclear Fuels Ltd.'s operations to which he makes specific reference include the military responsibilities discharged by British Nuclear Fuels Ltd.

Mr. Goodlad: The scope of BNFL's programme of public information is a matter for the company. The company will ensure that national security is not compromised.

Nuclear Reactors

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to his answers of 23 June, Official Report, column 47 and 14 July, Official Report, column 388, he will specify the reactors of origin of each of the three amounts of nuclear material permanently withdrawn from safeguards.

Mr. Goodlad: The three permanent withdrawals from safeguards involved plutonium which originated in Calder Hall/Chapel Cross reactors.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will outline the nature and extent of the review of his Department's peacetime emergency plans following the Chernobyl disaster; whether, when completed, he will publish it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The Department's plans and procedures for civil nuclear emergencies are kept under constant review, and are regularly tested. They are being examined in the light of the Chernobyl accident.

Information and advice on the response to a nuclear incident is contained in a booklet published by the Health and Safety Executive entitled "Emergency Plans for Civil Nuclear Installations". More detailed plans and procedures are formulated and held by site operators, and these are updated as necessary.

Plutonium

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish the full details of (a) plutonium produced, (b) plutonium in spent fuel dispatched and (c) plutonium reprocessed for each week since 1 June and 1 December, at each of the civil magnox reactors operated by the Central Electricity Generating Board.

Mr. Goodlad: No.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether all official statements made by board members of the Central Electricity Generating Board on the production and use of plutonium created in Central Electricity Generating Board reactors have to be approved by his Department in advance.

Mr. Goodlad: No.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will state the total weight of plutonium exported for civil use since May 1979, and give the amount, by weight, exported to each country involved.

Mr. Goodlad [pursuant to the reply, 24 June 1986, c. 93]: In the period May 1979 to March 1986 a total of 2,115 kg of plutonium—in both separated form, and when present in irradiated fuel—has been exported for civil purposes. The countries to which plutonium has been exported in consignments larger than gram quantities are as follows:

Austria
Belgium
Canada

France
Federal Republic of Germany
Japan
Netherlands
Sweden
Switzerland
USA

Each country listed has a safeguards agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency. Information relating to individual country figures is commercially sensitive. I regret that Austria, Netherlands and Sweden were omitted in error from the list in my answer of 5 July 1985 at column 308. Total exports to these countries represented significantly less than 1 per cent. of the total.

Public Bodies

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish a list of all the bodies in Wales to which he has the sole or joint responsibility for making appointments.

Mr. Peter Walker: I appoint members to the South Wales Electricity Board and also the Merseyside and North Wales Electricity Board.

Mining Redundancies

Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has as to the monthly redundancy figures for each pit in the northern region since March 1985, and as to the (a) total and (b) average cost of redundancy payments over this period.

Mr. David Hunt: Redundancy figures for individual pits and for the north-east area for individual months prior to the current year are not available within the Department. The number of men on colliery books who took redundancy in the north-east area of the National Coal Board during the board's 1985-86 financial year and in each month of the current year was as follows:

	Number
1985-86	3,616
April 1986	62
June 1986	482

Information on redundancy payments under the redundant mineworkers payments scheme is available only on a national basis. During the period April 1985 to June 1986 total lump sum payments under the scheme were some £461 millions in respect of about 40,400 individuals, giving an average payment of some £11,400. In addition continuing weekly payments are normally available under the scheme to beneficiaries aged 50 or over on redundancy, up to a maximum of £109 per week. These benefits are additional to any redundancy lump sums payable by the employer under the terms of the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978.

Coal

Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has as to the changes in the pattern of demand for north-east coal over the past 10 years, and as to the major customers therefor.

Mr. David Hunt: The disposal arrangements for coal from the north-east are a matter for British Coal and other coal producers and their customers.

Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has as to future marketing plans for coal (a) inside and (b) outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. David Hunt: Future marketing plans for coal are a matter for the coal industry.

NCB (Enterprise) Ltd.

Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he has any plans to allocate funds to NCB (Enterprise) Ltd. on an area rather than a central basis.

Mr. David Hunt: No. This is a management matter for the NCB, which is responsible for funding NCB (Enterprise) Ltd.

Fluidised Bed Combustion

Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much money has been expended by his Department on the fluidised bed combustion system technology in each of the last five years; what are the projected figures for the next three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Departmental expenditure for British Coal's participation in the pressurised fluidised bed combustion work at Grimethorpe under International Energy Agency auspices averaged £3·3 million in each of the three years from 1981-82 to 1983-84. In 1984-85 ownership of that facility transferred to British Coal which will, until 1988, be engaged in a £28 million programme of work with the CEGB to provide engineering data needed before the technology can move to full scale demonstration. Alongside this study the Department, jointly with British Coal and the CEGB, is engaged in design studies of advanced power stations employing fluidised bed combustion technologies. The level of future funding will depend on the outcome of these studies.

South Africa

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will provide details of goods procured by his Department from (a) South Africa and (b) Namibia for each year from 1980 to 1985, including the total value for each year and the value of each category of items for each year.

Mr. Peter Walker: As far as I am aware there have been no purchases by my Department from either country during this period.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give details of all contracts involving his Department and majority-owned South African companies since June 1979.

Mr. Peter Walker: I am not aware of any such contracts but information on the shareholdings of the companies concerned is not separately recorded and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

British Gas

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about his Department's expenditure in connection with the intended sale of shares in British Gas.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith [pursuant to the reply, 24 April 1986, c. 222]: Following the announcement today of the Government's intention to vest the property, rights and liabilities of the British Gas Corporation in British Gas plc on 24 August, we shall be subscribing for equity in the company to enable it to obtain a certificate to commence business and to assume from the corporation the benefits, obligations and responsibilities for work done directly related to the flotation of the company. In accordance with my answer of 24 April, this will be financed by a repayable advance from the contingency fund, pending parliamentary approval of the Estimates.

PRIME MINISTER

Royal Wedding

Mr. John Fraser asked the Prime Minister what is the cost to public funds of the royal wedding on 23 July.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave yesterday to the hon. Member for Fife, Central (Mr. Hamilton).

United Kingdom (International Standing)

Mr. Sayeed asked the Prime Minister what measures Her Majesty's Government have taken since 1979 to increase the international standing of the United Kingdom.

The Prime Minister: Since 1979 we have been determined to increase the international standing of the United Kingdom as a country which plays its full part in shaping world events.

We have shown that Britain is a strong and reliable NATO ally. We have reinforced Britain's commitment to national defence and the NATO Alliance while working for improved East/West relations. We have worked for balanced and verifiable reductions of nuclear and conventional weapons as well as a global ban on chemical weapons.

Britain is playing a full and influential part within the European Community. We negotiated a settlement of the longstanding budgetary dispute. We have also put forward proposals for developing the Community, to reform the Common Agricultural Policy, to complete the internal market in goods and services, to develop the Community's technological competitiveness and to create employment.

We brought 15 years of illegality and civil war to an end and established the independent Republic of Zimbabwe.

We have maintained our commitments to our dependent territories. We recovered the Falkland Islands following an unprovoked Argentine invasion. We have reached agreement with China about the future of Hong Kong and as a result of agreements reached with Spain the Gibraltar border has been reopened.

We have reached an agreement with the Republic of Ireland to establish a new framework for co-operation aimed at promoting peace and stability in Northern Ireland.

The Government have made valuable contributions to aid, disaster relief and international peacekeeping and have used Britain's permanent membership of the Security Council to pursue constructive policies at the United Nations. Britain also participates actively in the Commonwealth and many other international organisations and fully supports the institution of the international financial system.

Finally, we have supported the international rule of law and respect for human rights. We have condemned Soviet aggression in Afghanistan and Vietnamese aggression in Cambodia. With our Commonwealth friends and European partners we are working to end apartheid by peaceful means. We have played a leading part in combating the menaces of international terrorism and international drug-trafficking.

Government Policies

Mr. Sayeed asked the Prime Minister what are the longer-term objectives of Government policies; and what policy initiatives she proposes to take to ensure that these objectives are fulfilled.

The Prime Minister: At home, the Government will maintain sound financial policies designed to bring about the defeat of inflation and to maintain the conditions for a sustained expansion of output and living standards. We will continue to pursue policies aimed at improving the prospects for employment, through a more flexible and competitive economy. We will encourage the spread of wealth and ownership and the return of state owned industries to the private sector. We will further increase incentives and remove barriers to initiative and enterprise. We will maintain firm control of public expenditure in order to leave room for further reductions in the burden of direct taxation.

We shall continue to improve training arrangements so that young people get a better preparation for work and adults obtain the skill needed in a changing work environment. The structure of vocational qualifications will be reformed. The Government will continue to pursue higher standards throughout all sectors of education. The lessons of the successful technical and vocational education i. iative will be extended to secondary schools across the country. In the Bill currently before Parliament, we are planning more effective arrangements for in-service training so as to improve the quality of teaching, and we are giving parents more say in what happens in their schools locally.

We shall continue to give high priority to encouraging the spread of individual home ownership. We also intend to give tenants a wider range of choice through measures to revive the private rented housing market and by promoting new more locally based types of ownership and management for public sector stock.

Our objectives in social security are to ensure soundly-based provision for people in retirement; to improve help for less-well-off families with children, including in particular those in low-paid jobs, and for the long-term sick and disabled; and to create a simpler, more up-to-date benefit system which is also more effective in meeting genuine special needs. We shall meet these objectives by continuing to protect the pension against price increases, and by extending rights to occupational and personal pensions; by carrying through the proposals of the Social Security Bill for an improved benefit structure including our new Family Credit; and by applying new technology throughout social security administration. We will encourage health authorities to make cost effective use of the increased resources we are making available to the health service so as to continue to improve the quality of service provided to patients. We are making a drive to reduce hospital waiting lists and waiting times. We shall bring to a conclusion our review of primary health care —the first since the Health Service was established 40 years ago. We shall continue to promote community care policies as the best means of improving the quality of life for those whose needs can most appropriately be met in this way.

We will continue to ensure that the trade union movement is more responsible and accountable to its members and that abuses are corrected. We will be developing our plans for a new system of local government finance to increase local accountability and, in the meanwhile, will be using our rate-capping legislation to protect households and businesses from excessive rate demands. We will seek improved efficiency and strengthened standards of conduct in local government. We will continue our policy of freeing publicly owned land for development and will take further action to secure this. We will also take further measures to simplify the planning system and improve its efficiency.

We shall vigorously uphold the rule of law and fight crime, especially drug abuse and crimes of violence. We will complete our revision of public order legislation.

Our policies on pollution will improve the environment, and our conservation policies will protect the best of our heritage. In the energy sector our policies will promote the best use of our rich endowment of natural resources and scientific and innovative talent, in a responsive, market-orientated environment.

The Government will continue to promote consumer choice and efficiency through competition in the provision of transport services, and will seek to ensure the provision of roads and other transport infrastructure that will bring benefits to users, having full regard to safety and the environment.

We will continue to contribute to peace with freedom and justice in Europe by maintaining effective defences in co-operation with our NATO allies. We will continue to discharge our defence responsibilities and protect British interests outside the NATO area. We will maintain our drive to secure better value for money from the defence budget, particularly through increased competition and international collaboration in the procurement of equipment.

Abroad, our basic objectives are to enhance the security and prosperity of the United Kingdom and the dependent terrorities; to promote and protect British interests overseas; and to keep Britain's international reputation high. We also want, and work for, greater co-operation and trust between East and West : I am looking forward to visiting Moscow in due course to meet Secretary-General Gorbachev again. We want to see progress in arms control negotiations and remain actively involved in efforts to bring this about.

The economic well-being of the United Kingdom, its allies and the developing countries depends on a smoothly-running international economic system. We are working with others to carry out the agreement reached at the Tokyo economic summit on close and continuous co-ordination of economic policies to promote non-inflationary economic growth and to improve exchange rate stability. We will promote freer and fairer trade between nations and will participate to this end in the proposed new round of trade negotiations in GATT.

We wish to see Europe playing its full part in international affairs. Within the European Community, we are working to improve Europe's competitive position in world trade; to create a single market for goods and services in the interests of prosperity and jobs; to adapt Community policies to current needs; and to achieve closer co-operation in foreign policy to strengthen Western democracy. The Government will seek the changes needed in the CAP, and through wider international co-operation, to enable agricultural production to be better adapted to the market situation, while ensuring that our industry remains competitive and is further encouraged to conserve and protect the rural environment.

We want to see human rights and the rule of law upheld internationally. We wish to see Soviet aggression in Afghanistan and Vietnamese aggression in Cambodia ended, so that both countries can regain their independence. We wish to see the apartheid system in South Africa removed by peaceful means and dialogue, rather than violence; we are pursuing this actively with our partners in the European Community and the Commonwealth, and with other industrialised nations. We wish to see the scope for international terrorism and drug-trafficking effectively reduced and are taking various initiatives to this end. We will continue to play a full part in international aid, disaster relief and peacekeeping, as well as in the United Nations, the Commonwealth and many other international bodies.

Government Departments (Computers)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Prime Minister what steps have been taken to ensure that the common plans to computerise records in the Department of Health and Social Security, Department of Employment, Inland Revenue and other Government Departments adequately protect individual privacy and freedom.

The Prime Minister: Normal safeguards will operate to ensure that information held by Government agencies is used only by authorised personnel for authorised purposes. All uses of personal data will be registered under the Data Protection Act 1984. When the Act comes fully into force in November 1987, individuals will have the right of access, within the terms of the Act, to data about themselves which is held by Government agencies.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Prime Minister if she will make it the policy of Her Majesty's Government to increase the current block grant to Scottish local authorities to take account of any additional funding necessary to implement any increases recommended by the report of the committee of inquiry into teachers' pay; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The question will fall to be considered when the recommendations of the committee of inquiry and the reaction of other parties to it are known.

Cabinet Office (Manpower)

Dr. McDonald asked the Prime Minister if she will publish in the Official Report the numbers of staff employed in the Cabinet Office, excluding Central Statistical Office and Management and Personnel Office staff for each year since 1979, but including the numbers of specialist and political advisers for each year since 1979, giving in each case, the costs based on the above figures.

The Prime Minister: The numbers of staff and specialist advisers employed in the Cabinet Office, excluding the Central Statistical Office and the Management and Personnel Office, each year since 1979 were:

	Staff	Specialist/ Advisers
31 March 1980	350	*6
31 March 1981	357	*8
31 March 1982	324	*11
31 March 1983	327	*10
31 March 1984	294	†3
31 March 1985	304	†3
31 March 1986	303	†3

*Includes two specialist advisers who were employed on an occasional fee-paid basis. The remainder were secondees to the Central Policy Review Staff.

†All employed on an occasional fee-paid basis.

No political advisers were employed by the Cabinet Office during the period.

The related running costs for the Cabinet Office were:

1983-84	10,886
1985-86	10,918

Financial information in any greater detail or prior to the 1983-84 financial year is not available except at disproportionate cost.

Pollution

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Prime Minister when the outcome of the efficiency scrutiny of the environmental pollution inspection functions carried out by the Health and Safety Executive in England and Wales will be published.

The Prime Minister: I am considering the recommendations and expect to announce a decision soon.

Clean Air Acts

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Prime Minister when the consultation document following the review of the Clean Air Acts will be published.

The Prime Minister: The Government expect to publish a consultation paper in the Autumn.

Armed Forces (Medical and Dental Officers)

Sir Antony Buck asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement about the pay of medical and dental officers in the armed forces.

The Prime Minister: The Armed Forces Pay Review Body has submitted to me a supplementary report on the pay of medical and dental officers in the armed forces. It recommends increases of between 3·4 per cent. and 7·1 per cent. according to rank with effect from 1 July 1986. This reflects the awards to civilian doctors and dentists that I announced in the House on 22 May 1986 at columns 239-40.

The Government have decided to accept in full the recommendations in the supplementary report on the pay of medical and dental officers. The report has been published as Cmnd. 9866 and copies are available in the Vote Office.

Search and Rescue Operations

Mr. Viggers asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the arrangements which exist between the Ministry of Defence and other Departments over recovering the cost of search and rescue operations.

The Prime Minister: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Party Conferences (Security)

Sir Ian Percival asked the Prime Minister if Her Majesty's Government will make funds available to assist with the provision of anti-terrorist security at party conferences; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Yes. I am aware that since the bomb at the Grand Hotel, Brighton, in 1984, a number of heavy security costs, especially to do with searching, are now incurred by political parties in connection with their conferences. In the view of the Government, the continuation of party conferences is essential to the public interest and the costs of these exceptional precautions, which will not be necessary in every case, should not be borne entirely by the parties themselves. Following discussions through the usual channels, therefore, the Government propose that a contribution towards these expenses should be made from public funds.

Under the Government's proposals the parties that would qualify for assistance would be those eligible under the scheme for financial assistance to Opposition parties in their parliamentary work (the "short money" scheme) together with the Government parties, but the scheme would not apply to conferences in Northern Ireland, where the arrangements for security are somewhat different.

It is proposed that payments from public funds should be made retrospectively against expenses incurred on specific measures, on the basis of certification provided by the chief officer of police whose force had been responsible for assessing the level of threat and the security measures required in consequence.

Discussion on detailed arrangements is now in hand. Parliamentary approval for expenditure will be sought in Supplementary Estimates. Pending that approval, any urgent expenditure will be financed initially by an advance from the contingencies fund. The working of the scheme will be kept under review.

I regret the necessity for this scheme. Party conferences have a special place in our democracy, however, and I am confident that in present circumstances these proposals to assist in safeguarding them will command general support.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Multi-fibre Arrangement

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will put in hand a fresh analysis on the number of jobs likely to be lost in the clothing and textile industries of the European Economic Community and of the United Kingdom if the multi-fibre arrangement is renewed on the terms proposed by the European Economic Community, to supersede the analysis produced by Professor Silberston in 1984.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Community's mandate provides for the continuation of effective MFA protection and I see no advantage in any fresh analysis of the effects of the arrangement.

Companies (Annual Returns)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many firms are in arrears with their annual returns to Companies House, categorised by the length of time of arrears of over three years, over two years and over one year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 24 July to my hon. Friend the Member for Hertfordshire West. The detailed figures requested by the hon. Gentleman are:

	Number of Companies	Per cent. of register of active companies
Active	786,000	100·0
Up to date with the filing of returns	693,000	88·2
Not up to date with the filing of annual returns (ie in default)	93,000	11·8
In default for one year or less	73,000	9·3
In default for between one and two years	9,500	1·2
In default for between two and three years	3,600	0·5
In default for more than three years	6,600	0·8

Internal Market Council

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Internal Market Council held on 24 July.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Council, which I chaired, adopted four measures in the Presidency action programme on completing the internal market. These were directives on training standards for general medical practitioners; procedures for the mutual recognition of type approval for telecommunications terminal equipment, the harmonisation of member states' requirements on the controls and indicators of agricultural and forestry tractors; and proposals for co-operation between higher education and industry for advanced training relating to new technologies (COMETT). The Council also adopted revised origin rules for trade between Spain and Portugal and made useful progress on other Internal Market Council proposals, notably on a package of five measures on the marketing and testing of pharmaceutical products and on labelling of noise emitted by domestic appliances. The Council welcomed a report by the Commission on progress towards the implementation of the single administration document on 1 January 1988.

Funeral Business

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and industry what information he has regarding the average profitability of (a) firms in the funeral business and (b) comparable firms of similar size.

Mr. Howard: None.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if, in view of evidence of overcharging and lack of choice, he will refer the competitive position in the funeral industry to the Office of Fair Trading;

(2) if he will require all funeral directors to display their charges in the window of their premises.

Mr. Howard: I understand that the Office of Fair Trading is to carry out a review of consumer experience of the funeral industry including an assessment of the effectiveness of the code of practice of the National Association of Funeral Directors. This review is likely to begin later this year, but in the meantime, I understand that the office would be prepared to receive any relevant evidence of consumer problems in this area.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what evidence he has of variations in prices for funerals, and of regional differences; and how many complaints have been received by his Department in the last five years.

Mr. Howard: My Department has received around 55 representations concerning funeral prices in the last five years. I understand that the price can vary according to the type of service requested but I have no evidence of regional differences.

Civil Defence

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects his Department's study on the role of industry in civil defence to be completed; and when it will be published.

Mr. Peter Morrison: It is hoped that substantial progress will be made with this work over the next year. By its nature such work will remain subject to updating and review. The exercise is necessarily confidential, and its results will not be published.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will describe the terms of reference of his forthcoming study on the role of industry in civil defence; and if he will name those individuals and organisations which have been consulted.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The study involves an assessment of the essential requirements which industry would be called upon to supply for civil defence purposes in a period of crisis or war, and industry's capacity to meet them. As well as consultation with other Government Departments, confidential discussions with parts of industry are planned.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will outline the nature and extent of the review of his Department's peacetime emergency plans following the Chernobyl disaster; whether, when completed, he intends to publish it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Department is playing its part in the Government's examination of the impact of the Chernobyl incident for civil emergency planning. In the light of this review any changes to contingency plans will of course be notified to all those who would be involved in implementing them should the need arise in the future.

Public Bodies

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a list of all the bodies in Wales to which he has the sole or joint responsibility for making appointments.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend makes appointments to many bodies, some of whose activities take place in Wales, and, in consultation with the Welsh Office, to some specifically Welsh bodies such as the Welsh Consumer Council and the transport users consultative committee for Wales. A full list of the bodies to which the Secretary of State has the responsibility for making appointments is contained in the 1985 Edition of "Public Bodies" a copy of which is available in the Library.

Allied-Lyons

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has yet received the report from the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the proposed bid for Allied-Lyons by Elders IXL; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: No. It was announced on 29 May that my right hon. Friend had decided, following representations from the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, that the reporting period should be extended to 4 September 1986.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing imports and exports, respectively, as a percentage of gross domestic product in the United Kingdom; and how this compares with each of the other European Economic Community countries.

Mr. Allan Clark: The information is in the following table:

	Exports	Imports
Belgium/Luxembourg	79·9	78·3
Denmark	36·9	35·8

EC (Manufactures and Consumer Prices)

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for the United Kingdom and for each of the European Economic Community countries the change in the ratio of export unit values for manufactures to the wholesale price of (a) manufactures and (b) consumer prices between 1956 and 1985, 1966 and 1985 and 1976 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Romanian Minibus Chassis

Mr. Stott asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many Romanian minibus chassis have been imported into the United Kingdom during the last three months.

South Africa

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give details of all contracts involving his Department and majority-owned South African companies since June 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: Details of departmental contracts since 1979 differentiated on the basis of company ownership could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will provide details of goods procured by his Department from (a) South Africa and (b) Namibia for each year from 1980 to 1985, including the total value for each year and the value of each category of items for each year.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information required could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will provide details of all assistance provided by his Department for (a) trade to South Africa and (b) investment in South Africa.

Mr. Alan Clark: BOTB and ECGD assistance continues to be available in principle to United Kingdom exporters and investors in South Africa, with the exception of financial assistance for trade missions to South Africa and for participation in trade fairs there.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will provide an estimate of (a) new investment and (b) loans from the United Kingdom to South Africa for the years 1980 to 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Export Prices

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will bring up to date the information on relative export prices and other matters given in reply to a question from the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 22 October 1979, Official Report, columns 56-60.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is in the following table. Index numbers are now based on 1980 = 100.

Manufactures

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1956 the value of (a) imports and (b) exports of manufactures as a percentage to one place of decimals of (i) gross domestic product and (ii) manufacturing output.

Mr. Pattie: Available information is given in the following tables:

Profits (Manufacturing and Financial Sectors)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing at current and at 1986 prices the profits of (a) manufacturing and (b) the financial sector in the latest year for which figures are available and in (i) 1956, (ii) 1966 and (iii) 1976; and if he will include figures for each year since 1956 of the rate of return in each case on an historic cost basis.

Mr. Pattie: It is not possible to make a meaningful comparison of profits and rates of return between manufacturing companies and financial companies from the available statistics.

Banking

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the top 50 United Kingdom private sector employers, excluding companies engaged in banking, finance or insurance, showing in each case the number of employees employed in the United Kingdom and giving available information about part-time workers.

Mr. Howard: Following the Companies Act 1981, companies are required to report their total employment whether in the United Kingdom or abroad. For the last available information on United Kingdom employment I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Industry gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wiltshire, North (Mr. Needham) on 29 March 1984 at columns 257-60.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will list the top 20 United Kingdom employers among companies engaged in banking, insurance, and finance showing in each case the number of employees employed in the United Kingdom and giving available information about part-time workers;

(2) if he will list the top 20 foreign company employers in the United Kingdom, including companies engaged in banking, insurance and finance showing in each case the number of employees employed in the United Kingdom and giving available information about part-time workers.

Mr. Howard: The information is not available.

Rover Group

Mr. Norris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards financial assurances to any parts of the Rover Group that may be disposed of.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Previous Ministerial statements that the Government will ensure that the obligations of the (then) BL Group are met are unaffected by BL's change in name to the Rover Group. However, in each case after the completion of the sale of Leyland Bus Ltd and of the majority of the Rover Group's shareholding in Unipart Group Ltd, and notwithstanding the Rover Group's continuing minority shareholding in Unipart Group Ltd, the Government will accept no further responsibility for ensuring that the obligations of either company are met.

Companies Acts (Fraud)

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many prosecutions have taken place for alleged breaches of the Companies Act 1985 and associated Acts concerned with fraud for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985 and which were initiated by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Details of prosecutions under the Companies Act for 1983 and 1984 are given in the Annual Reports laid before both Houses of Parliament which are available in the Library of the House. The annual report for 1985 will be published shortly.

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many investigations concerning alleged breaches of the Companies Act 1985 and associated Acts concerned with fraud have been undertaken by his Department for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Details of investigations under the Companies Act for 1983 and 1984 are given in the annual reports laid before both Houses of Parliament which are available in the Library of the House. The annual report for 1985 will be published shortly.

International Tin Council

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if the International Tin Council has taken on any new heads of expenditure in 1986-87; and what proportion of the United Kingdom's contribution is taken up thereby;

(2) pursuant to the answers on 22 July, why the United Kingdom's contribution to the administrative budget for the International Tin Council has risen to £76,117 in 1986-87; why the number of staff employed has fallen from 39 to 19; if he will specify the amount of the United Kingdom contribution devoted to staff pay; and if he will itemise what the £76,117 is to be spent on.

Mr. Alan Clark: Details of the administrative budget of the International Tin Council are confidential. However, the Council expects to have to incur increased expenses in 1986-87 in dealing with the legal actions brought by its creditors. The fall in the number of staff employed in 1986-87 reflects the reduced role of the Council following the cessation of buffer stock operations. There are termination payments associated with staff reductions.

SCOTLAND

Matrimonial Homes Act

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is satisfied with the working of the Matrimonial Homes Act.

Mr. John MacKay: The Government are continuing to monitor the operation of the 1981 Act. Research commissioned by the Scottish Home and Health Department into the working of the Act has almost been completed and we shall be studying the findings of this research with a view to deciding whether further guidance or action on the part of Government is desirable.

Community Programme

Mr. Prescott asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans exist for new community programme opportunities to be provided by his Department.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The further expansion of the community programme announced in the March 1986 Budget has given Scotland an additional 2,250 places. The new target is 31,400 filled places to be achieved by the end of November 1986.

The additional places in Scotland all represent opportunities for individuals and sponsors. For example a community programme national initiative on crime prevention was launched in Scotland on 21 July 1986, which will involve several hundred new opportunities in 1986-87 alone.

Consultants

Mr. Mates asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by his Department in 1985, with the name of the consultants concerned.

Mr. Rifkind: The following contracts which were let in the financial year 1985-86 are relevant:

Contract and Subject	Consultant
Redesign of central module of Financial Management Initiative Training for the Scottish Office	Inbucon Management Consultants Ltd.
Survey of costs incurred by practising Solicitors in Scotland	Ernst & Whinney
Design and Specification of a Management Control and Information System for the Royal Botanic Garden	Price Waterhouse
Design and Specification of a Management Control and Information System for National Galleries (Scotland)	Inbucon Management Consultants Ltd.

Since the Scottish Office does not maintain central records of all the contracts that might be relevant it is not possible without disproportionate cost to be sure that the above list is comprehensive. If my hon. Friend will let me know of any particular point he wishes to pursue I will be glad to look into it.

House Condition Survey

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received from Scottish local authorities about a house condition survey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: In the last three months, representations have been received directly from one local authority about a national house condition survey. In addition, representations have been made from time to time by the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities as part of its current campaign for such a survey.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on 6 May at column 13.

To assist local authorities which may be contemplating a local house condition survey in their area, the Scottish Development Department is undertaking a research project on the conduct of local surveys, the results of which will be published as part of the "Scottish Housing Handbook".

Sports Clubs (Rates)

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received from amateur sport clubs about rates; and if he will make a statememt.

Mr. Ancram: Over 100 representations about rates have been received this year from or on behalf of amateur sports clubs. The Government are concerned that rates bills are a present source of anxiety, but we consider that in the longer term sports clubs will benefit from the proposals for rates reform outlined in the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" (Cmnd. 9714), including harmonisation of Scottish and English valuation practice. For the shorter term, as my right hon. and learned Friend reminded the House on 23 July 1986 following his statement about rate support grant at column 358, rating authorities have discretion to reduce up to 100 per cent. of the rates payable by sports clubs. The total contribution from the national taxpayer to local authorities in the rate support grant settlement for 1987-88 leaves authorities plenty of scope to exercise that discretion.

Colleges of Education

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received about the future of Scottish colleges of education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to my replies to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 27 March at column 591-93 and to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on 11 July at column 300. Since his oral statement on 17 July at column 1187-88, my right hon. and learned Friend has received two further representations from my hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, West (Lord James Douglas-Hamilton).

Educational Bursaries

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he makes for the purpose of his policy on educational bursaries of the extent of the difference in the position of parents living in the rural regions of Scotland compared with those living in towns with colleges.

Mr. Allan Stewart: In response to representation about the position of parents whose children must leave home to undertake courses of further education, I am taking steps to enable education authorities to exercise more discretion in determining the parental contribution relating to individual bursaries. The Education Authority Bursaries (Scotland) Regulations 1986, which are being laid before Parliament today, will bring this change into effect from 18 August 1986.

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to which local authorities in Scotland classify all educational bursaries under category B.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Education Authority Bursaries (Scotland) Regulations 1985 provide that full-time further education bursaries granted to persons until they have attained the age of 18 are classed as category A bursaries, and those granted to persons who have reached that age as category B. In the latest academic session for which information is available (1984-85) all education authorities in Scotland paid both category A and category B bursaries to further education students; all authorities also paid higher school bursaries, which are not subject to classification according to age.

Central Scotland (Crime Statistics)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for 1985 the numbers of (a) reported crimes and (b) solved crimes in the central Scotland police authority area for each of the following categories and, in each case, the percentage increase or decrease since 1978 (i) violence against the person, (ii) burglary, (iii) theft/handling of stolen goods, (iv) fraud/forgery, (v) criminal damage and (vi) other; and if he will give the total figures for both years.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is set out in the table:

Crimes recorded and cleared up in the central Scotland police force area

Crime	Crimes recorded			Crimes cleared up
	1978	1985	Percentage change	1978	1985	Percentage change
Violence against the person	273	522	+91	249	482	+94
Burglary	2,711	4,048	+49	801	1,275	+59
Theft/handling of stolen goods	6,657	8,773	+32	2,735	3,692	+35
Fraud/forgery	501	1,445	+188	433	1,151	+166
Criminal damage	2,745	4,288	+56	706	1,326	+88
Other crimes	574	1,025	+79	476	938	+97
Total crimes	13,461	20,101	+49	5,400	8,864	+64

Notes:

The categories listed above have been derived from the categories of the Scottish crime classification as follows:

"Violence against the person": all non-sexual crimes of violence (group 1 of the standard classification) apart from robbery, those crimes of indecency (group 2) which contain a violent element, and certain crimes involving malicious and reckless conduct.

"Burglary": housebreaking.

"Theft/handling of stolen goods": opening lockfast places and clandestine removal in addition of theft per se, plus reset.

"Fraud and forgery": fraud, forgery and uttering, bankruptcy and currency offences.
"Criminal damage": fire-raising, vandalism and other crimes of malicious and reckless conduct not involving violence against the person.
"Other crimes": all crimes other than those included above.

Primary Schools (Rural Areas)

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy towards small primary schools in rural areas; and whether his Department gives regional authorities guidelines on appropriate criteria for closures.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The special circumstances of primary schools in remote areas are recognised in the requirement that authorities must seek the consent of my right hon. and learned Friend to any proposals for closure where the intended receiving school is five or more miles distant from that to be closed. No guidelines have been issued by the Scottish Education Department on criteria for school closures; each case must be considered on its merits and in the light of its special circumstances. But at a time of declining pupil numbers and limited resources it is essential that education authorities keep under review the pattern of school provision in their areas.

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance he gives to regional authorities on the position of one-teacher primary schools in rural areas.

Mr. Allan Stewart: No guidance is given by my right hon. and learned Friend which specifically relates to one-teacher schools.

Plutonium

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the full details of (a) plutonium produced, (b) plutonium in spent fuel despatched and (c) plutonium reprocessed for each week since 1 June and 1 December at each of the civil magnox reactors operated by the South of Scotland Electricity Board.

Mr. Allan Stewart: No.

Agricultural Advisory Services

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will introduce a concessionary rate of charges for agricultural advisory services sought by registered crofters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The Scottish agricultural colleges are currently giving consideration to the full range of agricultural advisory services for which charges are to be made, and the prices at which these services will be offered, taking account of the wide variety of circumstances within the Scottish agricultural community. No final decisions have yet been made.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will exempt from the expenditure guidelines issued to local authorities the spending which they incur in supplying places under the YTS and other special measures concerned with the relief of unemployment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: In Scotland, Government expenditure on the new two-year YTS alone is expected to be over £90 million in 1986-87. Since, like any other employer, local authorities stand to benefit from a better trained work force as a result of participation in the new YTS, I see no case for exempting their contribution from comparison with the guidelines which cover local authority expenditure as a whole. Such exemptions or disregards are only made in very exceptional circumstances. I wrote to the hon. Member about this on 22 July.

Some local authorities choose voluntarily to add to the Government funds available for employment measures such as the community programme, particularly for participants' wages. Such decisions are for local authorities to make in the light of their own priorities.

The participation of local authorities in YTS and employment measures is greatly appreciated and I hope it will continue.

NHS (General Managers)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he intends to supplement from central funds the enhanced salaries of Health Service unit general managers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Consultation on the extension of general management function to units in the NHS in Scotland concluded on 18 July. I am now considering the comments received and I hope to be able to issue final guidance on the implementation of unit general management in the very near future.

Implementation of general management at board and unit levels will be contained within existing management cost limits. I expect the development of general management to lead to greater efficiency in the use of resources.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much Health Service expenditure as an absolute figure and as a percentage of total National Health Service expenditure in Scotland for each of the past 10 years was spent on (a) elderly and geriatric services, (b) community services, (c) the mentally handicapped, (d) the mentally ill, (e) obstetric services and (f) acute services.

Mr. John MacKay: I regret that information is not readily available in the form requested. I shall write to the hon. Member and arrange for a copy of my letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Scottish Certificate of Education Higher Music Examinations

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes have been notified to him regarding the arrangements for the 1987 Scottish certificate of education higher music examinations.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Scottish Examination Board wrote on 30 June 1986 to education authorities and schools setting out the changes to be introduced in the SCE higher grade music examination in 1987. I am sending the hon. Member a copy of the letter and placing a further copy in the House of Commons Library.

Hepatitis B Immunisation

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when the joint committee on vaccination and immunisation recommendations on hepatitis B immunisation will be put into effect; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Mackay: The joint committee on vaccination and immunisation has not yet made any recommendations on this question, and I am therefore unable to comment on the matter.

Commonwealth Games

Mr. Fletcher asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will assess the damage done to the financial arrangements for the Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh by the number of countries now boycotting these games; and if he will make a statement of his intentions regarding Government financial assistance in these unforseen circumstances.

Mr. Rippon asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will arrange for Her Majesty's Government to make a contribution to the expenses of the Commonwealth games deducting the cost from aid currently earmarked for Commonwealth countries who have boycotted the games.

Mr. Allan Stewart: It is for the organisers to assess the financial implications of the last-minute withdrawals from the Commonwealth Games. The organisers have not asked for Government financial assistance. My right hon. and learned Friend and I congratulate them on their determination to make the games a financial success.

Legal Aid

Mr. Martin asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the rate of refusal of legal aid applications in Scottish courts, categorised by (a) the area and (b) the level of the courts concerned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mr. Craigen) on 16 June at column 420.

Derelict Land

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much derelict land has been reclaimed by regional area in Scotland for each year from 1975 to 1985; how much funding was available for each year; and if any year was underspent.

Mr. Allan Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 9 May 1986, c. 294]: Following is the information requested:

National Health Service

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out the (a) gross and (b) net of charges expenditure, current and capital, on the National Health Service and personal social services for each year from 1971 to 1986-87 for Scotland for (a) hospital and community health services, (b) family practitioner committees and their predecessors, (c) centrally funded National Health Service services, and (d) personal social services, with the percentage increase deflated by (i) gross domestic product, (ii) retail price index and (iii) pay and prices.

Mr. John MacKay [pursuant to his reply, 21 July 1986, c. 30-31]: The information requested is set out in the following tables.

Notes:

1. There are no Family Practitioner Committees in Scotland. Since 1974, Family Practitioner Services have been administered by Health Boards. Administration costs are included in the Hospitals and Community Health Service totals.
2. Hospitals and Community Health Service expenditure before 1974-75 does not include certain Community Health functions previously carried out by local authorities.
3. No separate NHS pay and price factors are available for Scotland. The factors used are those maintained by DHSS for England.
4. Due to reorganisation, the local authority financial year 1975-76 lasted only 10¼ months (16 May 1975 to 31 March 1976). The personal social services expenditure figures for that year are therefore not comparable and have not been deflated.
5. The local authority elements of expenditure included in the PSS totals exclude loans and loan charges.

DEFENCE

Military Aircraft

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Defence how service aircraft replacements are costed; what was the value of military aircraft listed as destroyed in the defence White Paper; and if there was any residual value in such aircraft.

Mr. Lee: Most initial orders for service aircraft include an allowance for forecast attrition and therefore one-for-one replacement of aircraft lost in accidents does not normally arise. The notional value for accounting purposes of aircraft listed as destroyed in the 1986 Statement on Defence Estimates was £74 million based on the current production cost or, if the type is no longer in production, the original cost uprated to current prices. In both cases an allowance for depreciation has been applied. Whenever the aircraft is recoverable, serviceable parts are reused or utilised as ground training aids. The small residual element is sold as scrap.

Royal Marines

Sir Patrick Wall asked the Secretary of State for defence whether he is in a position to make a statement on the future provisions of amphibious warfare ships and craft for the Royal Marines.

Mr. Lee: I have nothing further to add to what I said on this matter in the debate on the Defence Estimates on 1 July at column 859.

Cruise Missiles (Convoys)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which a cruise convoy support vehicle overturned on the A339 on the morning of Tuesday 22 July; and on how many previous occasions such accidents have happened involving similar vehicles.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that the driver of a vehicle belonging to the United States Air Force was forced to swerve suddenly to avoid several demonstrators who deliberately stepped into the road in front of the vehicle on the A339 near Kingsclere. The vehicle did not overturn but a trailer it was towing, and which contained miscellaneous field and personal equipment, did. There were no casualties. I am not aware of any similar incidents which have been caused in this way but such activity by demonstrators is clearly both irresponsible and dangerous.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost to his Department of policing the cruise missile convoys on their exercises.

Mr. Freeman: It is not the practice, for both operational and security reasons, to give details of matters relating to exercises conducted by nuclear missile units.

Woolwich Arsenal (Pigeon Infestation)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence what further temporary roof repairs are required at building 10 in the Woolwich Arsenal to prevent pigeon infestation; and when the necessary work will be carried out.

Mr. Freeman: The inner ceiling of building 10 is inspected regularly and maintenance work carried out as necessary to ensure that the ceiling remains intact and in a safe condition. It is intended to replace the roof of building 10 completely in due course.

Plessey (Takeover)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he submitted any evidence to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission regarding the proposed takeover of Plessey by the General Electric Company.

Mr. Lee: Yes.

Cruise Missiles (Securicor Vans)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the role of the Securicor vans which accompany the cruise missile convoy on its exercises; if the radiation symbols attached to these vans relate to the performance of this duty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Securicor vans do not accompany convoys of cruise missile vehicles on exercises.

Quality Assurance

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those divisions and branches of the Directorate General of Defence Quality Assurance which are located at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich.

Public Bodies

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of all the bodies in Wales to which he has the sole or joint responsibility for making appointments.

Mr. Freeman: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Defence Secretariat 19

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to the answer of 11 July, he will state the current posting of each former member of defence secretariat 19; what is the function of the sections to which they are currently posted in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The former head of DS19, Mr. J. K. Ledlie, is now the chief of public relations in the MOD. Three of the other former members of the division have resigned from the Civil Service. One has taken up a posting overseas with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and another is serving in the Cabinet Office. Of the remaining two, one is serving in the MOD public relations organisation and one in an equipment secretariat division in the Procurement Executive.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence how his Department now carries out the functions formerly carried out by defence secretariat 19; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces gave on 21 July, at column 71, setting out the functions of the disbanded defence secretariat 19. These functions are now carried out as part of the duties of the defence arms control unit in conjunction, as appropriate, with other branches in the Department.

US Aircraft (UK Bases)

Mr. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the designations of all United States tactical and strategic reconnaisance aircraft whih have flown from RAF airbases in the United Kingdom in 1986.

Mr. Freeman: The following United States tactical and strategic reconnaisance aircraft are based in the United Kingdom: SR71 and RC135 at RAF Mildenhall; TR1 and RF4 at RAF Alconbury. The United States authorities have confirmed that in addition EP3 and U2 reconnaissance aircraft visited the United Kingdom during 1986.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the European repair facility for the ground-launched cruise missile will be located in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Freeman: The European repair facility for the ground-launched cruise missile will be located in Belgium.

Mr. Freeman: Details of NATO force goals are classified.

United States Stealth Aircraft

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether United States aircraft using new stealth technology have flown from any Royal Air Force bases in 1986.

Mr. Freeman: The United States authorities have made no request to my Department to operate any such aircraft from any RAF base in 1986.

United States Aircraft (Mildenhall)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what were the designations of all United States aircraft which have flown from Royal Air Force Mildenhall in 1986.

Mr. Freeman: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the designations of all aircraft which the United States authorities have requested to operate from Royal Air Force Mildenhall.

Mr. Freeman: The following United States Air Force aircraft are normally based at RAF Mildenhall:

C12
C130
EC 135
KC 135
RC 135
SR 71

South Africa

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will give details of all contracts involving his Department and majority-owned South African companies since June 1979;

(2) if he will provide details of goods procured by his Department from (a) South Africa and (b) Namibia for each year from 1980 to 1985, including the total value for each year and the value of each category of items for each year.

Mr. Lee: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate effort.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 489, if he will specify the nature of the chemical weapons force goal addressed to the United States; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I assume the hon. Member is referring to my right hon. Friend's reply to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 15 July at column 489. I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend's reply to the hon. Member for Burnley at Mr. Pike on 17 June at column 885.

Animals (Project Licensing)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence what preparations his Department is making to comply with the terms of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 relating to the project licensing system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 is expected to come into force during 1987. The Ministry of Defence is in touch with the Home Office about the project licences needed for its work and will apply for these as and when required.

British Nuclear Fuels (Enrichment Services)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has held, or has any intention of holding, discussions with the chairman of British Nuclear Fuels plc on the contract for the provision by British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. of enrichment services to his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: I have no plans to meet the chairman of British Nuclear Fuels plc concerning the contract for the enrichment services provided by BNFL, the basis for which was announced by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence on 23 June 1982 at column 128-29. My officials are of course in regular contact with the company concerning the progress of the contract, which is proceeding according to plan.

Military Attachés

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence what contacts the military attachés to Her Majesty's embassies in (a) Mexico, (b) Nicaragua, (c) Honduras, (d) El Salvador, (e) Costa Rica and (f) Belize have had with the respective armed forces in those countries in the last year.

Mr. Freeman: We have normal diplomatic relations with all six countries, including a defence element, although we do not have a defence adviser accredited to Belize. There is regular contact between United Kingdom defence personnel and the armed forces of these countries.

Chile

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence what contacts representatives of the armed forces have had with the Chilean military forces in the last year.

Mr. Freeman: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Islington, North on 24 July.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many courtesy visits by Her Majesty's armed forces have occured with Chile in the past year; and on what dates.

Mr. Freeman: Courtesy visits have been made by Her Majesty's ships to Chilean ports on the following occasions during the last year:

HMS Avenger, HMS Danae and RFA Olwen
August 1985

HMS Herald
October 1985

HMS Olympus
January 1986

HMS Onslaught
July 1986

Sea Wolf

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he is yet able to say when contracts will be allocated for work on the Sea Wolf missile; and what proportion of them will be by competitive tender;

(2) when tenders were issued relating to Sea Wolf missile contracts; and what is the closing date for bids.

Mr. Lee: It is assumed that the hon. Member is referring to the conventional launch Sea Wolf missile. The most recent production order was placed with British Aerospace plc in March 1984. It was not subject to competitive tender. No decision has yet been taken on the purchase of additional missiles.

Royal Aircraft Establishment, Farnborough

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the effect of his proposals to lease the enclave at Royal Aircraft Establishment, Farnborough, for business aviation upon the 1988 air show and those following; and what representations he has received on the matter from the Society of British Aerospace Companies.

Mr. John Lee: The implications for the biennial SBAC air shows have been taken fully into account throughout the development of proposals for a civil enclave at the Royal Aircraft Establishment, Farnborough. Discussions have been held with the SBAC on many occasions during this period by both Ministers and officials.

Exercise Brave Defender

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement about Exercise Brave Defender.

Mr. George Younger: Last October my predecessor informed the House that he was placing in the Library an unclassified initial assessment of Exercise Brave Defender. This gave our initial judgment that the exercise had been an overall success and in particular demonstrated that the revised military home defence concept for guarding vital installations worked in practice.

The exercise was not designed to test our total military home defence capability nor could it realistically simulate wartime conditions in the nation as a whole. Nevertheless, further detailed analysis has confirmed our first impressions. We were particularly pleased with the co-operation between all three Services, the integration of United States forces and the participation of the reserves on such a large scale. The participation of civilian police forces nationwide was particularly useful since it under lined the fact that the primary responsibility for the internal security of the United Kingdom rests with the police. Following the exercise, studies are under way into improvements to mobilisation procedures; refinements in the deployment of static and mobile guard forces in the defence of vital installations; and the training and equipment available for Home Defence Forces.

We intend to build on the foundation of Brave Defender by conducting further military home defence exercises on both a local and national scale; although no date has yet been fixed for any future national exercise.

Practice Bomb, Friskney

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the circumstances surrounding the dropping of a practice bomb in a field near Friskney, Lincolnshire, on 11 July.

Mr. Freeman [pursuant to his answer, 22 July]: In the course of a routine training sortie at Wainfleet range a USAF F-111 from RAF Upper Heyford accidentally released a practice bomb outside the range area. The practice bomb fell in open country to the north west of the range and has since been recovered.

Practice bomb on the F-111 are carried in underwing pods with bomb doors which are closed except when the aircraft is over the designated range area. In this incident, investigation has shown that an electrical system short-circuited just as the bomb doors were closing as the aircraft recovered from a normal bomb release over the range.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Divorce

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many divorces there have been in the Province in each of the past five years for which figures are available; and if he will express these figures as a rate in respect of marriages;

(2) if he will now reply to the question from the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow tabled for priority written answer on 4 July, 24W, concerning divorces in the Province.

Mr. Scott: The information is as follows:

Year	Number of divorces (Decrees Absolute)	Divorce rate per 1,000 marriages
1981	1,355	14·1
1982	1,387	14·0
1983	1,678	16·8
1984	1,547	14·9
1985	1,602	15·5

Antrim RUC Station

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will pay an official visit to Antrim Royal Ulster Constabulary police station.

Mr. Scott: I make regular visits to RUC stations. It is not, however, my practice to give details of such visits in advance.

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if special circumstances exist which render visits by hon. Members or dignitaries to Antrim Royal Ulster Constabulary police station more difficult than to other comparable police stations in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Information on these matters is not available. They fall within the operational responsibility of the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many official visits have been made by Royal Ulster Constabulary officers based at Antrim Royal Ulster Constabulary station to schools in the area covered by Antrim Royal Ulster Constabulary station in the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986 to the latest available date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 17 July 1986, c. 619]: Although this is a matter for the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, I understand that the information is not readily available and it could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many times the Royal Ulster Constabulary chief constable visited Antrim Royal Ulster Constabulary station in the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986 to the latest available date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 17 July 1986, c. 619]: This is a confidential matter for the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if any visits to Antrim Royal Ulster Constabulary station by dignataries were (i) requested and (ii) allowed for Saturday 12 July; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many notifications of (a) parades, (b) demonstrations, (c) major sporting events and (d) other major events the Royal Ulster Constabulary received which were scheduled to take place in Antrim during the afternoon of Saturday 7 June;

(3) how many notifications of (a) parades, (b) demonstrations, (c) major sporting events and (d) other major events the Royal Ulster constabulary received which were scheduled to take place in Antrim during the morning of Saturday 7 June.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 17 July 1986, c. 619-20]: Information on these matters is not available. They fall within the operational responsibility of the chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officers of the Royal Ulster Constabulary are involved in the detection of misuse of drugs.

Mr. Scott: There are currently 26 officers full-time in the Royal Ulster Constabulary drugs squad with a further nine officers on temporary attachment.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with which police forces in Europe the Royal Ulster Constabulary have the facility of direct contact in co-operation to detect illegal drugs.

Mr. Scott: The Royal Ulster Constabulary has established effective contact with most police forces in Europe through Interpol and the National Drugs Intelligence Unit at New Scotland Yard.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the extent of involvement of paramilitary organisations in the misuse of drugs and drug trading; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 18 July 1986]: While a number of persons who may have paramilitary links have been prosecuted for drugs offences, there is no evidence at present that paramilitary groupings are involved on an organised basis.

Kidnap Insurance

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent representations he has received on the subject of kidnap insurance as it affects security in the Province.

Mr. Scott: The only representations my right hon. Friend has received recently are those from the hon. Member.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the effectiveness of the Royal Ulster Constabulary has been affected by the Stalker and Sampson inquiries.

Mr. Scott: This is a matter for the Chief Constable, but I understand he is satisfied that the inquiry itself is having little, if any, impact on the overall effectiveness of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. However he is concerned that ill-founded and distorted speculation and comment in the media about the inquiry could adversely affect the morale, and therefore the effectiveness, of officers other than those who are directly involved.

Security

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation in the Province.

Mr. Scott: Since 1 July there have been seven deaths in incidents arising from the security situation in the Province. Three of those killed were civilians, two were members of the Regular Army, one was a member of the UDR and one was a police officer.

In their continuing effforts to prevent terrorist activity the police have so far this year charged 404 people with serious offences. This includes six charged with murder. In the same period 129 weapons, 16,279 rounds of ammunition and 1,498 lbs of explosives have been recovered.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will institute inquiries into the allegations about security in Northern Ireland contained in a letter recently sent to him by the hon. Member for Great Grimsby about the case of James Wallace.

Mr. Scott: My right hon. Friend has received no such letter from the hon. Member.

Rothmans Cigarette Factory, Carrickfergus

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in which of the last five financial years grants have been made to the Rothmans cigarette factory at Carrickfergus; whether any of these moneys are now repayable to the Government on the closure of the factory; what restrictions there are on the Rothmans company selling plant and machinery purchased with grant aid or transferring such plant and machinery to manufacturing units elsewhere in the United Kingdom and abroad.

Dr. Boyson: Grants have been paid in each of the years 1981-1982 to 1985-86 and have amounted in total to £3·249 million. Some £144,000 is now repayable, being grant in respect of machinery which had been in use for less than four years on the date of closure of the Carrickfergus factory. There are no restrictions on the sale of grant-aided machinery which has been in use by Rothmans for more than four years.

Housing Executive

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of architectural staff employed by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive; and what was the number of dwellings approved in new Housing Executive contracts in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive but I understand from the chairman that the information on the numbers of architectural staff employed by the executive is not available in the precise form requested. The following figures for the past six years include not only architects and architectural technicians, but administrative staff working in support of architectural staff.

Year ending	Number of staff
1980-81	162
1981-82	167
1982-83	193
1983-84	204
1985-86	207

Details of dwellings approved in new Housing Executive contracts in each of the past 10 years are provided in table 4 to "Northern Ireland Housing Statistics" published by the Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland) earlier this month. I have arranged for copies of this publication to be placed in the Library.

Ford Plant, Belfast

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial assistance has been provided by his Department for the modernisation of the Ford Motor company plant at Belfast.

Dr. Boyson: In accordance with normal practice, the form and amount of assistance offered will be published in due course in British Business, copies of which are placed in the Library.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had over the past 12 months with the Ford Motor Company about the future of the Ford Belfast plant.

Dr. Boyson: Officials of the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland have been in discussion with Ford about the future of the Belfast plant for more than two years. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met senior Ford management in June this year to stress the importance of the plant to the Northern Ireland economy and he subsequently visited the plant on 16 July, when Ford announced its investment plan for the plant, to meet the local management and work force.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 23 July 1986]: During the first six months of the year no one was charged with an offence under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984 having first been detained in Northern Ireland under another act. Five people detained in Northern Ireland under the Prevention of Terrorism Act were charged with offences under that Act. One hundred and ninety one were charged with offences under other Acts.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the official flag specific to Northern Ireland; if it is displayed from his Department's public buildings; and what is his policy towards the use of the Northern Ireland banner.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 23 July 1986]: In the first six months of this year there were 494 arrests by the Royal Ulster Constabulary and 22 by members of the armed forces under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978. Some of those arrested by members of the armed forces would be recorded in the Royal Ulster Constabulary figures if they were subsequently handed over to the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Information regarding charges is not yet available and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 23 July 1986]: I am informed by the chief constable that there have been 1,274 parades organised by Protestant organisations or groups this year (as at 21 July). Four were re-routed and disorder occurred at 32. In the vast majority of cases the organisers, including the Orange Order, co-operated with the police at all times.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will call for a report from the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary as to the conduct of the Orange demonstration on 12 July in Newtownards; what was the estimated number of people in Newtownards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 23 July 1986]: The Police Authority for Northern Ireland is responsible for the purchase of land or property on behalf of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. I understand that the authority has not purchased land in the Magilligan area of County Londonderry over the last 18 months. With regard to the British Army or other defence forces I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to a question by him from my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence on 23 July.

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement as to the reasons for the numerous explosions in the Magilligan area which have been detonated by Crown forces over the past year.

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the proposed date for publication of the Department of Education and Science's second language guidelines; and if those guidelines will cover the teaching of the Irish language in primary schools.

Dr. Mawhinney [pursuant to his reply, 24 July 1986]: The Department of Education for Northern Ireland is not publishing any such guidelines.

The Northern Ireland Council for Educational Development is, however, producing a series of guidelines for primary education which is planned to include one on teaching of a second language. It will deal with the teaching of Irish and French. The date of publication has not yet been decided.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 17 July 1986, c. 622-23]: The numbers of deaths since 1 November 1985 for which terrorists are believed to have been responsible, and the categories into which they fall, are as follows:

	Royal Ulster Constabulary	Royal Ulster Constabulary (Reserves)	Army	Ulster Defence Regiment	Civilians	Total
1985
November	1	—	—	2	3	6
December	1	1	—	—	—	2
1986

June	—	—	—	—	1	1
July	1	—	2	1	3	7
Total*	9	2	4	7	16	38

* As at 21 July 1986.

Whilst it is not possible to be certain in every case, Republican terrorist organisations are thought to have been responsible for 31 of these deaths and Loyalist terrorist organisations for the remaining seven.

Explosives

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the weight of explosive mixture which has been used by the Irish Republican Army in Northern Ireland in the current year and in 1985.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 17 July 1986]: It is thought that Republican terrorist organisations detonated an estimated 4,942 kg of explosives during 1985 and an estimated 1,919 kg in the six months up to 30 June 1986.

In 1985 3,309 kg of explosives were recovered from devices thought to have been constructed by Republican terrorists and neutralised by the security forces; and a further 1,185 kg, also thought to have been intended for use by republican terrorists, were recovered in other circumstances. The corresponding figures for the first six months of 1986 are 1,443 kg and 553 kg.

It is not possible to be certain, but it is thought that most of these explosives were under the control of the Provisional Irish Republican Army.

Members having gained the permission of the Chief Constable; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many Royal Ulster Constabulary officers of rank superintendent or above have been disciplined, or had disciplinary proceedings begun against them in the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986 to date resulting from incidents when hon. Members have gained access to Royal Ulster Constabulary stations under their command without those hon. Members having gained the permission of the Chief Constable; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 17 July 1986 c. 620]: Disciplinary proceedings against officers of the rank of chief superintendent and below are the responsibility of the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and are confidential.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 17 July 1986 c. 619]: I deplore the violence which took place in Portadown on 12 July. This kind of behaviour is quite unacceptable in a responsible and civilised community.

During the disturbances the Royal Ulster Constabulary and Army were attacked on numerous occasions and 14 policemen were injured. Twenty civilians are also known to have been injured. One hundred and eighty six plastic baton rounds were fired, all by members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Taxation

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report tables showing for those above, and for those below, pensionable age the estimated number of taxable incomes and total yield of income tax at current rates by range of total income, distinguishing between single persons, married couples without wife's earned income and married couples with such income; and if he will provide corresponding information on the basis of the following rates of tax (a) single persons: allowance of £2,000 taxed at nil rate, £2,000 at 15 per cent., £10,000 at 28 per cent., £5,000 at 40 per cent. and four successive bands of £5,000 at an incremental rate of five percentage points to a maximum of 60 per cent., (b) married persons taxed as one unit: allowance of £2,000 to be exempt from tax, allowance of £3,000 taxed at nil rate, £3,000 at 15 per cent., £14,000 at 28 per cent., and three successive bands of £8,000 at an incremental rate of five percentage points to a maximum of 55 per cent., (c) the nil rate band to be reduced by 25 per cent. of the amount by which total income exceeds £6,000 and £10,000 in the case of single and married persons, respectively, on the same basis as the present age allowance and (d) all other allowances against income for tax purposes to be abolished.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The estimates are in the tables following. They are based on a projection of the 1983-84 survey of personal incomes to 1986-87. The estimates of the tax liabilities for the alternative tax regime are approximate, because the income corresponding to some tax reliefs, for example employees' superannuation contributions and reliefs for national savings, is not recorded in the survey.

Mr. Raynsford asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the current annual value of (a) all income tax concessions and (b) all tax concessions approved since 1979 to the benefit of (a) the wealthiest 5 per cent. of the population of Great Britain and (b) the wealthiest 10 per cent. of the population of Great Britain.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess; I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 564, if he will state (a) the total revenue obtained from income tax and national insurance at current and constant prices and using 1979 as 100 for each year from 1969-70 to 1985-86 and (b) the total revenue obtained from all taxation and national insurance on the same basis as (a).

Total revenue from income tax and social security contributions comprises taxes paid by persons (net of tax credits), and national insurance, national health, redundancy fund and maternity fund contributions paid by employees and employers.

Total revenue from all taxations and social security contributions comprises taxes on income, expenditure and capital, national insurance, national health, redundancy fund and maternity fund contributions and royalties.

The figures are on a national accounts accruals basis.

Child Benefit

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the amount by which child benefit could be increased on a revenue neutral basis if it was made taxable, the gross and net cost to the Exchequer if the amount of benefit paid in respect of each child was raised to (i) £15 and (ii) £20 weekly and made taxable, the estimated saving to public authorities of all kinds of reduction of other benefits and the estimated distribution of individual child benefits by range of total income of the parent/guardian and distinguishing between single persons, married couples without wife's earned income, married couples with wife's earned income, and institutions.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information is in the table. The first line gives the level of child benefit on a revenue neutral basis if it were made taxable.

Level of child benefit	Gross cost of increasing children benefit from £7·10 per week	Yield from taxing child benefit
£ per week	£ million per year	£ million per year
9·90	1,800	1,800
15·00	5,070	2,700
20·00	8,240	3,650

Estimated savings on other programmes following increases could be calculated only at disproportionate cost.

It is estimated that in a typical week in 1986, child benefit will be paid in respect of about 12,150,000 children. The following table shows the distribution of these children according to the size of their parents' or guardians' income. The figures are based on the 1983 and 1984 family expenditure surveys with the income data projected to forecast November 1986 levels, and are therefore provisional. Total income is all sources of income, earned and investment, and includes social security benefits at July 1986 levels on the assumption that families claim all the benefits to which they are entitled. Child benefit is taken into account at £7·10 per child per week.

Income Tax

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report an estimate of the yield from income tax in the current financial year from persons of pensionable age together with an estimate of the cost to the Exchequer, of replacing the age allowance and clawback with a personal allowance of £2,000 and a reduced rate of £2,000 at 15 per cent. for a single person and a personal allowance of £5,000 and a reduced rate of £3,000 at 15 per cent. for a married couple; and if he will add a table showing the estimated number of incomes by range of total income distinguishing between single persons, married couples without wife's earned income, and married couples with such income.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The tax liability of taxpayers over 65 in respect of income in 1986-87 is estimated to be about £4·5 billion. The cost of the tax regime proposed would be about £0·5 billion. The lastest estimate of the distribution of the incomes for income tax purposes of single people and married couples aged over 65 is shown below. Since the information is based on Inland Revenue records the table does not include some 3 million single people and married couples with incomes below the tax threshold for whom records are not kept.

Mr. Lawler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of single people and married couples who would be below the income tax threshold if transferable tax allowances of £3,000 per person were introduced.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Tax Units

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will bring up to date the information concerning the number of tax units with investment income published in the Official Report on 18 January 1984, Official Report, column 218, in reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Inland Revenue's survey of personal incomes does not provide complete information on the distribution of investment income of basic rate taxpayers due to incomplete coverage of investment income on which the liability to basic rate tax has been satisfied, for example under the building societies' composite rate arrangements. The estimates in the tables below are based on a projection from the 1983-84 survey of personal incomes and are therefore likely to be incomplete for the lower income ranges. Total income includes only those forms of income liable to tax, before the deduction of personal allowances and reliefs.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will bring up to date, including his estimate for the current financial year, the information on expenditure from the redundancy fund and so on given in reply to the hon. Member for Dagenham (Mr. Gould) on 27 July 1983, Official Report, column 450; and if he will include figures from 1973-74 onwards for Government revenues from North sea oil.

Companies (Allowances)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for (i) all companies and (ii) manufacturing companies the estimated amount in losses and allowances from past years available to offset against profits in the current year, the estimated amount of allowances and the amount of interest deductible as a business expense likely to accrue in the present year, the current rates of corporation tax and the expected yield in each category and the estimated yield in each category if the rate were to be increased to 50 per cent.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The total of accumulated tax losses is about £25 billion, excluding the public sector, of which some £10 billion is in manufacturing companies. These estimates are extremely tentative.

The available figures of interest paid by companies appear in table 5.1 of the National Income Blue Book. There is no industrial breakdown available apart from the separation of the totals into financial companies and institutions (table 5.5) and industrial and commercial companies (table 5.4). The 1986 issue, with figures up to 1985, will be available in September.

Capital allowances in 1985 are tentatively estimated to have been of the order of £18 billion. I regret that estimates of the amount in manufacturing are not available for that year.

The current (1986-87) rates of corporation tax are 35 per cent. (main rate) and 29 per cent. (small companies' rate). The estimated yield for 1986-87 is £11·7 billion, as published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report. No breakdown for manufacturing companies is available.

The yield of mainstream corporation tax in 1986-87 is largely determined by profits arising in the two previous years. An increase to 50 per cent. in the current year would have a very small impact on revenues in this year.

Payroll Tax

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the net revenue from a 0·5 per cent. and 1 per cent. payroll tax, taking into account costs of collection, assuming that the tax level was on the same earnings base as secondary (employers) class 1 national insurance contributions at 1985-86 incomes.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Estimates of revenue on the national insurance contributions base at 1985-86 incomes are complicated by the fact that the contribution structure was changed in the middle of the year.

The estimated revenue effect, net of costs of collection, in 1986-87 would be £0·8 billion from a 0·5 per cent. tax and £1·6 billion from a 1 per cent. tax.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give details of the estimated extra number of Customs and Excise officials that will be required following the implementation of the Keith recommendations in the Finance Act 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: It is confidently expected that the new provisions will secure a significant increase in trader compliance particularly as regards prompt furnishing of accurate returns and payment of the tax and this will result in staff savings. However, this will be offset by the considerable amount of work arising from appeals against penalties and surcharge. The numbers of appeals cannot be predicted with any confidence at this stage, but it is likely that by 1988-89 there will be a small net increase in staff.

Public Bodies

Mr. Wigley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a list of all the bodies in Wales to which he has sole or joint responsibility for making appointments.

Mr. Brooke: None, if the hon. Member is referring to bodies which are solely concerned with Wales. My right hon. Friend does of course have responsibility for certain appointments to national bodies located in Wales, for example the Royal Mint.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Lawler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the estimated extra revenue from restricting mortgage tax relief to the basic rate and the effect on annual revenue of restricting mortgage tax relief to the basic rate and abolishing the £30,000 limit.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Assuming no consequential changes on the distribution of mortgages outstanding, the direct revenue yield in a full year at 1986-87 levels is £320 million for restricting relief to the basic rate, or £160 million if the £30,000 mortgage interest relief limit were abolished at the same time.

Mr. Raynsford asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the additional annual cost in revenue forgone of increasing the maximum limit on mortgage interest tax relief from £30,000 to (a) £35,000 and (b) £40,000.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Age Allowance

Mr. Lawler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the number of single people and married couples entitled to the age allowance who have taxable incomes below the tax threshold; and whether he has any estimate of the average income of people in these two categories.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Children (Income Tax Reliefs)

Mr. Lawler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated cost to the Exchequer of income tax reliefs for children under the age of 16 years.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that this informaton is not available.

Deeds of Covenant

Mr. Lawler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the estimated extra tax revenue and staff saving if tax relief was withdrawn from deeds of covenant made by parents to their children.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Investment

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what steps he will take to encourage investors to subscribe long-term funds for British companies through the medium of investment instruments other than equities;

(2) if he will take steps to stimulate long-term investment in British companies;

(3) if he will take steps to encourage companies to issue stocks which constitute prior charges before calculation of net profit.

Mr. MacGregor: It is for companies to determine how they wish to raise finance, and for investors to decide on what terms they are prepared to subscribe it. I have, however, been encouraged to see the significant increase, this year, in issues of long-term fixed-interest stock by United Kingdom companies.

Loan Stocks (Redemption)

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation to permit the interest and redemption cost of loan stocks offered on fixed terms, other than the inclusion of an index related to the performance of the company, to rank for tax purposes as the equivalent of debentures.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Occupational Pensions

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is currently the combined rate of contribution to private sector occupational pension schemes by employers and employees as a percentage of total payroll renumeration; and if he will take steps to encourage higher rates of contribution by employers or by employees.

Mr. Norman Lamont: At present, the average level of contributions by employers and employees to occupational pension schemes amounts to about 18 per cent. of payroll. Provided contributions are not excessive, they may be at whatever level is considered appropriate.

Companies (Profit-sharing)

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he will take to encourage investors to seek to promote profit-sharing schemes in companies in which they have an interest.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government believe that there are major advantages for employers and employees in relating a part of pay to profits. It is therefore in the interests of investors to support the wider adoption of profit related pay arrangements. I hope that the Green Paper, "Profit-Related Pay: a Consultative Document", which sets out the merits of relating a part of pay to profits and an outline of possible arrangements for tax relief, will be carefully considered by employers, employees and investors.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to his answer, Official Report, column 608, of 5 June, he will state the total public expenditure at current and real prices using 1979 as 100 for each year from 1969-70 to 1985-86; and if he will state whether the 1985-86 figure is actual or estimated.

Mr. MacGregor: The public expenditure planning total figures expressed in current prices and in real terms, using 1978-79 as 100 are as follows:—

Year	*Current Prices	Real Terms†*
1969-70	26	75
1970-71	29	79
1971-72	33	80
1972-73	38	86
1973-74	45	95
1974-75	60	107
1975-76	74	106
1976-77	83	104
1977-78	86	96
1978-79	100	100
1979-80	118	101
1980-81	141	102
1981-82	158	104
1982-83	172	106
1983-84	183	107
1984-85	197	111
‡1985-86	204	108

* Figures from 1973-74 are based on the definition used in the 1986 public expenditure White Paper (PEWP), (Cmnd 9702). The figures up to and including 1972-73 are based on the definition used in the 1985 PEWP (Cmnd 9428) but do not include market and overseas borrowing by public corporations (including nationalised industries).

† Cash figures adjusted for general inflation as measured by the GDP deflator at market prices.

‡ Indices based on the estimated outturn figures shown in the 1986 Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Books (Seizure)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether Her Majesty's Customs and Excise maintain a list of books which it is their policy to seize under current legislation relating to imports of obscene or indecent goods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: No.

South Africa

Mr. Caborn asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide an estimate of the total sum offset for each year from 1980 to 1985 under the double taxation agreement with South Africa.

Mr. Norman Lamont: To date, the tax credit relief given for South African tax against United Kingdom tax under the terms of the United Kingdom/South Africa double taxation convention is:

Accounting periods ending in Financial Year

	£ million
1979-80	59
1980-81	25
1981-82	45
1982-83	7
1983-84	5

Figures for 1984-85 are not yet available.

In view of the period of time that may elapse between the end of a company's financial year and final agreement of its tax liability, these amounts are not yet final and will eventually be significantly higher.

Retired Persons (Income)

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the number of people annually whose incomes after their retirement from public sector employment, taking into account their national insurance pension and income derived from lump sum entitlements, are greater than they received in their last employment.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information is not available.

Pensions

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people changing employment within the public sector are required to accept pension entitlements in their new appointments smaller than they would have enjoyed if they had remained in their earlier employment; and what is the comparable number of those leaving the public sector for private sector employment.

Mr. Brooke: No one is required to transfer his or her accrued pension rights when leaving a public sector employer, but there is an option to do so. If the transfer is to another public sector scheme there are arrangements which can be expected to produce benefits in the receiving scheme of equivalent value to the individual. A similar option is available for those moving to the private sector but the benefits allowed in the receiving scheme will depend upon the advice of the scheme's actuaries.

Exchange Rate

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his current estimate of the rate of exchange between the pound sterling and the deutschmark which would correspond to purchasing power parity in respect of the items included in the retail prices index.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Government do not make such calculations. Some estimates of purchasing power parities were given in "Purchasing Power Parities and Real Expenditures in the OECD" published by the OECD in 1985, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library. As this publication explains, purchasing power parities should not be interpreted as equilibrium exchange rates.

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table indicating the extent of the variations in the rates of exchange for the pound sterling and the mark from week to week in the London market over the past year.

Mr. Ian Stewart: End-week rates are published in table 18 in the Bank of England Quarterly Bulletin. Average sterling/deutschmark rates on a monthly basis are published in table 13.1 of "Financial Statistics".

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Gould asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, further to his reply dated 12 March 1984, Official Report, column 53, what is his estimate of the increase in gross domestic product less oil and gas since the decade 1963-1973 and since May 1979; and whether he will provide corresponding figures for manufacturing output.

Mr. MacGregor: Information is not available in the precise form requested but the following comparisons can be made:

	Percentage change
	1973 to 1986 1st quarter	1979 1st half to 1986 1st quarter
Gross domestic product* excluding extraction of mineral oil and natural gas†	+11	+6
Manufacturing	−10	−6

*Based on the output measure of GDP at constant factor cost, which is the appropriate measure where an industrial analysis is required.

†Extraction of mineral oil and natural gas comprises Class 13 of the Standard Industrial Classification 1980.

Economic Growth

Mr. Gould asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will bring up to date the information on actual and assumed productivity growth in the United Kingdom given in the reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 3 July 1980, Official Report, columns 634-36, concerning the International Monetary Fund index of relative export prices;

(2) whether he will bring up to date his rough estimate of the difference between growth of potential output and actual output between the two most recent cyclical peaks on a comparable basis as that given in the reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 22 July 1980, Official Report, column 146, concerning the International Monetary Fund index of relative normal unit labour costs.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Government Fixed Assets

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the reply of 17 July, Official Report, columns 603-4, which Government fixed assets are covered by commercial insurance.

Mr. Brooke: Commercial insurance is considered where it confers additional advantages apart from compensation for loss. Two examples are the insurance of lifts and boilers which include periodical expert inspection as well as compensation. An insurance premium may also be paid on goods in transit to ensure extra care in handling. It is for individual Departments to decide whether particular situations warrant taking out commercial insurance and no central records are kept.

Gay's The Word Bookshop

Mr. Dobson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any officers in Her Majesty's Customs and Excise are to be, or have been, reprimanded for their part in the action against Gay's The Word bookshop and its directors and staff.

Mr. Brooke: No.

Mr. Dobson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether Her Majesty's Customs and Excise were acting on complaints received from members of the public when the decision was taken to launch Operation Tiger against Gay's The Word bookshop in Marchmont street.

Mr. Brooke: No.

Mr. Dobson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total cost of Operation Tiger and all the subsequent legal proceedings against Noncyp Ltd., trading as Gay's The Word, and its nine directors.

Mr. Brooke: I refer the hon. Member to my replies to him on 7 July at column 80.

Mr. Dobson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number of hours engaged by all grades of staff in Operation Tiger and subsequent legal proceedings, including all preparatory work, against Gay's The Word bookshop in Marchmont street.

Mr. Brooke: Information about deployment of resources on particular cases in the detail required is not readily available. A retrospective estimation would be subject to a considerable margin of error and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dobson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether Her Majesty's Customs and Excise will compensate Gay's The Word bookshop and the nine directors and staff for losses incurred as a direct result of the Operation Tiger raids in April 1984, the subsequent seizure of stock, the charges brought by the Department, the loss of turnover, and the legal expenses incurred by them up until the time the Department applied to the Central Criminal Court for the case to be struck out.

Mr. Brooke: No.

Mr. Dobson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are being taken to issue guidance, following the European Court ruling, to prevent a repetition of the action taken by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise against Gay's The Word bookshop and its nine directors and staff.

Mr. Brooke: Immediately after the European court ruling was known, guidance was issued to Customs staff to ensure that it was applied to future importations from whatever source.

Customs and Excise Officers (Training)

Mr. Dobson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Department of Customs and Excise will reassess and improve the training of officers investigating literature which they believe may contravene import prohibitions.

Mr. Brooke: Following the judgment by the European Court of Justice in the Conegate case, Customs are now applying the standards of relevant domestic legislaton to imported literature. Instructions to Customs staff are being revised accordingly. These will be reflected in future training programmes.

"Official Report"

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the normal number of copies printed of the daily part of the Official Report; for what reason larger print runs are made; in what circumstances those issues of the daily part of the Official Report which go out of print within less than two months are reprinted; and how often since May 1979 the daily part for any date has been reprinted.

Mr. Brooke: The normal number of copies printed is 4,750. Larger print runs are made if justified by expected demand. Reprints are also made when called for by demand. This has occurred on 16 occasions during the current Session; earlier records are not available.

European Capital Market

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to accelerate the development of a fully integrated European market for capital.

Mr. Ian Stewart: A fully integrated European market for capital will not be possible until all member states dismantle controls on the movement of capital, as the United Kingdom did in 1979. I have been encouraged by recent moves in this direction in France and Italy. The ECOFIN Council on 16 June had a general discussion on the liberalisation of capital movements in the Community, in particular on the recent proposals by the European Commission for the achievement of full liberalisation by 1992. There was general support for the Commission's objectives. This topic is being given priority during the United Kingdom Presidency of the Community, and it is hoped that in the first instance a new Council directive designed to extend the current liberalisation obligations can be adopted by the Council later this year.

Wives (Earned Income)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report the estimated cost at current rates of tax and earnings of the wife's earned income allowance together with a table showing the number of allowances falling within each range of total joint income and the total amount of the allowance in each range;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing (a) the estimated number of wives claiming earned income allowance in each range of joint total income and the cost to the Exchequer in the current financial year and (b) the number of wives with earned income on Inland Revenue records in each range of wife's total income.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

General Government Financial Balance

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the general Government financial balance as a percentage of gross domestic product/gross national product in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the United States of America, (c) Japan, (d) Germany, (e) France and (f) Italy in 1984 and in 1985.

Mr. MacGregor: The information requested is published in table 24, page 39, of the May 1986 edition of "OECD Economic Outlook".

Banks (Pre-tax Profit)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report, a table showing for the London clearing banks less the Midland bank the amount of pre-tax profit earned in (a) 1956, (b) 1969 and (c) each year since 1979.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The following figures are readily available from published sources. The hon. Member may wish to ask the banks themselves if they would be able to provide figures for earlier years.

Pre-tax profits

	Barclays £ million	Lloyds £ million	Natwest £ million
1979	*529	286	441
1980	*523	305	415
1981	539	373	500

	Barclays £ million	Lloyds £ million	Natwest £ million
1982	462	329	449
1983	505	419	518
1984	623	468	671
1985	854	561	804

• The available figures for these two years have not been adjusted to reflect present Group structure.

Pay-As-You-Earn

Mr. Lawler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated number of whole-time equivalent staff required to administer the cumulative system of pay-as-you-earn, including the coding of pay-as-you-earn and the processing of form P45.

Mr. Norman Lamont: About 30,000.

Tax Rebate Forms

Mr. Marlow asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the reasons why forms for tax rebates must be issued by the Inland Revenue; why photocopies cannot be used; and why there is a delay in the provision of such forms by the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Norman Lamont: These forms are designed and issued by the Inland Revenue to meet the requirements of the Taxes Acts and are normally obtainable without delay. The board is presently considering the possibility of allowing photocopies to be used.

Gross National Product (International Comparisons)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will bring up to date the information on increases in gross national product in the United Kingdom and in the principal exporting countries given in the answer to the hon. Member for Grimsby on 16 November 1979, Official Report, columns 810-812.

Mr. MacGregor: Information about gross national product at constant market prices for the United Kingdom and for a limited number of other countries can be obtained, respectively, from the HMSO publication "United Kingdom National Account, 1985 edition" and from the OECD publication "Quarterly National Accounts, 1986".

Information about gross domestic product at constant prices, compiled to international definitions, is available for the United Kingdom and for a wide range of other countries from the OECD publication "National Accounts: Main Aggregates, Volume 1, 1960-1984".

Copies of all three publications can be obtained from the House of Commons Library.

EC Budget

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Dagenham of 20 May, Official Report, columns 173-4, on United Kingdom contributions to European Economic Community budget, he will provide figures for the gross contribution including the addition as a result of supplementary budgets.

Mr. Brooke: The estimate of our gross contribution contained in the 1986 Budget is 4,898 mecu (£3,043 million) after deducting our abatement of 1,900 mecu (£1,180 million). These figures do not take account of sizeable VAT adjustment we expect to pay next month (which will itself give rise to a larger VAT abatement in respect of this year).

Civil Service Unions (Elections)

Mr. Martin asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy when permitting the circulation of material in working time to civil servants in connection with trade union elections, to seek to ensure that equal opportunities are provided for each candidate to circulate material; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Such equal opportunities are provided under the terms of the Civil Service National Whitley Council agreement on facilities which allows unions representing non-industrial civil servants to send, under cover, correspondence to their members through Departments' internal distribution systems. They may also use the inter-departmental dispatch service for delivery of mail. It is the responsibility of individual unions to ensure the proper conduct of elections including opportunities for candidates to circulate material to members.

Mr. Martin asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to meet the leaders of trade unions representing civil servants to discuss the facilities provided to facilitate union elections; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I have no such plans. There are well established arrangements for allowing facilities for civil service union elections under the terms of the Civil Service National Whitley Council agreement on facilities for industrial relations duties and trade union activities in the non-industrial Civil Service.

Taxation Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report, a table showing for single persons and married couples (a) the estimated number in each £1,000 step of total income qualifying for a reduction of tax on account of age and (b) the estimated number in each range of income qualifying for the additional personal allowance, together with the estimated cost to the Exchequer, in the current financial year in each case.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Public Sector Employers

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the top 30 United Kingdom public sector employers, including local authorities, showing in each case the number of employees employed in the United Kingdom and giving available information about part-time workers.

Mr. Brooke: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the tax treatment of payments of invalid care allowance to married women.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Payments of invalid care allowance to married women are taxable under existing law. But the wife's earned income allowance could not be set against such payments because the law as it stands does not specifically provide for this in the way that it does for other taxable social security benefits paid to wives in their own right. To bring the tax treatment of invalid care allowance into line with the treatment of these other benefits, the Government have decided that a provision should be included in next year's Finance Bill permitting the wife's earned income allowance to be set against payments of invalid care allowance due to married women. The proposed legislation would apply with effect from the tax year 1984-85 so that the wife's earned income allowance would be available against arrears of invalid care allowance which may be payable for periods back to December 1984. Meanwhile the Inland Revenue will give the benefit of the wife's earned income allowance against payments of invalid care allowance to married women for years from 1984-85 on an extra-statutory basis.

Expenditure Statistics

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will republish and update to the latest year for which figures are available the indices of gross national product, industrial production, public authorities' current expenditure, public sector domestic fixed capital formation and public sector transfer payments, deflated by the gross domestic product deflator, given in reply to the hon. Member for Norfolk, North (Mr. Howell) of 17 October 1975, Official Report, columns 830-32 and 3 November 1975, Official Report, columns 2-3.

Mr. MacGregor: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Building Societies Bill

Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the provisions of the Building Societies Bill will come into force.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Subject to the Bill receiving Royal Assent today, the Building Societies Commission will come into being on 25 September 1986.

Paragraph 7 of schedule 20 comes into operation immediately on Royal Assent. This removes retrospectively any doubt about the vires of work undertaken since 19 December 1985 by a building society in preparation for powers which will be available to it under the new legislation.

During the autumn the commission will make those statutory instruments which need to be effective when the main provisions of the Bill come into operation. It is intended that most of the main provisions affecting societies will be brought into effect from 1 January 1987 by a commencement order. There will be few exceptions which for various reasons it will not be practicable to bring into operation until later.

The Building Societies Association has asked that adequate time should be allowed for the establishment of an ombudsman scheme and its recognition by the commission. The Government have accordingly agreed that the requirement to belong to a recognised scheme should not be brought into effect until 1 July 1987.

Before societies can invest in bodies which lend on security of land in other EC member states, links will need to be established with supervisors in those other countries. The power to invest in such bodies will accordingly not be brought into effect until 1 January 1988.

Extensive preparatory work and consultation will be needed before detailed regulations governing the conversion of any society to company status can be made. It is at present proposed that these powers should therefore be brought into effect from 1 January 1988.

Clause 35, which prohibits making the offer of a class 1 advance conditional on the use of another service offered by the society and requires different services to be priced separately, will not be brought into effect so long as a satisfactory code of practice covering the same ground has been introduced by 1 January 1988 and proves to be effective in practice.

Sections 28-30 of the Building Societies Act 1962 will not be repealed until a suitable code of practice has been introduced dealing with the taking of additional security from third parties.

It is intended to make a transitional order in due course under section 121. This will provide, among other things, for the new accounting provisions to apply to accounts for a society's financial year starting on or after 1 January 1987; for mergers to proceed under the provisions of the 1962 Act if the statement required by section 20 of that Act has been approved by the Chief Registrar before 1 January 1987; and for phasing out the special advance provisions in sections 21 to 24 of the 1962 Act.

Societies will be able to adopt the powers provided under the Bill by passing a special resolution approving the necessary memorandum of powers from two months after Royal Assent and then registering it to take effect from 1 January 1987. Other rule changes to conform to the new Act may be made between 1 January 1987 and the autumn of 1988.

Implementation of the conveyancing provisions in clause 124 and schedule 21 is a matter for my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor.

Benefits (Taxation)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the receipts in the current financial year from the taxation of unemployment benefit and all other supplementary benefits.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Enterprises (Equity Shareholdings)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1956 the estimated percentage of equity shareholdings in United Kingdom enterprises held by private individuals; and if he will provide for the latest year a breakdown of the figures showing the percentage held by insurance companies, pension funds, investment trusts and so on, other companies, and the overseas sector.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Legal Aid

Mr. John Fraser asked the Attorney-General what is the time taken to deal with an application for civil legal aid in each area office in London for which sample survey figures are available.

The Attorney-General: The only figures available at present on the time taken to deal with civil legal aid applications are those contained in the Law Society's 35th legal aid annual report (House of Commons paper 156) appendix 2G (page 94). The samples from individual area offices on which those national figures were based were not analysed separately and are no longer available. More comprehensive figures for 1985-86 will be available shortly, and I will arrange for them to be sent to the hon. Member.

Mr. John Fraser asked the Attorney-General if the Lord Chancellor will make it his policy not to fund the increases in payment for legal aid services by the profession by cuts in the legal aid and advice schemes; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: Any changes in legal aid services will be made in the interest of efficiency and economy and in no circumstances will the interests of users of the service be sacrificed to those of the legal profession.

Mr. John Fraser asked the Attorney-General why the free limits for legal aid eligibility have not been increased to coincide with the July social security benefits uprating; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: To have increased the legal aid eligibility limits in line with the social security benefits uprating would have involved a rise of only 1·1 per cent., which, for civil legal aid, would have meant a rise in the lower income limit from £2,255 to £2,280. It was felt that such a small rise did not justify an uprating. However, this will be taken into account when the legal aid eligibility limits are next reviewed, which will be when social security benefits are uprated in April 1987.

Attendance Allowance

Mrs. Beckett asked the Attorney-General how many decisions were made in 1984 and 1985 by the Social Security Commissioner on appeals (a) by the Secretary of State and (b) by the claimant concerning attendance allowance; and, in each case, in what number of cases the allowance was awarded.

The Attorney-General: In 1984, two decisions were made on appeals by the Secretary of State and 44 on appeals by claimants. Twenty six appeals, including one by the Secretary of State, succeeded. I understand from the Secretary of State that, of the 26 successful appeals, 20 resulted in an award of the allowance by the Attendance Allowance Board. In 1985 one decision was made on appeal by the Secretary of State, and 69 on appeals by claimants. Forty appeals, including that by the Secretary of State, succeeded. The information requested on the actual awards for 1985 cases is not immediately available, but will be sent to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Attorney-General what is the average time between receipt by the Social Security Commissioner of an appeal concerning attendance allowance after leave to appeal has been granted and a decision on that appeal; and how long it takes to grant leave of appeal in such cases.

The Attorney-General: For applications for leave to appeal decided in 1985 (by the grant or refusal of leave) the average time was 15 working days. For appeals decided in 1985, it was 136 working days, including the period before the case was ready for determination.

Public Bodies

Mr. Wigley asked the Attorney-General if he will publish a list of all the bodies in Wales to which he or the Lord Chancellor have sole or joint responsibility for making appointments.

The Attorney-General: The meaning of the expression "bodies" is not clear. On the basis that it includes tribunals but excludes courts of law, the Lord Chancellor has responsibility for making appointments to the following tribunals, some of whose members sit in Wales:
industrial tribunals, social security appeal tribunals, medical appeal tribunals, mental health review tribunals, agricultural land tribunals and the rent assessment panel.

I make no appointments to bodies in Wales.

THE ARTS

Museum Charges

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if he has made an assessment of the impact on attendances arising from museum charges.

Mr. Luce: As I told the hon. Member in my written answer of 11 July, many factors can affect attendances at museums and it is difficult to isolate the effects of any one factor. The introduction of museum charges is a matter for the trustees' discretion.

Libraries

Mr. Cartwright asked the Minister for the Arts what information he has as to which public library authorities in England have failed to provide statistics on library expenditure to the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy in the last two years for which the institute has published figures; and what use he proposes to make of his powers under section 1 of the Public Libraries and Museums Act 1964 to ensure that he has complete statistics for all authorities as a basis for discharge of his duty under that Act to superintend the public library services.

Mr. Luce: Five authorities out of 108 failed to provide statistics for 1984-85. These were Lambeth, Lewisham, Southwark, Sheffield and Liverpool. For 1983-84 only one authority, Tower Hamlets, did not respond.

Participation by library authorities is voluntary, and the high level of co-operation reflects the value placed on them by local librarians and managers. Although it is disappointing that the figures are not always complete, my superintendency of the public library service does not depend on them, and I concur with the view of the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy that participation should continue to be voluntary.

Arts Council

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Minister for the Arts if he has any proposals to change the constitution of the Arts Council.

Mr. Luce: Not at present.

WALES

Sheep (Radioactivity)

Sir Adam Butler asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) individual sheep and (b) flocks have had to be destroyed in Wales as a result of radioactivity from the Chernobyl fall-out.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: No flocks have been destroyed as a result of radioactivity from the Chernobyl fall-out. Up to 19 July approximately 1,840 sheep had been slaughtered for the purpose of monitoring radiocaesium levels in sheepmeat in north Wales.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total number of sample tests undertaken by his Department in monitoring the level of radiocaesium in lambs in Gwynedd in each of the weeks since the Chernobyl disaster, analysed between the number taken in each of the districts of Arfon, Dwyfor, Meirionnydd, Ynys Môn and Aberconwy.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is shown in the following table:

District	11-17 May	18-24 May	25-31 May	1-7 June	8-14 June
Ynys Môn	—	—	—	—	3

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many farms on Anglesey had sheep with radiocaesium levels in excess of 1,000 b/kg throughout the currency of the ban on sales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Results of tests on lambs have shown levels of caesium above 1,000 b/kg on four farms in Anglesey.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he next expects to meet the farmers' unions to discuss compensation for sheep farmers whose flocks are affected by high radiation levels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I met the two farming unions and the Country Landowners' Association when I attended the Royal Welsh Show on Tuesday 22 July.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what basis of compensation for sheep farmers whose flocks are affected by high radiation levels has been proposed to him by the farmers' unions; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he is yet in a position to announce the basis of compensation for sheep farmers affected by the ban on sales; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what proposals he has for giving assistance to those sheep farmers on Anglesey still affected by the ban on sales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Torridge and Devon, West (Sir P. Mills) on 24 July by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the figures, both numerically and as a percentage of the whole, of those lambs that have been brought to market on Anglesey that have been rejected as over-fat following the lifting of the ban on sales for part of the island, giving the figures separately for each market.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: From 4 July to 24 July inclusive 10,222 lambs from the newly released areas were presented for certification at markets on Anglesey; 469 lambs (4·5 per cent.) were rejected as overfat, 268 of which were withdrawn from auction. Figures for individual markets cannot be given on the grounds of commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many officials of his Department are present at each of the markets on Anglesey during sheep sales following the lifting of the ban on part of the island; what is their practice regarding giving instructions to the auctioneers; whether they identify themselves prior to the auction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: At least one official from my Department has been present at each of the livestock markets where sheep have been sold on Anglesey since restrictions were first removed from parts of the island. My officials carry the necessary form of authority under the Food and Environment Act 1985, are well known to the auctioneers and work closely with them to ensure that sheep from within the areas where restrictions remain are not sold at the markets.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will now visit Anglesey in order to meet farmers who have been affected by the ban on sheep sales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Farmers from Anglesey were amongst those who made representations to me at the Royal Welsh Show on Tuesday 22 July. I am kept fully abreast of the current situation by my officials in the area. I have no plans at present to visit farmers on the island.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state (a) the number of farmers and (b) the approximate number of sheep still subject to the ban on sales on Anglesey; what discussions he has had with them or their representatives about the problems of cash flow; if he will give consideration to making an interim payment of compensation to them pending determination of the final basis of compensation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: As a result of the latest derestriction on 24 July only 297 holdings and some 65,000 sheep remain within the designated area on Anglesey. On the question of compensation I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. hon. Friend the Member for Torridge and Devon, West (Sir P. Mills) on 24 July by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he is now in a position to determine when the remaining part of Anglesey subject to the ban on sheep sales will be taken out of the ban; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I removed restrictions from a further part of Anglesey with effect from midnight on Thursday. Testing will continue with a view to removing restrictions from the remaining areas as soon as possible.

Community Programme

Mr. Prescott asked the Secretary of State for Wales what plans exist for new community programme opportunities to be provided by his Department.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: It is planned that some 22,400 community programme places will be filled by Wales by the end of the year. The Welsh Office is involved in national initiatives to promote the widest possible use of the community programme in areas such as crime prevention, energy conservation and environmental and countryside improvement.

Private Practice

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state, for each health authority in Wales, the amount of money received from consultants in each of the last five years in payment for the use of National Health Service facilities in private practice.

Mr. Robinson: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Mark Robinson: In view of the need to collect the information required, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the Forestry Commission reference committee panels in Wales during the last year for which figures are available; what are the sources of their finance; and what proportion of their expenditure is incurred in administration.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Reference committee panels are maintained under section 27 of the Forestry Act 1967 for each of the Forestry Commission's conservancies. Their purpose is to provide a pool of persons from which committees can be set up to advise Forestry Ministers on appeals against decisions taken by the Forestry Commissioners on felling licences and felling directions. No such appeals have been received in Wales since these procedures were introduced and no expenditure has therefore been incurred.

Nature Conservancy Council (Consultation Zones)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he is satisfied with the system of consultation used by the Nature Conservancy Council in connection with consultation zones in Wales; if he has any proposals for modification of the system; what proportion of consultation cases has resulted in the payment of compensation in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The only consultation zone in Wales is the Berwyn mountains. The successful operation of the zone depends on the voluntary co-operation of interested parties. Inevitably there are occasions when conflicting interests are difficult to reconcile but I am satisfied that both the Nature Conservancy Council and the farming community are approaching the matter constructively. The working of the system is primarily a matter for the parties concerned and I have no proposals to modify it.

Details of compensation are not collected in the form requested. One management agreement has been concluded since 1982 and 14 are under negotiation.

Speech Therapy

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he makes of the weekly time children needing speech therapy receive; and if he has any plans to increase it.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information is not available centrally. The level of speech therapy services provided within their districts is a matter for individual district health authorities.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Wales how much Health Service expenditure as an absolute figure and as a percentage of total National Health Service expenditure in Wales for each of the past 10 years was spent on (a) elderly and geriatric services, (b) community services, (c) the mentally handicapped, (d) the mentally ill, (e) obstetric services and (f) acute hospital services.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Financial information in Wales is not collated on a programme expenditure basis, therefore it is not possible to provide the breakdown of expenditure as requested.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report for (a) Wales and (b) each local authority in Wales, the change in real terms of the rate support grant settlement for 1986-87, compared to the 1979-80 assessment.

Mr. Mark Robinson: New rate support grant arrangements were introduced in 1981-82 and valid comparisons cannot be drawn between the settlements made before and after the change.

Home Improvement Grants

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales what extra allocation has been made to Ynys Môn borough council towards the backlog of home improvement grants over and above the allocation for enveloping schemes.

Mr. Mark Robinson: In addition to the £1 million for three enveloping projects allocated last month, Ynys Môn borough council received a further £0·1 million to enable them to group together home improvement grants under the block repair scheme. These allocations are on top of the authority's original allocation for 1986-87 which included £0·174 million towards the reduction of the backlog of renovation grants.

National Health Service (Expenditure)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will set out the (a) gross and (b) net of charges expenditure, current and capital, on the National Health Service and personal social services for each year from 1971 to 1986-87 for Wales for (a) the hospital and community health service, (b) family practitioner committees and their predecessors, (c) centrally funded National Health Service services, and (d) the personal social services with the percentage increase deflated by: (i) the gross domestic product, (ii) the retail price index and (iii) pay and prices.

Mr. Mark Robinson [pursuant to his reply, 21 July 1986, c. 25]: The following tables set out the position for the period 1974-75 to 1985-86, the last year for which information is available:

TOTAL	544,205

Retirement Age

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the total number of men and women, respectively, of retirement age; how many are in receipt of the state pension; how many in each case are on social security and how many of these are on the state pension; how many have no pension; how many would cease to qualify for supplementary benefit if the state pension were to be increased by (i) 10 per cent. and (ii) 20 per cent.; and what would be the additional cost of such increases together with the saving in benefits and the increase in yield of taxation.

Mr. Major: Information is not readily available on all the items requested, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The information which is available is as follows:—

(i) number of persons over minimum pension age

	Number ('000)
Men	3,293
Women	6,691

Source: OPCS, mid 1985 data.

(ii) persons in receipt of retirement pension (March 1985)

	Number ('000)
Men	3,113
Women	6,009

This figure excludes people receiving graduated pension only.

(iii) persons over minimum pension age receiving no retirement pension (except graduated pension). About 860,000 people were in this category in 1985. Of these about 126,000 had opted to receive other benefits, such as invalidity benefit and widow's pension, which can be received in the first five years after minimum pension age and a further 189,000 were receiving graduated pension only. The remaining 545,000 will include, women over 60 who have no entitlement to retirement pension on their own contributions and whose husbands have not yet reached age 65 or retired; both men and women who have chosen to defer retirement; and an unknown, but small, number who have no entitlement to state retirement pension in any form.

Source: DHSS

(iv) the numbers of persons over minimum pension age in receipt of supplementary pension were as follows:

	Male '000	Female '000
Numbers receiving both supplementary benefit and retirement pension or widows' pension	415	1,116
Numbers receiving supplementary benefit only	25	80
Total receiving some supplementary benefit	440	1,240

Source: DHSS, Annual Statistical Enquiry 1984 (latest figures available)

(v) no reliable estimate is readily available of the numbers of pensioners who would be floated off supplementary benefit if basic retirement pension levels were increased by 10 per cent. and 20 per cent. but the level of supplementary pension and housing benefit needs allowances were not increased.

(vi) the gross cost of such increases would be in a full year:

(a) 10 per cent. increase—£1,750 million.
(b) 20 per cent. increase—£3,500 million.

The savings on supplementary benefit and housing benefit are (a) £550 million and (b) £950 million.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will publish in the Official Report his latest estimate of the numbers of males and females paying various classes of national insurance contributions, the numbers paid in 1979, the estimated amount collected from employers and employees by way of contributions in the current financial year and the estimated amount by which the contributions would be increased if the rate of unemployment were to be reduced to 3 per cent.

Mr. Major: The number of people paying national insurance contributions in each class in 1979-80 and an estimate of those paying contributions in 1986-87 is given in the table. It is estimated that in 1986-87 £11·51 billion will be collected from employees, and £12·92 billion from employers by way of class 1 national insurance contributions, and that if the unemployment rate were to fall to 3 per cent., the National Insurance Fund would receive an extra £2·6 billion a year from contributions at current contribution rates.

[2] Includes women who paid reduced rate contributions.
[3] Includes people who paid a mixture of Class 2 and Class 3 contributions.
[4] Includes people paying Class 4 contributions. Precise information about the number of Class 4 contributors is not available, however it is estimated that in 1979-80 between 1 million and 1¼ million people were liable to pay Class 4 contributions, and in 1986-87 between 1¼ and 1½ million were liable to pay Class 4.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the estimated number of reduced rate class 1 contributions for women, broken down by type if appropriate; how the figures compare with 1979 and the forecast for 1988; how the rates of contribution compares with the standard rate; what is his estimate of the number of contributors who would be worse off if the reduced rates were replaced by a standard rate of 5 per cent. on earnings in excess of £2,000 for a single person and £5,000 for a married couple; what would be the loss to the Exchequer; and whether he will add a table showing the number of incomes affected by range of income and the yield from contributions now and from the proposed change.

Mr. Major: The information requested by the hon. Member in the first three parts of his question is presented in the table.

I will write to the hon. Member about the remaining points in his question.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing (a) the estimated loss of revenue from the reduced rate national insurance contributions for (i) working wives and (ii) widows in the current financial year, (b) the estimated number of contributors in each range of annual earnings and the resultant loss and (c) the estimated number with a total income, including the husband's income, of more than (1) £10,000, (2) £15,000 and (3) £20,000 a year;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing (a) the number of nationally insured males and females working in manufacturing and non-manufacturing, (b) the number of females in each case paying reduced rate contributions, (c) the upper and lower limit of contributions, (d) the latest figure in each case for average earnings and (e) the latest figure in each case for the median, upper quartile and lower quartile earnings.

Mr. Major: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Departmental Offices (Staff)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many staff at his Department's offices at (a) Arab street, (b) Archway Tower, Finsbury Park, and (c) Archway Tower, Highgate, for each year since 1979 have handled (i) supplementary benefit and (ii) other claims.

Mr. Major: Information is not available before 1984. The Department does not have an office in Arab street. Islington, North constituency is covered by three of the Department's offices, Finsbury Park, Highgate, and Hoxton, but the boundaries are not conterminous with the boundary of the constituency.

The table shows the number of staff in post on 1 April 1984 and 1 April 1985 and the staff allocation on 1 July 1986.

National Health Insurance Charges

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will bring up to date the information concerning average earnings, national insurance contributions and so on published in the Official Report, column 80, on 14 March 1983 in answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby.

Mr. Major: The figures are as follows:

† The not contracted-out contribution for men.
Note: In each case figures for NI contributions include NHS and NI surcharge elements as applicable.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current yield of the employers' and employees' national insurance contributions, respectively; and by how much the yield of the employee's contributions would be reduced if (a) the contribution rate was reduced from 9 per cent. to 5 per cent., (b) no charge was levied on the first £2,000 for a single person and £5,000 for a married couple and (c) the upper earnings limit were to be removed; and if he will pubish in the Official Report a table showing the estimated number of incomes in each range of income and the current yield in each range compared with the yield which would result from the proposed changes.

Mr. Major: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Unemployed Persons (Bonus)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will bring up to date the information given in reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby on 24 February and 17 March 1982, Official Report, columns 414 and 129, concerning a bonus for the long-term unemployed.

Mr. Newton: The information in relation to the long-term unemployed is given in the table. The number of unemployed persons represents those who were in receipt of unemployment or supplementary benefit in Great Britain in November 1985, the latest date for which figures are available. The cost is based on a weekly bonus for the unemployed of £40·50.

Duration of unemployment	Unemployed persons	Number of weeks bonus per person	Cost £ million
Between 1 and 2 years	384,900	4	62·4
Between 2 and 3 years	228,200	8	73·9
Over 3 years*	431,600	12	209·8
Total	1,044,700		346·1

* These numbers cannot be further split.

The cost of providing a bonus equal to two weeks' benefit for all social security beneficiaries in 1986-87 is £1,400 million. This is based on the total estimated social security expenditure in 1986-87 excluding housing benefit and all one-off payments (Christmas bonus, maternity grant, death grant and single payments of supplementary benefit).

Community Programme

Mr. Prescott asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans exist for new community programme opportunities to be provided by his Department.

Mr. Whitney: There have been preliminary discussions about how the Department can assist the MSC with the provision of new community programme opportunities but no plans exist at present.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will publish in the Official Report such information as is available to his Department concerning the number and distribution by type of case of persons in receipt of social security benefit who are also in receipt of rent rebates, rate rebates and rent allowances and other forms of housing benefit; and what is the total amount of security and housing benefit, respectively, paid out under each heading.

Mr. Major: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will introduce legislation to permit his Department to apply to have a fair rent registered in relation to properties for which housing benefit is paid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: No. Local authorities are responsible for administering housing benefits and, where there is a regulated tenancy, authorities in England and Wales may apply to the rent officer for the registration of a fair rent as they consider necessary.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, how many households are in receipt of housing benefit; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing how the total is divided up between categories of claimant.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Fulham (Mr. Raynsford) on 12 May at column 383.

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Fulham (Mr. Raynsford) 23 May, Official Report, columns 386-390, if he will publish fresh figures, for benefit entitlement, taking into account, entitlement to family income supplement and family credit.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 17 July 1986, c. 613-614]: Two of the four tables in the earlier reply referred only to pensioners without dependent children. Tables 1 and 2 show information comparable to that in tables 1B and 2B in the earlier reply, but assuming family income supplement or family credit is also in payment. The amounts of FIS/FC are shown separately. It should be borne in mind that because the family credit scheme will be considerably more generous, on the basis of our illustrative assumptions, than the present family income supplement scheme, only about 3 per cent. of all family credit recipients will also be receiving assistance through housing benefit with both rents and rates.

Notes
1. The final column of table 1 is the same as the final column of table 1B in the earlier reply, except for the figure marked with an asterisk which was incorrectly printed in the earlier table.
2. The following average rent and rate levels have been assumed: £15·40 and £6·20 per week respectively for households with one child, and £16·50 and £6·30 per week with two children.
3. The children are assumed to be aged 15 (one child) and 10 and 16 (two children).
4. Child benefit and one-parent benefit have been assumed to be in payment, in addition to the earnings levels shown in the table, at November 1985 rates.
5. The first column should be interpreted to mean "earnings level equivalent to unemployment benefit", since unemployment benefit is not normally payable to recipients of FIS/Family Credit.
6. The final column shows the earnings level at which housing benefit is no longer payable if the household is also receiving FIS/Family Credit. In table 2, the amount of Family Credit assumed to be in payment is shown in brackets. Child benefit (and one-parent benefit where appropriate) should be added to the total of the figures in the final column in order to find the income level at which housing benefit is no longer payable.
7. November 1985 tax rates and allowances have been assumed and the current minimum benefit level of 50 pence has been used throughout. In table 2, other assumptions are based on the illustrative figures used in the Technical Annex to Cmnd. 9691 including tapers of 60 per cent. (rents), and 20 per cent. (rates) and a minimum contribution towards domestic rates of 20 per cent.

Warnock Report (Legislation)

Sir John Osborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what main areas dealt with in the Warnock report he now considers suitable for legislation; and whether he will be publishing a Green Paper or a White Paper indicating the options before presenting legislation to Parliament.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton) on 25 March at columns 445-46.

Benefit Claims (Staff)

Mr. Lambie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he is taking to increase staff complements in his Department's offices in Ayrshire to handle the growth in the number of benefit claims.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to the reply from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Nuneaton (Mr. Stevens) on 7 March at column 322, in which he announced a major improvement to the Department of Health and Social Security manpower. Over 5,000 staff have been made available in addition to the normal complement. Ayrshire's share of the increase is 38. A full complement review in social security local offices is currently being carried out and the results will form the basis of the 1987-88 complement.

NHS (Pay)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report, for the latest year for which figures are available, total expenditure on pay for National Health Service staff, broken down by (a) medical and dental; (b) nurses and midwives; (c) administrative and clerical; (d) ancillary; and (e) all other National Health Service staff; and what were the percentage increases in pay levels for those groups since (a) 1979-80 and (b) 1980-81.

Mr. Hayhoe: The available figures are shown in the following table:

Staff Group	(1) Expenditure 1984-85 £ million	(2) Increase 1979-80 to 1985-86 Per cent.	(3) Increase 1980-81 to 1985-86 Per cent.
Medical and Dental	931	84·4	40·3
Nurses and Midwives	3,034	91·7	39·0
Admin and Clerical	760	46·5	28·5
Ancillary	937	63·3	30·6
Other staff	1,067	64·7	33·7
TOTAL	6,729

Notes:
1. Figures in column 1 are for Hospital and Community Health Services in England and are for the latest available year. They are derived from the summarised accounts of health authorities and include employer's national insurance and superannuation contributions but exclude agency staff.
2. The increases shown cover the period to 1985-86, the latest year for which figures are available, and include the full rates recommended in the 1985 pay awards (some of these were not paid in full until February 1986). The base year figures are for August 1979 and August 1980 pay years respectively.
3. Figures on pay increases for 'other staff' cover professionals allied to medicine, professional and technical staff 'Whitley B', scientific and professional staff and ambulancemen.

Deafness

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will outline those services which are available to elderly hearing-impaired citizens; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: A wide range of services is available for elderly and other hearing-impaired people. People who suffer a hearing loss should first see their general practitioner and arrange for the fitting of a hearing aid. A comprehensive range of hearing aids is available under the National Health Service. As far as social services are concerned, help may be available from specialist social workers and where necessary assistance is available towards the provision of environmental aids such as flashing door bells. Traditionally voluntary organisations have provided a range of services to people whose hearing is impaired and many receive grants from statutory sources to help them provide such services.

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to improve those services which are available to elderly hearing-impaired citizens, in particular (a) the implementation of staffing norms for audiology clinics, (b) the making of induction loop systems mandatory in all public buildings and (c) allocating more funds to researching the causes of hearing impairment.

Mr. Newton: As I announced earlier this year, we are consulting professional and other bodies on ways of reducing waiting times for NHS hearing aids.

The Department has not prescribed staffing norms for audiology clinics, and staffing levels are a matter for decision by health authorities.

The Disabled Persons Act 1981 requires local planning authorities, when granting planning permission for buildings to which the public are admitted, to draw attention to the British Standards Institution code of practice BS 5810. This recommends the installation of induction loops in new conference halls and similar facilities. We are also considering whether the provision of induction loop systems could usefully be promoted through the existing sympathetic hearing scheme.

The Medical Research Council is the main Government agency for the promotion of medical and related biological research in this country. It receives its grant-in-aid from the Department of Education and Science.

Health Services (Avon)

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much is being spent on health services in Avon during the current year; and what was the comparable figure in 1978-79.

Mr. Hayhoe: The annual accounts of health authorities within the county of Avon and those of the Avon family practitioner committee show total expenditure of £117·2 million for 1978-79 and £250·9 million for 1984-85 (the latest year available). This is an increase in real terms of 20 per cent.

The figures include capital expenditure by the South Western regional health authority on services for the district health authorities in Avon but exclude expenditure on services for the region as a whole.

Children's Therapist (Thurlow Park School)

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide additional funding to enable a children's physiotherapist to remain at Thurlow park school, London SE27.

Mr. Whitney: No. Camberwell health authority currently provides a physiotherapy service to Thurlow park school. The health authority has decided to review its physiotherapy services across the whole district with the aim of deploying staff to the best effect and reducing waiting lists as far as possible. Whatever the outcome of the review I am assured that the district health authority will continue to provide a physiotherapy service to Thurlow park school.

Supplementary Benefit

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many people claimed supplementary benefit in Barking in (a) 1979 and (b) 1985; and what percentage change that represents;

(2) what was the percentage change in (a) staff handling supplementary benefit and (b) all staff at the local Department of Health and Social Security offices for the same period.

Mr. Major: Barking is covered by one of the Department's offices, Barking, but the office's boundary is not conterminous with the boundary of the constituency.

Comprehensive figures are not available before 1982-83 and information on the number of individuals who claimed supplementary benefit is not available in the form requested.

Information that is available for the office is as follows:

Number of new and repeat claims to supplementary benefit (including unsuccessful)

1985-86	14,652

Direct comparisons between numbers of staff and claims are misleading as workloads vary considerably by type and duration of claim and the action that has to be taken. All these factors vary over time as a result of legislative, policy and procedural changes. Examples of such changes are the introduction of housing benefit and postal claim forms.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people claimed supplementary benefit in Leicester, West at local offices of his Department at Yeoman street, Leicester, and Lower Hill street, Leicester in (a) 1979 and (b) 1985; what percentage change that represents; and what was the percentage change in staff handling (i) supplementary benefit and (ii) all staff at those offices over the same period.

Mr. Major: Comprehensive figures are not available before 1980-81 and information on the number of individuals who claimed supplementary benefit is not available in the form requested.

Information that is available is shown in the table. The Yeoman street and Lower Hill street offices cover a larger area than the Leicester, West constituency.

† In January 1981 Leicester, East area office and national insurance office combined to form Yeoman street.

Direct comparisons between numbers of staff and claims are misleading as workloads vary considerably by type and duration of claim and the action that has to be taken. All these factors vary over time as a result of legislative, policy and procedural changes. Examples of such changes are the introduction of housing benefit and postal claim forms.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many cases have been instigated during the last 12 months under the Supplementary Benefit Act 1976, as amended, to recover supplementary benefit paid to a person seeking entry to the United Kingdom from the person undertaking to be responsible for maintenance and accommodation for a period of any leave granted; and how much money has been recovered.

Mr. Major: Departmental statistics do not show the types of case in which action under Section 18 and 25 of the Act is instigated but, so far as I am aware, no such action has been taken in a case involving a sponsored immigrant.

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the estimate of supplementary benefit take-up derived from the 1983 families with low income tables broken down into (a) pensioners, (b) non-pensioners, (c) sick and disabled, (d) unemployed and one-parent families, showing (i) the number entitled to supplementary benefit, (ii) the proportion receiving benefit, (iii) the number eligible but not receiving benefit, (iv) the estimated benefit unclaimed and (v) the average weekly amount unclaimed on the same basis as his answer of 30 November 1983, Official Report, column 532-6.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on 22 July 1986.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many people claimed supplementary benefit at the (a) Parkgate, (b) Arndale and (c) Irene house offices of his Department in Wandsworth in 1985; and what were the comparable figures in 1979;

(2) what were the (a) total staff and (b) staff handling supplementary benefit at the (i) Parkgate road (ii) Arndale and (iii) Irene house offices of his Department in 1985; and what were the comparable figures in 1979.

Mr. Major: Comprehensive figures are not available before 1982-83 and information on the number of individuals who claimed supplementary benefit is not available in the form requested.

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many people claimed supplementary benefit in the Hamilton constituency in (a) 1979 and (b) 1985; and what percentage change that represents;

(2) what was the percentage change in (a) staff handling supplementary benefit and (b) all staff at the Hamilton local office of his Department between 1979 and 1985.

Mr. Major: Hamilton constituency is covered by one of the Department's offices, Hamilton, but the office's boundary is not conterminous with the boundary of the constituency.

Information on the number of individuals who claimed supplementary benefit is not available in the form requested.

The information that is available for the office is as follows:

Mr. Norman Hogg asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the present number of persons in receipt of supplementary benefit in the Cumbernauld and Kilsyth constituency.

Mr. Major: The constituency of Cumbernauld and Kilsyth is covered by the Department's office at Cumbernauld but their boundaries are not conterminous. The number of people receiving supplementary benefit from that office on 6 May 1986, the latest available figure, was 10,270.

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people claimed supplementary benefit in the Liverpool, Riverside constituency in (a) 1979 and (b) 1985; what percentage change that represents; and what was the percentage change in (i) staff handling supplementary benefit and (ii) all staff at the local offices of his Department for that same period.

Mr. Major: Liverpool, Riverside is covered by three of the Department's offices, Liverpool (City), Bootle and Toxteth, but their boundaries are not conterminous with the boundary of the constituency.

Comprehensive figures are not available before 1982-83 and information on the number of individuals who claimed supplementary benefit is not available in the form requested.

† In 1984-85 nine posts were removed from the office following transfer of social security appeal tribunal work to the office of the president of the tribunal.

‡ In April 1983 14 posts were transferred to Toxteth ILO following boundary changes.

Direct comparisons between numbers of staff and claims are misleading as workloads vary considerably by type and duration of claim and the action that has to be taken. All these factors vary over time as a result of legislative, policy and procedural changes. Examples of such changes are the introduction of housing benefit and postal claim forms.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list what are included within the normal requirements subsumed within the supplementary benefit rate for a child aged (a) 16 to 17 years, (b) 11 to 15 years and (c) 0-10 years; how the supplementary benefit rates for dependent children cover these needs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Low Income Families

Mrs. Currie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he proposes to publish the low income families tables for 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The tables have been placed in the Library of the House today.

Since the Government first came to office, the real value of supplementary benefit has risen by around 6 per cent., and by more for some families with children. Between the last two years in the tables the real rates rose by about 2½ per cent. Up to one third of the total increase in the number of families included in the tables is directly due to this improvement in the help provided for those most in need.

The technical assumptions underlying the low-income families tables have remained largely unaltered since the first analysis was undertaken. I have therefore set in train a technical review of the methods and assumptions on which the tables are based. Any improvements in measurement methods should be reflected in future issues of the tables. On the wider question of alternative approaches to the measurement of living standards, I refer my hon. Friend to the discussion in the Green Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9519) Volume 3.

McColl Report

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to make a further statement about the McColl report.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend and the hon. Member to my reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 24 July.

Social Security Bill

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are his intentions in regard to the timing of implementing the proposals of the Social Security Bill.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects the changes to the industrial injuries scheme proposed in the Social Security Bill to come into effect.

Mr. Newton: The extension of entitlement to invalid care allowance to married women is to take effect immediately after Royal Assent (with retrospective effect from 22 December 1984).

As has already been announced, the changes in respect of benefit in cases of voluntary unemployment will be introduced in October 1986. We intend that the provisions concerning the reduced rates of short term benefits and modifying the trade dispute provisions will also be brought in, in October 1986. At about the same time, subject to completion of the necessary transitional arrangements to protect existing beneficiaries, we expect to make a start on the industrial injuries changes by introducing the provisions concerning most disablement below 14 per cent. and extending the scheme to cover more accidents abroad.

As has also been announced earlier, statutory maternity pay will be introduced in April 1987, as will the new arrangements for help with maternity and funeral expenses from the Social Fund. We expect at the same time to introduce the proposed common provisions for adjudication and overpayment.

While the timing on a number of other matters remains to be decided, my hon. Friend will be aware that the main structural changes provided for in the Bill are intended to take effect in April 1988.

Dr. Bray asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if the president of social security appeal and medical appeal tribunals consulted him prior to sending a letter to chairmen and members of tribunals dated 16 July, suggesting that those feeling conscience bound to join in the debate on the new Social Security Bill should first give up their position with the tribunals.

Mr. Major: No. This is a matter entirely for the president.

Benefits

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list each change made since 1979 in the calculation, level, entitlement to, or payment of social security benefits other than the indexation which took place during the 1978-79 financial year giving for each (a) the estimated first-year revenue effects in current prices and (b) the cumulative estimated revenue effects up to August 1986, or the most recent available date.

Mr. Newton: To attempt to assemble such a list would entail disproportionate cost, and a calculation of the kind requested at (b) of the hon. Lady's question would involve so wide a range of assumptions about the interaction of successiv. measures as to make it of doubtful practicality and questionable worth. However, section 3.15 of volume II of the January 1986 public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702-II) gives some broad estimates of the main factors contributing to the increase of £17·7 billion in the social budget between 1980-81 and 1985-86, which represents an increase of 30 per cent. in real terms.

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the latest take-up estimates for family income supplement, one-parent benefit, free welfare milk, free school meals, standard housing benefit, certificated housing benefit, and housing benefit supplement, derived from the 1983 families with low income tables showing for each benefit (a) the number entitled to benefit, (b) the proportion receiving benefit, (c) the number eligible but not receiving benefit, (d) the estimated amount of benefit unclaimed and (e) the average weekly amount unclaimed.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 24 July 1986]: The latest available information is as follows (take-up figures for 1983 are not yet available):

Benefit	Percentage take-up rate	Annual amount unclaimed	Average weekly amount unclaimed	Entitled non-claimants
	per cent.	£ million	£	Thousands
Family income supplement*	50	57	8·30	130
Free milk†	45	44	1·30	660
Standard housing benefit Certificated housing benefit Housing benefit supplement	First take up estimates for housing benefit are expected to be available shortly.
Free school meals	Information held centrally does not enable an answer to be provided in the form requested.
One parent benefit	Take-up of one parent benefit is based on those who stand to gain by claiming (not all families can gain because some receive supplementary benefit which counts one parent benefit as income). The latest estimate suggests that about 75 per cent. of those who stood to gain were receiving it. In 1982-83, about 100,000 families are estimated to have unclaimed benefits (at £3·65 per week) of £18 million.

Consultant Referral Rates

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what advice has been issued to general practitioners concerning referral rates to consultants.

Mr. Hayhoe: None.

Special Health Authorities

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each special health authority and for each year since 1979, the number of (a) medical staff and (b) nursing staff and (c) ancillary staff, expressing these figures both in terms of actual numbers of employees and in whole-time equivalent terms; and if he will also give these figures adjusted to take account of the change in the working week.

Mr. Hayhoe: I assume the hon. Member is referring to the special health authorities responsible for the management of the London post-graduate teaching hospitals. Such information as is available for each of these special health authorities is shown in table 1. Information on numbers of staff in the nursing and midwifery and ancillary staff groups is not available for all the years requested. Estimated changes in nursing and midwifery staff whole-time equivalents between 1979 and 1985, adjusted for the effect of the change of working hours during 1980, are given in table 2.

Unemployment

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his Department's estimate of the implications for the annual level of resources provided to the National Health Service of the growth of unemployment since 1979.

Mr. Hayhoe: No such estimate has been made.

Accident and Emergency Provisions (Nucleus Design)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assessment he has made of the efficiency and suitability of the nucleus design of accident and emergency provisions; and what he proposes to make good revealed deficiencies.

Mr. Whitney: An assessment has been made by an independent academic organisation, the medical architecture research unit. All the departments surveyed were found to be working smoothly and efficiently except one where local factors were causing a rate of attendance 50 per cent. above the national average. The health authority responsible is taking steps to relieve the pressure on this department.

Childminders

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information is available to his Department in respect of the number of children cared for by childminders; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Information is not collected in the form requested. There were 57,800 registered childminders and 126,600 places available in England at 31 March 1985, but it is not known how many of these places were taken up. The figures show an increase of about 9 per cent. over March 1984.

Artificial Limb-fitting Centres

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many centres there are for fitting artificial limbs in the United Kingdom and how many people are employed in them.

Mr. Newton: There are 27 DHSS centres and subcentres for fitting artificial limbs in England employing 872 staff. Services in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and Northern Ireland.

Home Helps

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of home helps employed by local authorities are from the ethnic minorities.

Mr. Whitney: Figures are not collected centrally to provide this information.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what proportion of home helps currently in post have received any form of training; and if he will make a statement on the type of training generally offered;

(2) what proportion of home care organisers employed by local authorities hold (a) the CSS qualification, (b) the CQSW qualification, (c) the local government training board diploma in domiciliary-care management or its earlier IHHO equivalent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Local social services authorities in England have responsibility for the training of their home helps and home help organisers and it is normal practice for newly recruited home helps to receive some in-service training. No figures are collected centrally to show the numbers in post who have received training. The local government training board has recently developed a new diploma in domiciliary care management and training material for home help organisers and home helps.

Social Services Inspectorate

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of the members of his Department's social services inspectorate, based either in London or in the regions, worked as domiciliary care management at any time before they entered the inspectorate.

Mr. Whitney: Since 1971 most local social services departments have decentralised domiciliary care services so that they are managed at local level. A major criterion for entry to the social services inspectorate is that candidates should have at least five years experience of senior management in a personal social services agency. While it is not possible, without incurring disproportionate cost, to offer precise numbers it is estimated that half of the inspectors will have been responsible for managing domiciliary care services (among other services) prior to joining the social services inspectorate.

Elderly People

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the expenditure per head of population aged 75 years and over in 1984-85 on (a) local authority home care services and (b) meals on wheels, expressed as a proportion of expenditure on these services per head of those aged 75 years and over in 1978-79;

(2) what has been the increase in each year since 1979, expressed in index form using 1979 as the base year of expenditure in real terms on (a) home helps and (b) meals served through lunch clubs and meals on wheels, to people aged 75 years and over.

(3) what has been the change in (a) the number of home help hours delivered to people aged 75 years and over, and (b) the number of meals served through lunch clubs and meals on wheels to those aged 75 years and over, in each year over the period from 1979 to the latest year for which figures are available, expressed in index form and using 1979 as the base year;

Mr. Whitney: It is not possible to provide the analyses requested in respect of persons over 75 on the basis of centrally held information about local authority home help and meal-on-wheels services.

The information available is set out in the "Personal Social Services Statistics Actuals" published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (columns 196-200 and 213-231 in the volume for 1984-85) copies of which are in the Library.

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the increase in the number of people in Great Britain aged over 75 years every year since 1979 expressed in index form using 1979 as the base year.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested is as follows:

Estimated resident population of Great Britain aged 75 and over

Mid-year	Numbers	Index (1979 = 100)
1979	3,038,000	100
1980	3,123,600	103
1981	3,209,500	106
1982	3,289,100	108
1983	3,376,400	111
1984	3,465,900	114
1985	3,543,000	117

Queen Alexandra Hospital, Portsmouth

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many operating theatres have been closed and for how long at the Queen Alexandra hospital in Portsmouth; and what effect this has had on the hospital's waiting lists.

Mr. Whitney: I understand from the district health authority that all 14 main operating theatres at Queen Alexandra hospital, Portsmouth will close for essential repairs on 18 August. The work will not be complete until February 1987 although it is hoped to reopen some theatres before then. The authority is making every effort to ensure that the impact on patient care is kept to a minimum by taking on work elsewhere but up to 600 non-urgent operations may be delayed.

Artificial Limbs

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now publish his response to the McColl report on artificial limbs and appliances.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 24 July.

Mr. A. F. Farr (Prescription)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, when he hopes to reply to the hon. Member for Westminster North's letter of 1 July concerning the request of Mr. A. F. Farr to be supplied under the National Health Service with a particular nasal decongestant or an acceptable alternative.

Mr. Whitney: I replied to my hon. Friend on 23 July.

Contact Lenses

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, when he intends to lay regulations concerning charges for contact lenses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The National Health Service (Payments for Optical Appliances) Amendment Regulations (SI 1986 No. 1136) were laid on 7 July and come into operation on 28 July 1986.

Public Bodies

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a list of all the bodies in Wales to which he has sole or joint responsibility for making appointments.

Mr. Fowler: There are no bodies in Wales, whose functions relate only to Wales, for which I have sole or joint responsibility for making appointments. There are a number of bodies to which I do make appointments whose work relates to the whole of the United Kingdom, or to both England and Wales, and these are listed in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1985", HMSO, 1985 [ISBN 0 11 430008 9], a copy of which is held in the Library. Of the bodies listed in that publication, several have local centres in Wales, and these include medical appeal and vaccine damage tribunals, medical boards, and war pension committees.

Residential Homes

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the average age of admission to local authority residential homes for the elderly in Great Britain;

(2) what is the average age of current residents of local authority homes fo the elderly in Great Britain.

Mr. Whitney: The data available centrally for England on persons admitted to, and resident in, local authority homes for the elderly and younger disabled relate to age groups. These data do not allow for precise calculations of the average age of such persons but a rough estimate indicates an average of about 81 years for both categories. Statistics for Scotland and Wales are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Asbestos Disease

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what conditions regarding the presence of asbestos bodies are required for the diagnosis by special medical boards of asbestos disease.

Mr. Newton: The diagnosis of asbestos-related diseases by special medical boards is not conditional on the presence of asbestos bodies. These bodies indicate past exposure to asbestos dust but are not proof of the presence of disease due to the inhalation of asbestos. However, the boards take this into account along with other medical evidence and the claimant's occupational history.

Medical Boards

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what he attributes the trends in the number of cases referred to medical boarding centres between 1975 and 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to medical boarding centres (respiratory diseases). The downward trend in the number of cases referred to these centres between 1975 and 1984 can be attributed in part to the steadily reducing numbers employed in the mining industry and in part to improved working conditions. The slight increase in 1983 followed the inclusion of occupational asthma as a prescribed disease in 1982. The low figures for 1984 can probably be attributed to the miners' strike.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he takes to ensure that his Department's officers appropriately and expeditiously assist potential applicants to special medical boards.

Mr. Newton: Applications to special medical boards are from people suffering from malignant respiratory diseases. Advice to these people is contained in leaflets N12, N13 and PN1.

These cases are handled with extreme urgency. Arrangements are made immediately for a medical board whilst at the same time the other information needed to decide the claim is gathered. Extra managerial checks are undertaken to ensure that these claims are progressed as quickly as possible.

If the hon. Member has a particular case in mind perhaps he would write to me.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether medical boarding centre examinations are carried out by Dr. K. Browne; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Dr. K. Browne was appointed in 1985 as a part-time medical officer to the medical boarding centre (respiratory diseases) in London following his retirement from the post of medical officer to Cape Asbestos Ltd. He is an internationally known specialist on occupational lung diseases.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on how many occasions hon. and right hon. Members have written to him or to other Ministers in his Department about individual findings of the special medical boards since 1979.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Disablement Benefit

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will introduce payment of industrial disablement benefit to sufferers from severe forms of industrial disablement immediately it is accepted that they are so suffering but without waiting for the degree of disablement to be determined finally.

Mr. Newton: Industrial disablement benefit can already be paid on the basis of a provisional assessment of disablement.

Hospitals (Alerts)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy to collect details of each red alert and yellow alert including the hospital and health authority concerned, the starting and finishing dates of the alert and the causes, respectively.

Mr. Whitney: We have no plans to collect this information centrally. It is the responsibility of health authorities to manage and supervise hospital and specialist services to meet local need. Arrangements for admission to National Health Service hospitals are planned to take into account circumstances which would significantly affect the demand for services.

GPs (Patient Consultations)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each year since 1979 the total number of patient consultations with general practitioners.

Mr. Hayhoe: Estimates based on the general household survey sample are as follows:

	Millions
1979	182
1980	193
1981	176
1982	194
1983	193
1984	191

St. Helens and Knowsley Health Authority

Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to reduce the cash limits of St. Helens and Knowsley district health authority for 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 23 July.

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what effects the planned resource allocation working party reductions in Liverpool and South Sefton will have on the St. Helens and Knowsley health authority.

Mr. Hayhoe: The allocation of resources to the St. Helens and Knowsley health authority is the responsibility of Mersey regional health authority.

The hon. Member may therefore wish to contact the regional chairman.

Acute Specialties (Costs)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the cost per head of the weighted population for the acute specialties in each district health authority; and what is the national average.

Mr. Whitney: The health service costing returns currently in use do not identify costs by specialty. The Department makes estimates by broad service groups but these figures are only available for England as a whole. Total expenditure on acute services per head of population amounted to some £90 in 1984-85.

For acute in-patient services only, the 1984-85 performance indicators published by the Department include information on relative expenditure per head of the resident population in districts. A set of the indicators is available in the Library.

NHS Training Conference

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the purpose of the training conference organised by the National Association of Health Authorities and the National Health Service Training Authority on 24 September; what fees are to be paid to the speakers or the organisations they work for; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: It is Government policy to develop awareness and expertise in customer relations in the National Health Service following the recommendations of the Griffiths report. It is important that there is a national focus for the subject and the National Association of Health Authorities and the National Health Service Training Authority are uniquely placed to ensure that this is provided by means of a national conference on customer relations.

The aims of the conference on 24 September are to provide those who attend with:

1. An increased awareness of the importance and contribution made by good customer relations to the effective provision and management of patient care services.
2. An increased awareness of strategies and techniques used by enterprises inside and without the National Health Service to ensure that customer interests come first.

The conference will also launch a new joint NAHA and NHSTA publication "Customer relations training in the National Health Service 1986". I understand only one speaker is being paid a fee of £450 for advising on the design and organisation of the conference as well as speaking at it.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people are, at the latest available date, awaiting hospital treatment, for each specialty at every hospital in Wandsworth; and what were the comparable figures in each of the last five years.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested is given in the table.

The data collected for individual hospitals do not distinguish between urgent and non-urgent cases.

Note:

It should be noted that in certain specialties a hospital may maintain a waiting list which is common to more than one hospital within a district health authority.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the number of people on the waiting lists for acute surgery every six months since 30 September 1982 for (a) each district health authority and special health authority in Greater London, (b) the health authorities in Greater London added together and (c) the health authorities in Inner London added together;

(2) if he will give the number of people on in-patient waiting lists every six months since 30 September 1982 for (a) each district health authority and special health authority in Greater London, (b) the health authorities in Greater London added together and (c) the health authorities in Inner London added together.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 21 July 1986, c. 95]: The requested information is given in the tables.

National Health Service

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the total final consumption of the National Health Service at 1980 prices on the basis set out in table 9.3 of the 1985 United Kingdom National Accounts.

Mr. Hayhoe: The table shows the growth which has taken place in National Health Service expenditure in recent years, after taking account of National Health Service pay and price increases. The figures are different from those used, for example, in public expenditure White Papers and in the Government's evidence to the Social Services Committee for its inquiries into public expenditure on the social services as they refer to calendar years and have been prepared using slightly different definitions of expenditure and accounting conventions. They exclude, for example, income from patients' charges, some capital spending and, up to 1 April 1974, expenditure by local authorities on services which were then transferred to the National Health Service.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information is available to his Department on the impact of rises in prescription charges on the average length of medication provided by the amount of drugs supplied on prescriptions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that information is not available in the form requested.

Information is available on the average quantity of medicines prescribed per prescription. The data for the last 10 years show no clear relationship between changes in the quantity prescribed and increases in the prescription charge.

South Africa

Mr. Cabom asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will consider a ban on the use of South African products in all health service facilities.

Mr. Hayhoe: Under the Government's public purchasing policy health authorities are expected to seek best value for money in their purchasing decisions and to adopt procedures compatible with international obligations under the European Community purchasing directives and GATT Agreement. There is no specific provision in National Health Service purchasing guidance for the inclusion or exclusion of particular countries of origin or sources of supply and I have at present no plans to change this situation.

Cancer Treatment Scanner (Whipps Cross Hospital)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy to provide the Waltham Forest district health authority with additional funds for the purchase of a cancer treatment scanner for Whipps Cross hospital of an amount sufficient to make up for any shortfall in the sums raised towards the cost by private donations or charities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The allocation of resources to Waltham Forest health authority is a matter for North East Thames regional health authority. It is for the authorities concerned to consider in the light of priorities and the existing provision of services for patients suffering from cancer whether they wish to fund the provision of a cancer treatment scanner at Whipps Cross hospital.

Hospital Services (Hampstead)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will take steps to ensure that the four wards at the Royal Free hospital occupied by patients moved from the New End hospital will in future be returned to the acute function;

(2) whether he will ensure that the full amount obtained by the sale of the New End hospital is returned to Hampstead heath authority to meet capital and revenue costs associated with the redevelopment of the Queen Mary hospital.

Mr. Whitney: Hampstead health authority's proposals for the future provision of services for elderly people are laid out in a consultative document issued by the authority on 21 July. The document details both the authority's plans for the four wards at the Royal Free that would be occupied by patients from New End, and the current understanding between Hampstead and North East Thames regional health authority over the use of the proceeds from any sale of New End. If following public consultation, the proposals are formally adopted by the health authority, and the Hampstead community health council objects, they will come to Ministers for a final decision. It would not therefore be appropriate for me to comment.

Medical Statements

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether a standard form exists for his Department's officers to submit to general practitioners where medical statements are required.

Mr. Newton: A standard form, DLSB/131 is available for issue to the claimant when doctor's evidence is needed to support a claim. The claimant is asked to approach his doctor for him to complete it.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what advice has been given to his Department's officers in relation to accepting claimants' own word rather than demanding medical statements especially for weekly additional requirements.

Mr. Major: Guidance on the circumstances in which doctor's evidence is needed to support a claim is set out in paragraphs 4003-4005 of the S manual, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what procedures exist for the reimbursement by general practitioners of charges for medical statements where these should not have been levied.

Mr. Hayhoe: Complaints that a general practitioner may have failed to comply with his terms of service by charging for a certificate which should have been provided free are investigated by the family practitioner committee. If, following an investigation, the doctor is found in breach of his terms of service, the family practitioner committee may recommend to the Secretary of State that a sum should be recovered from the doctor's remuneration and the charge refunded. Anyone who believes that he may have been wrongly charged should first seek clarification from the doctor and, if the matter is not resolved satisfactorily, should complain to the family practitioner committee within eight weeks of the issue of the certificate.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why general practitioners provide medical statements for social security purposes free of charge.

Mr. Hayhoe: This is a provision of general medical practitioners' terms of service. I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the right hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) on 15 April at column 367-368.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much Health Service expenditure as an absolute figure and as a percentage of total National Health Service expenditure for each of the past 10 years was spent on (a) elderly and geriatric services, (b) community services, (c) the mentally handicapped, (d) the mentally ill, (e) obstetric services and (f) acute hospital services.

Mr. Hayhoe: The requested breakdown by client group is available only for hospital and community health services current expenditure which accounts for about two thirds of total National Health Service expenditure. The table shows estimated gross current expenditure by health authorities, in cash and as a percentage of total hospital and community health services expenditure, on the main client groups each year between 1975-76 and 1984-85, the latest year for which these estimates are available. These estimates of health authorities' spending are valid for monitoring broad trends, but not for making close comparisons between individual programmes. They are derived from my Department's programme budget analyses which have been provided to the Social Services Committee each year since 1980 and have been published in minutes of evidence associated with the Committee's reports. The latest analysis at constant prices, together with notes of caution on the limits of its accuracy, are given in the Committee's Fourth Report (HC 387-II) which was published earlier this month.

Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the total capital expenditure on the National Health Service in each year since 1970, at constant prices.

Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing, for the European Economic Community as a whole, for each present member state of the European Economic Community, the United States of America and Japan, the percentage of the gross domestic product in constant prices devoted to health and social security expenditure in each year between 1979 and 1986.

Mr. Newton: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will update the information on the National Health Service and personal social services expenditure per capita given in his answer of 11 November 1985, Official Report, column 96, so as to give data for 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 21 July 1986, c. 99]: Estimates of health and personal social services expenditure per capita for 1984-85 are expected to be available by mid-August and comparable estimates for 1985-86 at about the same time next year.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will update the information on National Health expenditure provided in his answer of 1 July 1985, Official Report, column 47, to include 1985-86 and an estimate for 1986-87.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 21 July 1986, c. 103]: The available information is set out in the following tables. Since the reply to the hon. Member last year there have been a number of technical changes to the figuring to reflect a revised Vote structure and a change in accounting for hospital and community health services spending. I have therefore provided figures on a comparable basis from 1978-79 onwards. The figures now also include income from land sales. Fully comparable figures for earlier years are not available.

The figures for spending deflated by the services own pay and price increases are not an adequate measure of the resources available for patient care as they exclude the very significant improvements in efficiency which have been made.

NHS (Tendering)

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what consultation was held with commercial contractors prior to the preparation of specimen contracts for tendering in the National Health Service; and whether he has any plans to revise the specimen contracts to tailor them more directly to the requirements of individual services.

Mr. Whitney: Consultation took place with the main trade associations representing the cleaning, catering and laundry contractors prior to issue of specimen contracts. We are prepared to consider any proposals which are intended to improve them.

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what independent evaluation of competitive tendering procedures has been carried out.

Mr. Whitney: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to him on 3 July at column 631.

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer of 3 July, when health authorities include capital investment in drawing up in-house tenders; and what steps his Department takes to ensure the capital element is fully taken into account in tender adjudication.

Mr. Whitney: The Department issued full advice on the treatment of capital expenditure in the evaluation of tenders in the notes of guidance attached to the specimen contract documents for laundry services and for linen and garment rental services. Copies of both documents are in the Library.

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer of 3 July, what is the total value of the 48 per cent. of National Health Service laundry services where tenders have not been invited; what timescale he envisages for putting these outstanding services out to tender; and what action will he take to ensure compliance from those authorities who are resisting the tendering system.

Mr. Whitney: The estimated value of the laundry services which still had to be put out to tender at 31 March 1986 was £32 million a year. In all but a few exceptional cases, we expect the outstanding services to have been put out to tender by March 1987.

Only three health authorities in England have failed so far to agree competitive tendering programmes. With the support of Ministers, regional chairmen are continuing with their efforts to secure compliance.

NHS (Linen Losses)

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received about an independent study to evaluate linen losses in the National Health Service and to assess the full costs of laundry, linen distribution and linen maintenance services; and whether he would support such a study.

Mr. Whitney: Steps have already been taken to ensure that linen losses are properly recorded by health authorities. The Association of British Laundry, Cleaning and Rental Services has requested the Department to commission a study to obtain the full cost of total linen services to a health authority. This request is being considered.

Emergency, Acute and Geriatric Beds

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current number of (a) emergency,

(b) acute and (c) geriatric beds available at (i) the Royal Northern, (ii) the Whittington, (iii) St. Bartholomew's hospitals; and what are the comparable figures in July 1985 and July 1984.

Mr. Whitney: This information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may care to approach either the North East Thames regional health authority or the district health authorities concerned for the data he seeks.

Children (Speech Therapy)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he makes of the weekly time children needing speech therapy receive; and if he has any plans to increase it.

Mr. Whitney: Information about individual treatment is not held centrally. Professional staff determine the time needed for therapy for individual patients. It is for health authorities to decide the total amount of speech therapy time that can be made available for children in the light of assessments of need and their current resoucres.

Occupational Pension Schemes

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish an estimate of the amount of the difference between the sum of the transfer payments paid by private occupational pension schemes in respect of early leavers in the last financial year, and the total amount that would have been required to procure pension rights in the schemes from which the members resigned precisely equivalent to those which they forfeited.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Low Incomes

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the low incomes study for 1983.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Derbyshire, South (Mrs. Currie) today.

Health Authorities (Manpower Statistics)

Mr. Sayeed asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the numbers of (a) doctors, (b) nurses, (c) midwives, (d) dentists, (e) opticians and (f) pharmacists in (i) Bristol and Weston and (ii) Frenchay health authorities in 1979, 1983, and the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Pharmacists

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what safeguards he intends to introduce into the new pharmacy contract to prevent a pharmacist who has received compensation from a closure from opening a new pharmacy.

Mr. Hayhoe: During the debate in Committee on the NHS (Amendment) Bill I agreed to look again at the system of payments to pharmacists who wished to relinquish their NHS contract, or to relocate their business to areas where they could better serve patient needs, to ensure that the system will work as intended and that there are adequate safeguards against abuse.

The proposed system already has a number of important safeguards. It will operate for two years only and small pharmacies only will be eligible; there is no opportunity for someone to open a pharmacy and then quickly close it to obtain a payment; under the new arrangements a new National Health Service contract will be granted only where it is necessary or desirable for patient services, so new pharmacies will be opened only where patient needs dictate.

I have considered carefully the need and the options for strengthening these in-built safeguards. Both the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain and the Pharmaceutical Services Negotiating Committee have been consulted and both have given the assurance that they will be playing an active role to make sure that the system operates as intended.

Mental Health Act Commission

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those persons and organisations who have commented on the draft prepared by the Mental Health Act Commission of the code of practice referred to in section 118 of the Mental Health Act; if he will set out the procedure by which these comments will be considered; and when he anticipates laying copies of the code of practice before Parliament.

Mr. Whitney: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people were in receipt of unemployment benefit within the county of Avon on 1 April; and what was the comparable figure on 1 April 1980.

Mr. Major: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

North Western Regional Hospital Authority

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has received any proposals from the North Western regional hospital authority for the closure or partial closure of wards at Rainhill hospital.

Mr. Hayhoe: No. Rainhill hospital is administered by St. Helens and Knowsley health authority and is therefore the responsibility of Mersey regional health authority. The hon. Member may therefore wish to address his inquiries to the chairman of that authority.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has received any application from the North Western regional hospital authority for changes in the financing of district health authorities which would affect any hospital with a regional secure unit.

Mr. Hayhoe: No. The funding of individual districts is the responsibility of regional health authorities. The hon. Member may therefore wish to address his inquiries to the chairman of the regional health authority for the hospital he has in mind.

Family Credit Scheme

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his reply of 9 June, Official Report, column 92, to the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds, if, before he determines when and how to introduce family credit, he will make known to the House the approximate compliance costs.

Mr. Newton: The Government have now announced that family credit will be paid direct when it is introduced in 1988. Accordingly, any costs which would have resulted from payment with wages will no longer arise.

Benefits

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people at the latest date for which information is available were receiving war disablement pension at (i) 20 per cent. or less, (ii) 30 per cent., (iii) 40 per cent., (iv) 50 to 90 per cent., (v) 100 per cent., (vi) unemployability supplement, (vii) constant attendance allowance, (viii) exceptionally severe disablement allowance, (ix) comforts allowance, (x) allowance for lowered standard of occupation, (xi) age allowance, (xii) clothing allowance, (xiii) invalidity allowance and (xiv) war pensioners' mobility supplement.

Mr. Newton: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Research Management

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if a new chief scientist has yet been appointed; and if he will make a statement about the administration of research management in his Department.

Mr. Fowler: I am pleased to announce that Professor Francis William O'Grady CBE TD MD FRCP FRCPath has agreed to become the chief scientist to my Department. He will be taking up his advisory appointment which is part-time on 1 September 1986. Professor O'Grady is currently professor of microbiology at the university of Nottingham and will continue to fill that post part-time while advising me on the research structures of the Department and the scientific validity of the programme which he will steer as chairman of the departmental research committee. Professor O'Grady will also represent the Department on major research committees and councils, particularly the Medical Research Council. Executive responsibility for managing the Department's research management division lies with Dr. Jeremy Metters, the deputy chief scientist and director of research management.

Mentally Handicapped People (Mobility Allowance)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations he has received on the availability of mobility allowance to the mentally handicapped.

Mr. Newton: We have recently received a number of representations in various forms, all of which seek a widening of the scope of the mobility allowance scheme so that more mentally handicapped people are likely to qualify for the allowance. The representations are aimed mainly at making provision for people who are unable to make purposeful use of their physical ability to walk without guidance or supervision from another person.

Basildon Hospital Obstetric Department

Mrs. Currie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent changes have been made in the resources available to the Basildon hospital obstetric department; how many foetal heart monitors are available in that department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Daily Mirror article on this subject on 5 April was misleading. There have been no reductions in the resources available for obstetric services in Basildon. The obstetric department had seven heart monitors, five more than the Daily Mirror reported as available to the labour ward at that time.

King's College Hospital, London

Mrs. Currie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on what basis restrictions have been placed by pathology consultants at King's college hospital, London, on tests for blood and urine; whether urgent cases are in any way affected; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Daily Mirror report on this subject on 16 July was misleading. Consultants at King's College Hospital have themselves decided to introduce a system to control the number of routine and non-urgent cases that they are responsible for undertaking: urgent cases are not affected. It is this example of good management which the Daily Mirror chose to condemn.

Nurses (Pay)

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing the real increase in salary at the bottom of the scale for each grade of nurse for each year since 1979, indicating the annual percentage change and the overall cumulative percentage increase for each grade.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Addenbrooke's Hospital, Cambridge

Mrs. Currie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from the department of anaesthesia and intensive care at Addenbrooke's hospital, Cambridge, concerning the number of ventilators available for use on small children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Daily Mirror report on this subject on 14 May was misleading as the consultant himself has pointed out.

Up to the middle of May as many as 27 ventilators for use on small children were available in Addenbrooke's hospital, although not all are designed for use with children of all sizes. Nevertheless the consultant was concerned that a time might arise when the type of ventilator suitable for a child liver transplant patient would not be available when it was required for an operation, although no such occasion had in fact arisen. As a result of prudently voicing this concern, I am delighted that a charitable source has supplemented the resources of the NHS by offering the money to purchase an additional suitable ventilator.

Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Birmingham

Mrs. Currie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what funds have been made available this financial year to the Queen Elizabeth hospital, Birmingham, for liver transplant operations; how many operations have been undertaken; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Daily Mirror report on this subject 12 July was misleading.

The funds allocated under the arrangements for supra regional funding of highly specialised services for the liver transplant programme at the Queen Elizabeth hospital, Birmingham, were £482,000 in 1985-86 and £647,000 in 1986-87, an increase of 34 per cent. 25 liver transplant operations were performed in 1985-86, and 13 were performed between 1 April and 22 July 1986.

Charing Cross Hospital

Mrs. Currie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans there are for Charing Cross hospital to acquire a new gastroscope; what change has been made in Charing Cross hospital's budget to replace and repair medical equipment of this kind; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Daily Mirror article on this subject on 24 June was misleading.

There has been no reduction in the Charing Cross hospital's budget for replacement and repair of medical equipment. Indeed the purchase of a new gastroscope was recently authorised by the health authority.

Bloomsbury Health Authority

Mrs. Currie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about the response made by the Bloomsbury health authority to the complaint that a sick baby, who later died, was discharged from the Middlesex hospital early in 1986, as a result of a shortage of beds for young patients.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Daily Mirror report on this subject on 3 March was misleading.

The Bloomsbury health authority issued a press statement on 3 March. The baby in question was admitted to the Middlesex hospital for 24 hours observation and then discharged. The consultant concerned considered her healthy and well upon discharge — a fact the Daily Mirror belatedly acknowledged on 11 July. The baby tragically died six days after discharge. The authority stated that the baby "was not discharged as a result of pressure on beds". The coroner found no connection between the baby's death and her discharge from hospital.

Cervical Carcinoma

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report for the following age categories (i) 15 to 24 years, (ii) 45 to 54 years, (iii) 55 to 64 years, (iv) 65 to 74 years and (v) 75 to 84 years, the number of deaths from cervical carcinoma in (a) England and (b) each health authority in England for each year since 1979.

Mr. Hayhoe: Information for the years 1980 to 1984 inclusive is available from "Mortality Statistics: area, series DH5 nos. 7-11, table 4," copies of which are in the Library. Tables giving figures for 1979 and 1985 have been placed in the Library.

British Pensioners (Poland)

Mr. Normanton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether any steps are being taken to ensure that naturalised Britons of Polish origin who have retired to Poland on British pensions can receive their pensions with annual adjustments to the pension.

Mr. Major: We have no proposals for treating this group of pensioners differently from others who go abroad to live in countries with which the United Kingdom has not reached an agreement to provide for payment of pension upratings.

Irradiated and Novel Food

Mr. Loyden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he plans any change in his policy on irradiated and novel foods in the light of the report of the advisory committee on irradiated and novel foods;

(2) what reply he is making to the response of the Liverpool, Central and Southern community health council to the report submitted by the advisory committee on irradiated and novel foods.

Mr. Whitney: The Liverpool central and southern community health council is being informed that its views will be taken fully into account, along with those of other organisations, when Ministers formally consider the advice in the report. At present, we have no plans further to amend the Food (Control of Irradiation) Regulations 1967.

Rent Rebates and Allowances

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer of 3 June, Official Report, column 514, if he is yet able to give the information there sought by the hon. Member for Birkenhead.

Mr. Major: I have written to the hon. Member today explaining the delay.

Special Health Authorities

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the membership of the special health authorities giving the nominating bodies and the date of expiry of each term of office.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the standardised mortality rates for people in social classes 1 and 5 for the year 1981.

Mr. Whitney: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Tobacco

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the estimate received from the Government economic adviser on the total social cost of tobacco, including his own Department's estimate of costs for the National Health Service and a breakdown of each component of the costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Black Report

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for the Social Services if he will now implement all of the recommendations of the Black report; if he will identify those recommendations which would not require any increase in public expenditure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Wheelchairs

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether, in the last six months, any orders have been placed for wheelchairs that (a) do not conform to British standards and (b) are made by manufacturers that have no previous experience of wheelchair manufacture.

Mr. Newton: I shall write to the right hon. Member.

Family Statistics

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the proportion of children in care from families in which the head of household is unemployed.

Mr. Whitney: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will estimate the number of children who live in families in which there are no working adults, giving the most recent figure;

(2) if he will estimate the number of children who live in families in which the head of household is (a) unemployed and (b) has been unemployed for over one year, giving the most recent figures.

Mr. Major: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Suicide

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has received the results of the Medical Research Council's study of the rate of attempted suicide among unemployed and employed men; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Children's Health (Parental Unemployment)

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what evidence there is of the effects of parents' unemployment on children's health; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Radiotherapy

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what departmental guidance is given to operators of linear accelerator machines used in radiotherapy regarding the length of time the machines are in use;

(2) how many linear accelerator machines for radiotherapy treatment are in current use in the United Kingdom;

(3) whether he is satisfied with the safety of the older linear accelerator machines still in use for treatment in radiotherapy.

Mr. Whitney: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Linear Accelerator Waiting Lists

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he is satisfied with the safety of the older linear accelerator waiting lists for cardiology departments for every year for the past 15 years.

Mr. Whitney: I shall write to the hon. Member.

AIDS

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what provision is made for community care of terminally ill acquired immune deficiency syndrome patients;

(2) what provision is made for hospice care of terminally ill acquired immune deficiency syndrome patients;

(3) what central funding is available for community care and hospice provision for terminally ill acquired immune deficiency syndrome patients;

(4) pursuant to his reply of 16 December, Official Report, column 71, whether he is yet in a position to announce the results of his consideration of discrimination against acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus carriers in the fields of employment insurance and education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Whitney: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Family Planning

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he is taking to improve National Health Service family planning and pregnancy counselling services for young people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Government are concerned to reduce the risk of unwanted pregnancy among young people, and to encourage them to seek advice early if they suspect they are pregnant. To aid the further development of health services in this area, I shall be inviting interested health authorities to submit proposals for projects to provide a family planning and pregnancy counselling service specifically for young people under 25. Where teenagers are concerned, such services must take account of the need not to undermine family stability or relationships between parents and their children. These requirements will be fully considered before projects are approved. I would hope to select three projects which would be district-based, and funded centrally for a three-year period starting in this financial year.

The projects will be evaluated and I hope that the findings will help health authorities generally in providing services appropriate to this age group.

Preventive Dental Treatment

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make preventive treatments available under the general dental service.

Mr. Hayhoe: I have agreed to the making of regulations which will permit topical fluoride to be available under the general dental service. Dentists will be able from 1 October to prescribe this treatment to children with special needs where they feel it to be of particular value. Further regulations will be made to permit the prescribing of fissure sealants as soon as agreement has been reached with the profession on points of detail. I understand that my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland will be laying similar regulations.

Social Security Payments (Sunderland)

Mr. Merchant asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he can give the total figures for social security payments in the Sunderland area for the latest year available.

Mr. Major: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

NHS (Overseas Visitors)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of 16 January 1985, Official Report, column 70, if he will estimate the adminstrative costs associated with the collection of charges to overseas visitors using the National Health Service and with monitoring the system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall write to the hon. Member.

NHS Staff (Hertfordshire)

Mr. Richard Page asked the Secretary of State for Social Service what were the numbers of doctors, nurses, midwives, dentists, opticians, pharmacists, and support staff in the years 1978 to 1985 in (a) the North-West Hertfordshire health authority and (b) South-West Hertfordshire health authority; and if there are any projections available for staff levels in the future.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Blood

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give for each quarter since 1980 the total number of units of blood supplied to non-National Health Services hospitals by the regional blood transfusion service, covering South London, Surrey, Sussex and Kent;

(2) if he will give for each year since 1975 the total number of units of blood supplied to non-National Health Service hospitals by the national blood transfusion service.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 30 June 1986, c. 432]: From 1982, the first year for which we have figures, the total numbers of units of blood supplied direct to non-National Health Service hospitals from the South London regional transfusion centre were as shown in the table. The national figures follow:

Social Security Reform

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will publish in the Official Report extra information expanding tables 10A-16B of the technical annex to Cmnd. 9691 showing separately for sick and disabled, lone parents, couples with children in full-time work and not in full-time work, others in full-time work and not in full-time work, and non-pensioners without children who are couples, the numbers losing, gaining and remaining the same, indicating the amount of the change where appropriate who are (a) under 25 years and (b) aged 25 years or more;

(2) what is his estimate of the average amounts paid in (a) water rates, (b) sewerage charges and (c) domestic rates in (i) England, (ii) Wales and (iii) Scotland in 1985-86 by those receiving supplementary benefit which were used in the calculations in the technical annex to Cmnd. 9691.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 5 March 1986, c 157-58]: I regret that it has proved disproportionately costly to provide the breakdown for which the hon. Member asked, but I will write to him with such additional information as we can provide without such cost.

I regret also the delay in providing the additional information sought by the hon. Member about the basis of certain calculations in the technical annex, which is the result of the two questions having been linked together in error.

The income support model used for the technical annex to Cmnd. 9691 is based on data for Great Britain and separate figures are not available for England, Wales and Scotland. Nor were separate amounts imputed for water rates and sewerage charges.

Where water rates and sewerage charges were included in the supplementary benefit assessment recorded in the "Annual Statistical Enquiry", claimants' actual entitlement was used. Where such charges were not included, the average value imputed in the model was £1·40 a week.

For domestic rates, estimates were derived from available information on claimants' tenure status, family type and age. The average amount for all claimants was £4·80 a week.

Both figures are at November 1985 prices.

Health Authorities (Accommodation)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the names of the district health authorities who have given notice to any of their employees to quit accommodation owned by them, consequent on his circular on surplus accommodation, together with the number of units of accommodation in each case.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 12 March 1986, c. 527]: I can now confirm that none of the district health authorities concerned had given any member of staff notice to quit.

Family Credit

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate how much of the cash compensation for free school meals and free welfare milk included in the family credit payment under his proposal in Cmnd. 9691 is lost through reduced housing benefit entitlement for a married couple with one, two and three children and a lone parent with one, two and three children at gross earnings levels of (a) £60 a week, (b) £70, (c) £80, (d) £90 and (e) £100 and so on until entitlement to family credit is extinguished in each case.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 25 April 1986, c. 264]: Entitlement to housing benefit under the reformed social security structure will be affected by a number of factors, including receipt of any family credit. On the illustrative assumptions in the technical annex to the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691) something less than 25 per cent. of family credit recipients would also be in receipt of housing benefit. Of these, most would be receiving only rate rebate, a smaller number only rent rebate, leaving only about 3 per cent. of total family credit recipients receiving both rent and rate rebates. Around two-thirds of families receiving both family credit and housing benefit would still be better off overall as a result of the changes, many of them by more than £5 a week. The cash compensation included in the family credit rates in respect of school meals would be paid irrespective of the housing benefit position and would represent an integral part of the total family's credit payable. Although this makes it somewhat artificial to treat it in isolation in the manner requested, the table sets out the extent to which, on the illustrative figures, the housing benefit payable would be less than it would otherwise be if the family credit were reduced by £2·20 a week per child.

Extent to which illustrative Housing Benefit payable is lower than it would otherwise be if illustrative family credit rates were reduced by £2·20 per child.

Assumptions: 1. In the one-child families the child is aged 3; in the two-child families the children are aged 4 and 6; in the three-child families the children are aged 3, 8 and 11.

2. In one-child families rent is £15·40 and domestic rates £6·20 per week. In two and three-child families rent is £16·50 and domestic rates £6·30 per week.

3. As for the present scheme, a minimum payment of 50p for both rent rebate and rate rebate; ie no entitlement where amount would be less than 50p.

4. The November 1985 income tax rates and allowances and national insurance contributions apply.

Transcultural Psychiatry

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much money is currently being spent on research into the area of transcultural psychiatry; and on what projects this money is spent.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c 80]: In addition to the care which is taken to provide services to suit the needs of differing groups of patients, the Department is currently supporting one 3 year descriptive research study. This will cover those patients who have been referred to an inter-cultural therapy centre in north London which provides a specialised service to people from ethnic minority groups. The total cost is £39,800; £13,100 of which has been allocated in the current financial year.

This work will describe the circumstances in which a group of people from ethnic minorities suffering from psychiatric disorder presents for treatment and the effectiveness of the interventions used. The aim is to help to improve the efficiency of mental illness services for people from ethnic minorities.

Health Authorities (Expenditure)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each health authority wholly or partly within Greater London the percentage change in expenditure since 1979 expressed in (a) cash terms, (b) deflated by the gross domestic product deflator and (c) deflated by the National Health Service deflator; and if he will give in each case the proportion of the change attributable to (i) national resources allocation working parties and (ii) subregional resource allocation policies.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 16 June 1986, c. 454-56]: I regret that there was an error in the table given in my reply to the hon. Member. The revenue expenditure outturn of the Hammersmith and Queen Charlotte's hospital for women special health authority in 1984-85 was £40,860,000 and not £22,878,000.

Health Authorities (Beds)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each health authority wholly or partly within Greater London and for each year since 1979 the number of beds for (a) acute patients, (b) the elderly, (c) the mentally ill and (d) psychiatric cases.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 16 June 1986, c. 457]: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks in precisely the form requested. The available information is given in the tables.

Pregnant Women (Vitamin Supplementation)

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations he has received about the value of vitamin supplementation for prospective and pregnant mothers who are at risk of having handicapped children who suffer from spina bifida or other neural tube defects.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 21 July 1986, c. 98]: We have sought the advice of the Advisory Committee on National Health Service Drugs on representations made to us on the availability of a proprietary multivitamin drug under the selected list scheme. These representations also raise the general issue of the value of vitamin supplementation in the prevention of neural tube defects. No drug has a product licence for this use, but a major study of vitamin supplementation is in progress. In the meantime, we are assured by the advisory committee that all the vitamins which might play a role in prevention of neural tube defects are available under the selected list scheme.

Factor VIII

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he is satisfied with the standard of factor VIII supplied by the manufacturers of Factorate, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 21 July 1986, c. 107]: Yes. Since January 1986 all factor VIII which is commercially available in the United Kingdom has been produced from plasma from donors who have been screened for antibodies to the AIDS virus. Factorate has been manufactured from donor tested material since the end of 1985. This is in addition to the heat treatment process to which these products are subjected. Samples of all manufactured batches commercially available in the United Kingdom are tested by the National Institute of Biological Standards and Control before they can be marketed.

Safety of Medicines

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer, Official Report, 14, July, if he will list the five drugs which have had the largest cumulative number of adverse reaction reports over the last six months; and if he will indicate which of these have resulted in deaths possibly associated with the drug.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 23 July 1986]: The five drugs are Fenbufen, Diphtheria/Pertussis/Tetanus Vaccine, Nifedipine, Enalapril Maleate and Piroxicam. In this period, deaths have been reported in association with Fenbufen, Enalapril Maleate and Piroxicam. This information is based on the reports of adverse reactions received by the CSM between 1 January and 30 June 1986; the reports relate to events occurring over a considerably longer period. The heading of Diphtheria/Pertussis/Tetanus vaccine refers to reports associated with all such vaccinations, whether administered singly or in combination. I am advised that it is very important to note that a report does not necessarily indicate a causal relationship between a medicinal product and the reported reaction, and that considerable caution should be exercised in interpreting the volume of such reports in the absence of data on prescription volumes and other relevant factors, and over an arbitrary period when special factors may affect the rate of reporting.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer, Official Report, 14, July, column 422, of the eight drugs whose licences or certificates were withdrawn, how many had (a) been on the market for over five years and (b) had at some time over 1 million prescriptions issued for them in one year; and for the drugs falling into either of these two categories, how many months the committee spent in evaluating safety before the decision was taken to revoke the licence or certificate.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 23 July 1986]: Of the eight drugs discussed by the Committee of Safety of Medicines in the calendar years 1981 to 1985, whose product licences on clinical trails certificates were revoked on the advice of the committee, four had been on the market for longer than five years, and none had in excess of 1 million prescriptions recorded in any one calendar year. Continuous evaluation of the safety profile of all drugs begins as soon as the licence or certificate is granted.

Prevention of Disability

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much the Government have spent in each of the last five years on the prevention of disability in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) developing countries; and in each case what are the projects being supported.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 24 July 1986]: The Government fully recognise the importance of preventing disability wherever possible, and this concern is reflected in a wide range of programmes in the United Kingdom, such as vaccination and immunisation, screening for potentially disabling conditions, health education, accident prevention, genetic counselling services and medical research. It is not, however, possible to distinguish within those programmes the elements specifically directed to the prevention of disability or their cost.

So far as the developing countries are concerned, I understand that the health aid programme of the Overseas Development Administration is directed towards improving the availability of basic health services in developing countries and therefore helps in the prevention of disability. Since, however, there are no sectoral allocations within the overseas aid programme it is similarly not possible to identify a specific cost for the disability prevention element.

ENERGY

Namibia (Uranium)

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Energy what action he intends to take against imports of uranium mineral in Namibia.

Mr. Goodlad: I refer to the answers given to the then Member for Sheffield, Heeley (Mr. Hooley) on 15 March 1983, at col 126, and to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett) on 28 January 1985, at col 43.

Mining subsidence (Compensation)

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he proposes to publish his response to the Waddilove committee recommendations on compensation for coalmining subsidence.

Mr. David Hunt: The Government's response to the Waddilove report will be published as soon as possible.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish figures to show, for the 12 months of 1984, the top 20 oil producers in the world in terms of (a) per thousand barrels per day and (b) per million tonnes per annum.

Coal Industry

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will specify the terms of the new redundancy payments scheme for coalminers operative from March 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Redundancy terms for coalminers following the end of British Coal's current financial year are a matter for British Coal. The chairman announced on 7 October that a scheme will be introduced offering lump sum payments based on £700 for every complete year of aggregate service from age 30, £450 for such service between ages 21 to 29 and £250 between ages 16 to 20, plus concessionary coal or cash in lieu for those between the ages of 50 and 59 on redundancy. He confirmed that future redundancies would continue to be on a voluntary basis. The terms compare very favourably with other industries.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many coalmines have closed down since May 1979; and how many miners have left the industry in that time, specifying numbers of surface and underground workers.

Mr. David Hunt: Since the end of May 1979 there have been 79 pit closures. This figure excludes mergers. During the same period, (up to 4 October 1986), 81,550 underground workers and 25,247 surface workers left the industry.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy what are the latest prospects of the National Coal Board reaching a financial break-even point by 1988-89; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: British Coal has every expectation of achieving break-even by 1988-89.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many coalminers have left the coal industry since March 1985; on what basis; and how much has been paid out in redundancy pay, both in cash grants and enhanced pension payments.

Mr. Peter Walker: Between the end of March 1985 and 3 October 1986 approximately 49,000 mineworkers left the industry on voluntary redundancy under the redundant mineworkers payments scheme. Payments under the scheme in respect of this group have so far totalled some £600 million. The cost of premature and enhanced pensions to those leaving under RMPS is reimbursed by the Government, under section 4 of the Coal Industry Act 1977, by stage funding over 10 years. The first staged funding payment, in relation to those who left in 1985-86, amounted to approximately £51 million. I am pleased to say that production is currently running at the same level as in 1983-84, before the strike.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Expenditure

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if, further to his reply dated 13 May, Official Report, columns 433-34, he will publish in the Official Report information available to him on the same basis on the standard salary paid to the average teacher in secondary schools in each of the countries concerned, and the amount paid in terms of local currency.

Mrs. Rumbold: The available estimates shown in the following table are based on OECD and UNESCO data and are for average annual emoluments. Teacher emoluments cover teacher salaries and employers overheads such as national insurance contributions and contributions to superannuation schemes. Per capita real gross domestic product figures have been used to produce an index which illustrates how teachers salaries compare when they are related to average income levels in their respective countries.

Higher Education

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out in tabular form public expenditure in support of civil science via (a) the University Grants Committee and (b) the research councils in each year from 1970 to the latest available date; and if he will express these figures as a proportion of total public spending on higher education in each case.

Mr. Walden: Public expenditure in support of civil science via the University Grants Committee cannot be separately identified, since UGC recurrent grant is only one element in universities' general income. The following table shows estimated expenditure by universities in support of R and D from general income in each year since 1977-78, the earliest for which the information is readily available, together with public expenditure on the civil science budget via the research councils in each year since 1970-71; and the proportions which these sums represent of total public spending on higher education, which is not readily available for years prior to 1974-75.

[1] From the "Annual Review of Government Funded R & D" (HMSO). Since universities' research activities cannot be clearly distinguished, and thus the UGC's objectives in funding the expenditure cannot be clearly distinguished from its wider objectives in funding the university system, the assignment of resources to research for the purpose of the review is based on a notional attribution of universities' departmental and central expenditure between research and teaching.

[2] Includes recurrent and capital expenditure on universities, local authority and other institutions of advanced further education and mandatory anddiscretionary student awards in the United Kingdom. Does not include expenditure on the research councils. Estimated for 1974-75 to 1977-78.

[3] Estimates for 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will describe the various performance indicators used by his Department to measure the efficiency of higher education and the value for money obtained in return for the allocation of public funds.

Mr. Walden: Between 1979-80 and 1985-86 the number of home full-time and part-time students in higher education in Great Britain increased by about 140,000, with no increase in public expenditure in real terms. Over the same period the annual output of graduates each year increased by about 22,000. That represents a real increase in efficiency and value for money.

Information on the development of a wide range of performance indicators for higher education is given in annex B to "The Development of Higher Education into the 1990s" (Cmnd. 9524) published last year. Further work is being carried out jointly by the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals and the University Grants Committee and I am sending my hon. Friend a copy of a report produced recently by a working group under the chairmanship of Professor Sir Mark Richmond.

School Leaving Age

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will estimate the cost of raising the school leaving age to 17 years; what would be the increase in numbers attending schools; and what savings could be made in (a) unemployment pay, (b) other social security benefits, (c) public disbursements on work and other programmes and (d) other.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government have no plans to raise the school leaving age to 17 years. However, the effect in 1987-88 of such a policy would be to add around 485,000 pupils to maintained school rolls. of these, some 130,000 would in other circumstances have been expected to participate in full-time further education, including YTS courses. A further 15,000 pupils might remain in non-maintained schools or transfer to the maintained sector. The net cost of introducing such a policy would depend on a complex range of factors, extending beyond those identified in the question. Its estimation would involve disproportionate cost.

Teachers' Salaries

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the average teacher's salary, full-time equivalent, in schools, non-advanced further education, advanced further education and universities in cash terms, real terms and indexed against the rise in average earnings for each year since 1975.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information is set out in the table.

2. Average salaries for all university lecturers are not available and the salaries given in columns (vii) and (viii) are the median of the salary scales for lecturers and senior lecturers.
3. Constant prices [cols. (ii), (v) and (viii)] are the cash prices of the preceding columns adjusted by the RPI.
4. All cash figures are rounded to the nearest £10.

* Estimate.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' pay dispute in England and Wales; and what current plans he has to improve their pay and conditions of service.

Mrs. Rumbold: Following the signing of "Heads of Agreement" on 29 July, talks continue between the employers and unions. The Government have long made clear their willingness to allow extra spending on teachers' pay in return for a satisfactory pay structure and a clarification of the teachers' contract which would secure the provision of uninterrupted education.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. Bendall asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what additional cash he has made available to Redbridge council for its schools and further education establishments to ensure the smooth introduction of the new General Certificate of Secondary Education; what information he has as to additional cash made available by Redbridge council for this purpose; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government have directed substantial resources to ensure the smooth introduction of the GCSE, in addition to local education authorities' own plans. In support of expenditure for books and equipment in schools in Redbridge we have made available £57,900 through education support grants this year. A further £41,100 will be supported through ESG in 1987-88. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment, in conjunction with the Manpower Services Commission, has made a grant of £19,600 available to Redbridge for the provision of scientific and technological equipment in schools.

For the introductory GCSE in-service training programme, expenditure up to £32,500 has been supported in Redbridge. Under the new arrangements for in-service training in 1987-88, expenditure of £68,000 has been set aside to support the continuing training of teachers of the GCSE in schools and further education in Redbridge. The Department has no information as to the resources which Redbridge is making available for the GCSE.

School Meals

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will bring up to date the information on the gross and net cost of providing school meals given in his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby of 15 March 1982, Official Report, columns 39-40; and if he will give comparable figures for the provision of school transport.

Mr. Dunn: The available information is as follows:

Students (Financial Support)

Mr. Radice asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will list for every year since 1978-79 the number of students who were in receipt of mandatory awards and who were also in receipt of sponsorships, industrial or national engineering scholarships;

(2) if he will list for every year since 1978-79 the number of students who were in receipt of sponsorships, industrial scholarships or national engineering scholarships and who were thereby classified as assisted students within the meaning of the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations;

(3) if he will list for very year since 1978-79 the number of students on designated courses within the meaning of the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations who are or were in receipt of sponsorships, industrial scholarships or national engineering scholarships.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Information about the number of students in receipt of sponsorships or industrial scholarships is not available. The number of national engineering scholarships made in each year since 1978-79 is as follows:

	Number
1978-79	62
1979-80	159
1980-81	263
1981-82	298
1982-83	100
1983-84	103
1985-86	155

All holders of national engineering scholarships follow designated courses. My Department does not collect information about the number of scholarship holders who are also in receipt of an award or who are assisted students.

Elderly People

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the letter dated 23 July from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Walden) to the hon. Member for Monklands, West regarding special courses for doctors specialising in the care and treatment of elderly people.

Mr. Walden: The text of my letter is as follows:

"I promised to write in reply to your Parliamentary Question of 10 July about special courses for doctors specialising in the care and treatment of elderly people.

Generally speaking, training for doctors wishing to specialise in this area is not provided in the form of self-contained courses at university medical schools. More usually in the medical schools the study of aspects of geriatric medicine forms part of a doctor's overall training (and re-training) programmes. Little specialist training is given formally at the undergraduate level, where the emphasis is more on imparting a basic knowledge of clinical skills.

As far as general practitioner training is concerned, I understand that doctors may select a post in geriatric medicine or geriatric medicine combined with general medicine, and such a training post is recognised for prescribed experience under the Vocational Training Regulations of 1979. Such training posts are provided in all regions. Trainee general practitioners will also receive instruction in the care of the elderly at day release courses during the trainee year; also from their general practitioner trainers in the surgery and on home visits. Short, ad hoc courses may well form part of this wider programme, but details of their incidence or of numbers attending would be very difficult to obtain.

At the postgraduate level, higher professional training is primarily the concern of the Royal Colleges and Faculties and the Joint Higher Training Committees, but there are also facilities for pursuing higher academic (university) qualifications. For the training programme in Geriatric Medicine, the Joint Committee on Higher Medical Training recommends 3 years of general professional training and a further 4 years of higher specialist training which must include responsibility for the care of patients in acute, rehabilitation and continuing care units, day hospital and out-patient clinic, and experience of assessment of patients at home. Specific training in the administrative aspects of geriatric medicine is also required and psychogeriatric experience is especially desirable. The 4 year period of higher specialist training may be aimed at one of two possible career posts: general physician with special responsibility for the elderly or physician in geriatric medicine. Again information is not readily available on particular courses forming part of this process at university medical schools.

It should be noted that while this describes formal training in care and treatment of the elderly in the narrowest sense, many hospital doctors (cardiologists, neurologists, rheumatologists, endocrinologists and other specialists) as well as general practitioners provide services for the elderly."

Voluntary Aided Schools

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will state the amount of capital grant to voluntary aided schools for (a) Hampshire and (b) the United Kingdom during each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend is responsible only for the payment of grant to voluntary aided and special agreement schools in England. Information on payments is available in the form requested only from 1980-81, and is as follows:

Capital Grant to Voluntary Aided and Special Agreement Schools

Year	England £ million	Hampshire £ million
1980-81	28·5	0·369
1981-82	28·7	0·625
1982-83	22·2	0·455
1983-84	19·0	0·205
1984-85	24·7	0·051
1985-86	31·0	0·138

Corporal Punishment

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what he estimates to be the cost of abolition of corporal punishment; for what purposes money will be required; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: For some schools changes in their disciplinary policies may give rise to certain costs, but these cannot be estimated. Many schools have already ceased to use corporal punishment and many others only use it rarely.

Further Education Unit

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what changes he proposes in the nature and work of the Further Education Unit; and what consultations he has had concerning the unit with local education authorities.

Mr. Walden: On 4 September my Department issued, to the local authority associations and to other interested parties, a consultative document on the future of the Further Education Unit. This rehearsed a number of options for the unit's future, in the changed circumstances resulting from the increasing involvement of other bodies, directly and indirectly, in further education curriculum development. Particular attention was drawn to the option of a merger with the Further Education Staff College.

Officials of my Department had some contact with officers of the local authority associations in the process of drafting the consultation document. That, however, in no way pre-empts the consultative process, the outcome of which remains open. My right hon. Friend will take a decision on the unit's future as soon as possible after the end of the consultative process on 30 November.

School Closures

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will state the definition of school place he has adopted in relation to his proposals for school closures; and how many square feet are included in this definition for primary and secondary school pupils, respectively.

Mr. Dunn: The Government's current targets for the removal of surplus primary and secondary school places are set out in the January 1986 public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702). Surplus school places are measured by comparing the capacity of school building stock, enhanced by expected basic need additions, with projected pupil numbers in each of the primary and secondary sectors.

Sex Education

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many representations he has received (a) in favour and (b) against parents being given the right to opt their children out of any sex education to which they object; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received some 350 representations in support of enabling parents to withdraw their children from sex education lessons to which they object, and six letters opposing this. In response to this concern, the Government have tabled amendments to the Education Bill which would give control over the content and organisation of sex education to the new-style governing bodies provided for under the Bill, which would have the discretion to permit the withdrawal of pupils from sex education lessons at parental request.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many representations he has received concerning the provision of sex education in school under clause 26 of the Education Bill; if he will break them down into those for and those against; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received about 100 representations expressing support for clause 26 of the Education Bill and for the Government's commitment to appropriate responsible sex education, set within a sound moral context and supportive of family life. Only five letters have been received specifically opposing clause 26.

Religious Education

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many children are already receiving religious education; how these figures compare with each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I regret that the information requested is not available. My right hon. Friend looks to all county and voluntary schools, and the local education authorities by which they are maintained, to meet the requirements of the 1944 Act. When he receives complaints that the statutory requirement to give religious instruction is not being met in a particular school, he undertakes a full and careful investigation; but very few such complaints are received each year.

School Transport

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will introduce legislation to require local authorities to provide transport for children attending a school outside the official catchment area in which their parents reside; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: It would be a retrograde step to provide for the reintroduction of strict catchment areas, which were abolished under the Education Act 1980. In any event, I see no case for increasing local education authorities' school transport obligations in the way proposed.

City Technical Colleges

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what minimum qualifications he will require of teachers of technical subjects in his proposed city technical colleges.

Mrs. Rumbold: Staff at city technology colleges will be employed by their governing bodies. My right hon. Friend will generally require governing bodies to employ as teachers those who have "qualified teacher" status. Governing bodies will also be expected to match the qualifications and experience of teachers to the subjects taught.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how he proposes to give statutory effect to his specific proposals for new direct grant city technical colleges; and under what class of estimate he intends to provide for the relevant public expenditure.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend proposes to pay grant in respect of city technology colleges by the exercise of his powers under section 100 of the Education Act 1944. The expenditure will be met from Supply Estimates in class XII.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what status he proposes for the trustees or governing bodies of the planned city technical colleges; who will appoint the persons concerned; and on what criteria he expects them to recruit pupils.

Mrs. Rumbold: City technology colleges will be owned (or leased) by their promoters. I envisage that they will establish trusts for the purpose of operating CTCs, and appoint the trustees. The promoters will have the controlling interest in CTC governing bodies but details concerning the appointment of governors will be for discussion with my right hon. Friend. CTCs will be required to aim at admitting pupils spanning the full range of ability represented in the catchment area. Pupils will be selected by the head and governing body on the basis of their general aptitude, for example as reflected in their progress and achievement at primary school; on their readiness to take advantage of the type of education offered in CTCs; and on their parents' commitment to full-time education or training up to the age of 18, to the distinctive characteristics of the CTC curriculum, and to the ethos of the CTC.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how the governors or trustees of the proposed city technical colleges will be provided with resources to purchase, rent or build, and equip suitable premises and in what age groups he expects them to recruit when first opened.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has made it clear that he expects the promoters of city technology colleges to provide all or a substantial part of the resources needed to purchase, rent, or build, and equip suitable premises. Some assistance may, however, be available to meet repayments on loans raised for this purpose. City technology colleges will normally cater for 11 to 18-year-olds. We hope that they will admit pupils from as broad an age-range as possible when they first open.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consultations he has had with industrial or other private interests concerning the funding of his proposed city technical colleges; and what minimum proportion of their capital cost and revenue expenditure respectively he expects them to provide.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has had a number of preliminary discussions with prospective promoters. They will be expected to meet all or a substantial part of the capital costs of city technology colleges. The Secretary of State will pay the CTC's running costs in accordance with the number of pupils, at a level of assistance per pupil comparable with what is provided by LEAs for maintained schools serving similar catchment areas.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consultations he has had with current providers of secondary technical education in the cities or areas where he plans to establish his city technical colleges.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has had no formal consultations with current providers of secondary technical education in the localities designated as possible locations for city technology colleges. He has, however, written personally to the chairmen of the education committees of the local authority associations. Details of the proposals have been made available widely to the education service, including to all chief education officers. My right hon. Friend and I would be glad to discuss our proposals with local education authorities and, indeed, anyone who shares our concerns about education in the cities.

Schools (Amalgamation)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will state the statistical or mathematical basis for his estimates of the potential savings to be made by amalgamation of schools possessing a notional surplus of school places.

Mr. Dunn: It is estimated that some £170 a year can be saved for every secondary place taken out of use in permanent accommodation and £100 for every primary place. These figures are arrived at by dividing LEAs' annual buildings-related non-teaching costs by the numbers of places for which the school building stock currently provides.

Illiteracy

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the number of illiterate people in the United Kingdom; and what steps he is taking to eliminate illiteracy.

Mr. Walden [pursuant to his reply, 30 June 1986, c. 380]: There is an omission from the text of the first paragraph of my earlier reply. The full text of the reply should read as follows:

"The National Child Development Study survey of 1981 found that 10 per cent. of the 23-year-olds asked said they had had reading problems since leaving school and that 3 per cent. said these problems had made things difficult for them in every day life.

The Government's policy for raising standards of literacy in schools is set out in the White Paper 'Better Schools', published last year. The Department of Education and Science and the Welsh Office jointly fund the adult literacy and basic skills unit to develop educational provision to overcome illiteracy amongst adults. Grant has been raised from £360,000 in 1979-80 to £2,170,000 in 1986-87; a sixfold increase.

Policies to combat literacy problems in Scotland and for Northern Ireland are the responsibility of my Right Hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Northern Ireland."

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

"British Overseas Aid"

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the cost of the annual review, "British Overseas Aid", in 1985; and if he will consider production of a less expensive publication.

Mr. Chris Patten: It cost £33,400 to produce the 1985 review. Despite rising costs generally and an increase in the number of pages, we kept production costs this year below the 1983 level.

Whilst keeping such costs carefully under control, we shall continue to provide through the annual review a comprehensive account of how our aid programme is spent. Publication of the review thus responds to a recommendation from the Foreign Affairs Select Committee in 1982 that the ODA should publish an annual report for wide circulation.

FAO Tropical Forest Action Plan

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the statement in the Official Report, column 18, 19 May, what action he has taken as a result of accepting the FAO tropical forest action plan; what response he has had from the president of the World Bank to his representations stressing Her Majesty's Government's belief in the importance of giving proper regard to the environmental factors in respect of other aid programmes; and what discussions he has had with fellow donors on means of donor co-ordination in protecting the rain forest.

Mr. Chris Patten: We have given practical effect to the tropical forestry action plan by joining the World Bank and other bilateral donors for forestry sector reviews in Ghana and Kenya. Similarly, we have supported initiatives of the European Community and the International Union of Forest Research Organisations to establish priority areas for research projects and networks.

The president of the World Bank has indicated that he shares fully the views of the Government on the relation between environmental and development issues. This was reflected in his speech to the annual meeting of the World Bank in September.

Overseas Aid

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications for the United Kingdom's overseas development and aid policy of decisions taken at the recent Washington conference of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

Mr. Chris Patten: British aid policy is fully consistent with the conclusions reached at the recent IMF/IBRD annual meeting.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will have available the results of the recent fishery survey at St. Helena; and if he will place a copy (a) in the Library and (b) in the library on St. Helena.

Mr. Chris Patten: The full results are not expected until 1988. They may include commercially valuable information, and we shall have to consider with the St. Helena Government the extent to which it can be made publicly available.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide technical books on fisheries related topics for the library on St. Helena.

Mr. Chris Patten: I shall be willing to consider any St. Helena Government request for such books under the ODA's books presentation scheme.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide a dinghy for assisting the ferry service between St. Helena and Ascension Island; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: No.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if there is any hall or public building on St. Helena that can be used for public meetings attended by more than 400 people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Paramount cinema in Jamestown is capable of seating over 400 people, but requires considerable structural and other renovation. The new Prince Andrew school, which is currently under construction and should be completed by late 1988, will include a new school and community hall capable of accommodating over 500 people.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government have any plans to acquire the Commodore cinema in St. Helena; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: There is no Commodore cinema in St. Helena. The only cinema in St. Helena is the Paramount cinema in Jamestown, which was offered for sale to the St. Helena Government earlier this year. I understand that they decided not to purchase it because of the high selling price and cost of necessary renovation.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for the replacement of the RMS St. Helena; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Government announced on 21 May, at column 414, their intention to build a new ship for the St. Helena service in a United Kingdom shipyard. The precise details of the type of ship, and of when the present vessel will be replaced, are now being worked out.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the reasons for cutting from five to four days the make-work scheme for workers who returned to St. Helena after working on Ascension Island.

Mr. Chris Patten: The five-day guaranteed employment scheme was introduced by the St. Helena Government in September 1985 as a temporary measure. It took the place of an earlier three-day guaranteed employment scheme. After careful consideration, the St. Helena Government decided earlier this year to provide for a four-day scheme.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in setting up a loans facility on St. Helena; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: We are considering the possibility of establishing a central loans board with the St. Helena authorities, and we expect to receive a formal aid request shortly.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what measures he has taken to safeguard commidendrum spurium on St. Helena;

(2) what measures he has taken to safeguard nesiota elliptica growing on St. Helena.

Mr. Chris Patten: The St. Helena Government, with assistance from the Overseas Development Administration, the botanical gardens at Kew, the World Wildlife Fund and Cambridge university, have taken both legal and practical measures to protect St. Helena's endemic flora. Specimens of these species are being propagated and last year a five-year development aid project began which covers conservation of the nesiota elliptica and commidendrum spurium.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the present price of a kilowatt hour of electricity for domestic consumers on St. Helena.

Mr. Chris Patten: The domestic electricity tariff on St Helena is 10p per unit for the the first 35 units and 12p per unit thereafter.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any progress has been made in the provision of an air strip on St. Helena; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: Various proposals have been examined, but they would not be cost-effective. We are now concentrating on maintaining suitable sea links to and from the island.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will request the Canadian Government to consider granting aid to St. Helena for the provision of an airstrip on the island; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: No.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Comonwealth Affairs what is the gross pay of St. Helenians employed on make-work schemes; how many hours are worked on average; and how this compares with 1982.

Mr. Chris Patten: Gross pay for a four-day week of 30 hours under the guaranteed minimum work scheme is £26·10. In addition, married men are entitled to benefits which bring their total entitlements to £32·60. In 1982, the guaranteed minimum work scheme was limited to three days and applied mainly to single men. Their basic gross wage was £14·76 for a 22½ hour week.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consideration he has given to the sea defences on St. Helena; whether he has any plans to improve the landing facilities and warehousing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: At the request of the St. Helena Government, the European Development Fund is considering allocating funds for improvements to St. Helena's sea wall defences and landing facilities. In co-operation with the EDF, we have financed a feasibility study by a British firm (G. Maunsell and Partners). We received its report last month. It is now under consideration by the St. Helena Government and the EDF. So far, the St. Helena Government have not requested any improvement of warehousing facilities.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for increasing the rate of building dwellings in St. Helena.

Mr. Chris Patten: We shall consider our future policy and possible further assistance in the light of a housing policy paper currently being prepared by the St. Helena Government.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many dwellings were completed on St. Helena for each of the last seven years for which figures are available.

Mr. Chris Patten: The figures are not readily available. I shall write to the hon. Member.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for the production of fresh milk on St. Helena.

Mr. Chris Patten: None.

TRANSPORT

British Airways (Sale)

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will announce details of the offer for sale of British Airways; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: As I announced on 11 September the Government have decided to sell their shareholding in British Airways in the early weeks of 1987. The offer will be payable in two instalments. I am delighted that it will now prove possible to free the company from the constraints of Government control and to enable the employees, customers and members of the public to take a real stake in its future.

The flotation will provide a further major opportunity to strengthen the basis of individual share ownership in this country. I therefore intend to build on the success of previous privatisations by publicising details of the offer for sale and of how to apply for shares widely in the press and on television. A share opportunity office has been established to register inquiries and despatch information about the company and the offer for sale. British Airways' senior management will be touring the country extensively to promote the issue, and to assist in this process I have selected regional co-ordinators for the whole of the United Kingdom. To foster the commitment of the new generation of share-holders, a small portion of the equity will be retained to enable a loyalty bonus to be paid to those initial purchasers who retain their holdings continuously for three years. One free share will be offered for ten, up to a maximum value of £5,000 of shares initially purchased.

I recognise and want to pay tribute to the management and staff of British Airways whose efforts have made it possible to look forward to a successful flotation. It is right that they should have a special opportunity to take a stake in the company's future. I have accordingly decided that they should have the opportunity to acquire free, matching and discounted shares on broadly the same terms as British Gas employees.

Finally, British Airways is an international business and it will benefit both its commercial interests, and the Government's as vendor in maximising demand if a limited portion of the equity is allocated to overseas markets. The Government already have an adviser on the United States market. I have decided in addition to appoint advisers on the European, Japanese and Canadian markets. Final decisions on which, if any, of these markets to use and the size of any overseas allocation will not be taken until close to the start of the offer period. I would not, however, envisage that the allocation to overseas markets will exceed 20 per cent.

I am placing details of my announcement on 11 September, the regional co-ordinators selected, the terms of the preferential share offer to employees, and the advisers to overseas markets in the Library.

British Rail (Performance Objectives)

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he intends to give British Rail new performance objectives when the present grant target expires at the end of 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I have written today to the Chairman of British Rail, Sir Robert Reid, setting out the objectives I want the Board to pursue over the next three years. The text of my letter is as follows:

"My predecessor wrote to you in October 1983, setting out objectives on your appointment as Chairman of the British Railways Board. The Government welcomes the substantial progress that has been made in meeting those objectives. We have been glad to support BR by approving important investments to renew and enhance the rail system. Over the last three years we have approved 18 major schemes worth a total of £930 million in today's prices. This expenditure amounts to a significant programme of modernisation. The major programmes under way increase the opportunities of the railway and—even more important—of the regions it serves. The electrification of the East Coast Mainline to the North East and to Edinburgh is a striking example. The building of the Channel Tunnel will be another great opportunity.

You and your Board need to offer your customers an efficient railway providing good value for money. The Government will continue to support your efforts by approving worthwhile investment and by grant for socially necessary services; we are not asking for a programme of major route closures. This letter sets out the specific objectives the Government wishes you to pursue over the next three years (1987/8-1989/90). It supplements the statutory and financial duties of the Board.

Network South East

I particularly welcome the new efforts to ensure that the London commuter services are reliable, attractive and punctual. I attach particular importance to close co-operation between British Rail and London Regional Transport in the provision and marketing of rail services for the capital. You are already examining with LRT how far it will be sensible to establish common measures of the quality of these services.

I shall want to agree with you any revision you make in the standards set out in your last Corporate Plan. I value your assurance that you would consult me if unforseen circumstances should at any time make it necessary to consider measures that would materially undermine quality. I would like you to report annually on your progress.

I want you to keep the pattern of London commuter services under review in order to develop proposals both to improve the service to the customer and to reduce your operating costs through improved efficiency. It is the Board's responsibility to determine fares—but I want to see a lower proportion of the costs met by the taxpayer; and you should increasingly seek to reflect in your fares structure the costs of provision, and improvements in quality of service. In the light of these considerations, I want you to make a significant reduction in the grant requirement for Network South East by 1989/90.

Provincial Services

I shall want to agree with you suitable standards for the quality of services in this sector. Major investments in the rolling stock such as we have approved, and new measures to reduce the cost of lesser used lines, together offer a much improved future for many of the provincial services. I want you to continue to tailor the pattern of services more closely to demand. While these changes should enable you to make modest, but worthwhile, reductions in the Sector's need for support, grant will still be very substantial. It should not of course be used to compete unfairly with newly liberalised local bus services and I understand that you would not envisage setting rail fares generally below the equivalent bus fares.

The new powers which Parliament has provided for you to subsidise guaranteed substitute bus services connecting into the rail network give the opportunity to review those cases where attractive bus services could meet the needs of travellers as conveniently and often at markedly less cost than the present rail services. You will wish to conduct such reviews before proposing re-investment in rolling stock for lines of this character.

The Grant Target

I want you to aim by 1989-90 to reduce to £555 million (in 1986-87 prices) the PSO grant requirement from Central Government for the Provincial Sector and Network South East combined calculated on the present basis.

Non-supported Services

It has long been the policy of successive governments that long distance rail services should operate in fair competition with coach and air services. It is already an established aim that after next year the Inter City services should operate without a grant. I will re-define the Public Service Obligation accordingly later this year, and make provision for a final payment of grant in 1987-8.

This enables us to make a major change in the regime governing the railway, by setting a comprehensive medium term financial target for the major part of your operations. This will cover the Inter City passenger services, Freight, Freightliners and Parcels, together with Travellers Fare.

These sectors will be expected to continue to plan on the basis of a required rate of return of 5 per cent. on their programme of new investment. Your overall target is to improve their performance so as to earn a return of 2·7 per cent. as a current cost operating profit on net assets before interest by 1989-90 on all these businesses taken together. I want you to set demanding targets for each of the businesses and to report each year on their achievement.

Contribution of the Private Sector

I share the Board's desire to see rail businesses that can flourish and prosper far into the future. Their success will be greater if they can harness the widest possible range of resources available in the economy. This points to the need for vigorous measures to broaden the participation of the private sector in the provision of services to the railway to enable you to offer a more cost-effective and competitive service to your customers. We welcome the progress you have made in competitive procurement of railway equipment and rolling stock and in associating the supply industry with your research programme. Further steps to secure that others from outside the nationalised industry can play their part in the upkeep of the railway and its equipment, the supply of its needs, the development of its property, and the exploitation of the commercial potential of stations will all be welcome as ways of improving Railway finances. I would like the Board to establish specific programmes to this end and to report progress each year.

Public Accountability

These clear objectives give you the opportunity to report more fully and clearly on both your financial performance and your progress in achieving your published quality of service standards. I would like you to set this out in your Report and Accounts each year. This should include:

(a) the quality of service achieved against the agreed standards;

(b) progress towards the grant target, including your own breakdown of the target between NSE and Provincial and the performance of each sector against those targets;

(c) the current cost operating profit before interest of each of the non-supported businesses; and of the non-supported businesses as a group compared with the 2·7 per cent. target;

(d) progress on your various initiatives to increase the contribution of the private sector."

Meteorological Services

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has held with the chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority about the report of the Committee of Public Accounts on financial arrangements for the provision of meteorological services.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority has written to me expressing his concern about the conclusions as they affect civil aviation.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about the arrangements for financing meteorological services in other countries and about the extent to which users of such services are required to make a contribution towards the running costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have been asked to reply.

The arrangements for financing meteorological services in other countries vary very widely. The provision of such services to aviation is virtually the only field in which practices for recovering costs have some international similarity, notably in Europe, where the member states raise air navigation charges (including an element for meteorological information) against EUROCONTROL for flights through controlled airspace. The EUROCONTROL organisation then recovers the charges from the aircraft operators concerned. In the USA, however, the recovery system for meteorological services is quite different, the services being paid for out of a government trust fund financed by taxes on airline tickets, aviation fuel and aircraft tyres.

Rail Investments (London)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria of social cost benefit he currently applies to proposals for further conventional tube or rapid transit rail investments in Greater London.

Mr. David Mitchell: New Underground or rapid transit rail investments in London are normally expected to show a real financial rate of return of at least 7 per cent. But we recognise that some proposed investments which do not satisfy this criterion may have significant non-financial costs or benefits, for example, to road users. Where such costs and benefits need to be taken into account, the investment would normally have to show at least a 7 per cent. return on a cost-benefit basis.

British Rail (Fares)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will state those directions or requirements he has made of British Railways Board since 1979 and 1983, respectively, which they need to take into account when making fare increases.

Mr. David Mitchell: All formal directions are set out in the board's annual report and accounts, copies of which are in the Library. External financing limits are published in the annual Public Expenditure White Paper.

Interim financial targets were set for inter-city and freight operations in March 1980 and published in that year's annual report. On 24 October 1983 the Chairman was set comprehensive objectives, printed in the Official Report at column 47. On 24 July 1984, at column 555, the Chairmen of BR and LRT were set joint objectives designed to promote closer co-operation in improving transport services for London. On 30 July 1984 at column 75 a specific commercial target was set for the inter-city sector. I am publishing today the latest objectives, which supercede previous ones.

Within the general constraints set by Government, it is for the board to determine the level of fares.

British Rail (London Links)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration he has given to the proposals of the British Railways Board to link major terminals by short main-line size tube tunnels directly serving the west end of London.

Mr. David Mitchell: The British Railways Board has not submitted such proposals to my right hon. Friend.

Heathrow Airport (Noise)

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Transport on what occasions so far in 1986 aircraft taking off from Heathrow airport have infringed the night noise limits; and which airlines were involved in each case.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Heathrow Airport Ltd.'s records show that up to the end of August 1986, there were 59 infringements of the night noise limit this year, out of a total of 1,837 night departures made by aeroplanes leaving Heathrow during the night period from 2300 to 0700 hours.

The operators involved were as follows:—

	Number of night infringements	Number of night departures
Air Portugal—TAP	2	6
British Airways	32	399
Cyprus Airways	1	8
Gulf Air	1	2
Icelandair	4	11
Iran Air	1	2
Iraqi Airways	1	3
Kenya Airways	2	6
Lufthansa	2	149
Nigeria Airways	3	82
Pan American	1	2
Singapore Airlines	4	9
Varig-Brazilian	1	7
Zambia Airways	1	1
Private	3	299
Departures by other airlines with no infringements	—	851
TOTAL	59	1,837

Pedestrian Crossings

Mr. Mudd asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set uniform standards for the intensity and form of audible safe-to-cross signals designed to assist blind persons who use pedestrian crossings.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: All pelican crossing equipment have a facility for adjusting the audible signal level. This is set to suit site conditions. Because of the wide variations in site conditions, and ambient noise levels, I do not consider it appropriate to set a uniform standard. We are looking at ways of making the adjustment automatic.

Road Accident Statistics

Mr. Mudd asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of workers (a) killed and (b) seriously injured in each of the years 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985 in accidents occasioned by motorists disregarding stated maximum speed limits on motorways undergoing repair or maintenance.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I regret that the information requested is not available. Maintenance site workers are not identified and speed limit violations are not recorded in the reports of accidents sent to this department.

Merchant Shipping

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many cargoes were carried on behalf of Government Departments in the last 12 months, and how many were carried on (a) foreign-owned vessels and (b) British-owned vessels.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Cargoes are carried for Government Departments under a number of arrangements. It is estimated that, in the year to the end of September, about 30 per cent. by weight of the Government cargoes placed by the Government Freight Agent under his agreement with my Department were carried on foreign-registered vessels. Much of these cargoes were placed with British lines and consigned to foreign vessels under conference, pooling, charter or other arrangements.

Oil Spills (Monitoring)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will study schemes for remote monitoring systems for oil spills; and if he will make a statement on the representations from industry on the issue.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Department of Transport's marine pollution control unit has airborne remote sensing equipment for the control and direction of counter-pollution operations during a major oil spill incident at sea. This equipment, which includes sideways looking radar, infra-red and ultra-violet scans, is also being evaluated as a possible detector of ships illegally discharging oil at sea.

I am not aware of any representations from industry in respect of such systems but if the hon. Member will let me have particulars I shall be pleased to consider futher.

Chapelcross Nuclear Power Station

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland by what means radioactive products are transported to and from Chapelcross nuclear power station; what directives or authorisations have been issued by his Department on this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to the reply, 26 June 1986, c. 314]: I have been asked to reply.

Spent fuel flasks are transported by road between Chapelcross and British Nuclear Fuel's reprocessing plant at Sellafield. Low level radioactive waste is also moved by road to the disposal site at Drigg.

The containers in which radioactive materials are transported are certified by my Department as meeting the stringent standards of the International Atomic Energy Agency. These require safeguards to be incorporated into the design of the containers, so that even a severe accident would not give rise to any significant risk of leakage.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Authorities (Tenders)

Mr. Dover asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to prevent local authorities from inserting irrelevant provisions in tender invitations or contracts.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to the reply, 20 March 1986, c. 253]: Councils are increasingly imposing non-commercial conditions in contracts and we have concluded that the law now needs to be strengthened to stop this sort of abuse. We shall, therefore, bring forward legislation as soon as we can.

The legislation will also stop authorities imposing conditions which are designed to make it harder for contractors to compete with direct labour organisations. It would not stop reasonable actions, under legislation such as the Race Relations Act. A special provision will be made to allow the promotion of employment prospects of local labour in the inner cities.

EMPLOYMENT

School Leavers

Mr. Corbyn asked the Paymaster General how many school leavers in Islington, North for the end of the academic year 1985-86 (a) have jobs, (b) are on training schemes and (c) are in full-time further education; and what are the equivalent figures for 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Trippier: Available information from the Inner London education authority careers service relating to school leavers aged 16-19 for the academic years 1983-86 is set out in the table:

	1983	1984	1985	1986[1]
Number eligible to leave school	2,028	1,971	1,679	1,225
Number remaining in full-time education[2]	934	765	731	543
Number going into jobs	297	321	328	205
Number going into employment and training measures[3]	114	64	53	64

[1] The 1986 figures do not include the Highbury Fields School 6th form.

[2] Includes those remaining at school and those going into Further and Higher Education.

[3] 1983 figures include placings into the youth opportunities programme. Thereafter the majority of placings were into YTS with a small number into community industry.

Notes:

The information was collected at different dates in each year so it is not directly comparable.

Young people placed into YTS may enter either as trainees or employees.

Headstart Scheme

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on his new enterprise training scheme Headstart, detailing the number of people likely to benefit, and the job opportunities.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I announced the inner cities "Headstart" scheme on 28 July. The scheme will build on the work of the Industrial Society in training young people in enterprise and business skills training and providing on-going support for potential young entrepreneurs in six inner city areas. Courses are planned to start shortly and around 3,000 young people will be given initial advice and information on self-employment. It is too early to say how many will find employment as a result, but the record to date of Industrial Society enterprise training has been good.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Paymaster General how much money is being invested in the Headstart scheme; and how much is expected to be received from project sponsors.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My Department and the Manpower Services Commission are contributing £319,470 in total in 1986-87 to the headstart inner cities scheme. I understand the Industrial Society estimates the total cost at around £750,000 with the balance met by private sector project sponsors.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Paymaster General how many young people are likely to benefit from the Headstart scheme within the city of Leicester; and if he will detail the response received and the ultimate likely benefits.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The inner cities headstart scheme aims to help around 3,000 young people with initial information and advice on self-employment. I would expect around 500 of these to be from Leicester. The scheme has been welcomed locally. While it is too early to say what the ultimate likely benefits would be, I would expect them to reflect the Industrial Society's successful record in enterprise training.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

British Sugar Corporation

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state the earliest practical date when he expects to receive the report of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the British Sugar Corporation; and if he will make a statement prior to taking any decision.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend has asked the Monopolies and Mergers Commission to report on the proposed acquisitions of S & W Berisford by Tate and Lyle and Ferruzzi by 19 November. However, the Commission is free to report earlier if it so wishes; it may also request one extension of up to three months.

My right hon. Friend has discretion to take action following a merger report only if the Commission finds that the proposed merger might be expected to operate against the public interest. In this event my right hon. Friend would aim to minimise uncertainty in the market by announcing what action was to be taken at the same time as the report was published and laid before this House.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current situation regarding the renewal of the multi-fibre arrangement, the August meeting in Geneva and the actual quota levels envisaged.

Mr. Alan Clark: Negotiations to renew the multi-fibre arrangement were concluded on 1 August. The new protocol provides for an extension of the arrangement for five years. Talks on the renewal of the Community's bilateral agreements are also well advanced: provisional agreement has been reached on 24 bilateral agreements and talks are in progress on the remaining agreements. The terms of the agreements will be published when all the negotiations are completed; they are within the terms of the mandate agreed by Community Ministers last March.

The new protocol and the agreements negotiated so far meet the United Kingdom objectives outlined to the House in May 1985 and in February 1986. The new agreements will provide continued effective protection for the sensitive sectors of our industry, while providing some elements of liberalisation. In the new protocol special treatment is provided for the least developed countries and this has been reflected in the bilateral agreements negotiated by the Community. The protocol states that all participants should contribute towards liberalisation of trade, and the Community has taken positive account in the bilateral negotiations of the degree of openness of the supplier country's own markets. A further new element in the protocol, which was included in the light of problems experienced particularly by the United States, is that restrictions may be introduced on products of certain new fibres (eg ramie, silk blends, linen) where these are directly competitive with MFA products, and are causing or threatening market disruption. The protocol provides that consideration should be given to the removal of consistently under utilised quotas, and the Community has done this. The Community has also provided a degree of liberalisation in respect of children's clothes in the bilateral agreements. I have kept in close and detailed touch with the industry and other interested parties.

Cement (Greece)

Sir Patrick Wall asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 14 July, Official Report, columns 341-42, what recent steps he has taken to prevent the dumping of Greek concrete.

Mr. Alan Clark: I made formal representations to the European Commission, and also to the Greek Government in September about the potential threat of subsidised imports of Greek cement on the United Kingdom cement and coal industries. These representations are being followed up vigorously.

Chile

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the sale of radio equipment to Chile for policing purposes; what his response was; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: None.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what principles govern the United Kingdom's trade with Chile; if any changes are envisaged following the reimportation of a state of siege by the Pinochet Government on 7 September; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The policy of Her Majesty's Government is that civil trade with Chile, as with other countries, should be determined by commercial considerations and not by the character of the Governments of those countries. There are no plans to change this policy.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the percentage increase in imports and exports, respectively, each month since May 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information follows:

Manufacturing Investment

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the level, respectively, of private direct manufacturing investment overseas and gross domestic fixed capital formation for each year since 1977.

Mr. Alan Clark: Figures for gross domestic fixed capital formation are given in table 10.6 in the CSO Blue Book (UK National Accounts, 1986). Details covering leased assets are given separately on page 119 of the same publication.

United Kingdom net direct investment overseas in manufacturing industry is given in table 1.4 of Business Monitor MA4 "Overseas Transactions". The latest available data are for 1984 and are given in British Business, 6 June 1986 (page 461, table 3).

Net direct investment overseas is a financial concept and is not the same as fixed capital formation. Direct investment covers only the money invested in a related concern by a parent company and that concern will then decide how to use this money, whether, for example, on fixed assets, to increase debtors, to repay borrowing or to increase working capital.

PRIME MINISTER

Sir Robert Armstrong

Q50. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if she will dismiss Sir Robert Armstrong, secretary of the Cabinet, in the light of the fourth report from the Defence Committee on Westlands.

The Prime Minister: No.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Q127. Mr. Shersby asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement summarising the benefits that have accrued to the people of Northern Ireland since she signed the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

The Prime Minister: Under the terms of the agreement, the people of Northern Ireland have received a further reassurance that Northern Ireland will remain part of the United Kingdom so long as that is the wish of a majority. Progress has been made both in laying the foundations for enhanced cross border security co-operation and in bringing forward measures to recognise and accommodate the rights and identities of both traditions in Northern Ireland.

Commonwealth Summit

Mr. Parry asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the recent Commonwealth summit.

The Prime Minister: I attended the Commonwealth review meeting from 3 to 5 August which was called to consider the Nassau accord in the light of the report of the Eminent Persons Group. Heads of Government adopted some further measures designed to impress upon the South African Government the urgent need for fundamental change. I have placed a copy of the review meeting communiqué in the Library of the House.

Civil Service (Code of Ethics)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the discussions between Sir Robert Armstrong, Secretary of the Cabinet, and Civil Service unions on the code of ethics Sir Robert Armstrong issued after the Clive Ponting case.

The Prime Minister: The Civil Service unions have indicated that they will be taking up the offer of such discussions in due course.

La Belle Discotheque

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what evidence she now has from the German authorities in their continuing investigation into alleged Libyan involvement in the bombing of La Belle discotheque.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the answer which I gave the hon. Member on 3 July at col 587.

Hong Kong

Mr. Parry asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on her recent meeting with the Governor of Hong Kong.

The Prime Minister: I met the Governor and members of the Executive Council of Hong Kong on 10 September. We reviewed developments in Hong Kong since my last visit to the territory in December 1984 and the ratification in May 1985 of the Sino-British joint declaration on the future of Hong Kong. A copy of the communiqué released after the meeting has been placed in the Library of the House.

Northern Region (Ministerial Statement)

Mr. Parry asked the Prime Minister if the statement of the Under-Secretary of State for Health and Social Security, the hon. Member for Derbyshire, South (Mrs. Currie), on her visit to the northern region on health standards in the region represent Government policy; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government see it as an important part of their task to ensure that individuals are made aware of the effect on health of smoking, unwise diet and excessive alcohol. People in all parts of the country can do a great deal to avoid ill health for themselves and their families by consciously reducing or avoiding these risks to health.

Minister for Merseyside

Mr. Parry asked the Prime Minister if she has any plans to appoint a Minister for Merseyside; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No, but my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment continues to hold responsibility for the special Merseyside task force and for the Merseyside urban development corporation.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 21 October.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for 21 October.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others, including one with President Soares of Portugal. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

"Sun" Newspaper

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Attorney-General when he expects to reply to the communication addressed to him on 23 May by Professor Musa Mazzawi concerning the Sun newspaper.

The Attorney-General: A reply to professor Musa Mazzawi's letter dated 23 May 1986 was sent by my officials on 12 June 1986 and the matter he raised has subsequently been the subject of further correspondence.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Attorney-General if he will prosecute the editor of the Sun or the cartoonist who signs his name as Franklin for the offence of incitement to racial hatred under section 5A(1) of the Public Order Act 1936, as amended by section 70 of the Race Relations Act 1970, and section 28 of the Criminal Law Act 1977, in respect of the cartoon published on page 6 of the Sun newspaper on 15 May.

The Attorney-General: On 20 August 1986 I decided not to grant my consent to the prosecution of the editor of the Sun and the cartoonist who signs his name as Franklin in respect of an allegation that they had committed an offence contrary to section 5A Public Order Act 1936.

Booth Report

Mr. Heddle asked the Attorney-General when he proposes to publish his response to the Booth report on matrimonial causes procedure.

The Attorney-General: In November 1985 the Lord Chancellor's Department invited the views of interested persons and bodies on the detailed recommendations made in the Booth report, and, in particular, on those recommendations which would not require primary legislation. The views received are being analysed. The Government hope to announce their decision concerning these recommendations in the light of those views, as soon as is practicable.

SCOTLAND

Upland Land Use

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning the co-ordination of Forestry Commission, DAFS, and local authority policy on the direction of upland land use in the borders region.

Mr. Rifkind: I have received no such representations.

Council Houses

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report the locations and numbers of un-tenanted local authority houses and how long they have been vacant.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is as follows. The figures are based on returns from housing authorities which show the numbers of un-tenanted local authority dwellings at 31 March 1986 together with data on the length of vacancy of dwellings available for letting and the status of dwellings not available for letting.

Local authority vacant stock as at 31 March 1986

Pollution

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Falkirk, West on 29 October 1985, Official Report, column 467, what steps are being taken to consider chromium poisoning in the differential diagnosis of the morbidity and mortality of the dairy herd belonging to Mr. Taylor who farms in the vicinity of the former Re-Chem International chemical disposal plant at Roughmute, Bonnybridge; what plans are being made to remove from his land the contents of the bordering waste dump; and what plans are being made to compensate Mr. Taylor.

Mr. John MacKay: The problems affecting the dairy herd owned by Mr. Taylor during the period 1978-80 were diagnosed by Glasgow university veterinary school as stemming from ragwort poisoning. This diagnosis was confirmed by the Lenihan review following very careful consideration of the views expressed by Dr. Thornton of the Imperial college regarding possible metal contamination. Chromium and ragwort poisoning present quite different and distinguishable features on histopathological examination. No further investigations into this aspect are therefore planned.

The removal of waste and the question of compensation are matters on which Mr. Taylor should consult his legal adviser.

Dairy Cattle (Ailments)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will make ragwort poisoning and fat cow syndrome amongst dairy cattle reportable ailments for inclusion in Government statistics.

Mr. John MacKay: No.

Animal Deaths (St. Ninians)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland pursuant to his written reply to the hon. Member for Falkirk, West on 25 June 1986, Official Report, column 202, what investigation he has made into the relatively high number of unexplained animal deaths in the parish of St. Ninians.

Mr. John MacKay: Having regard to the high density of cattle maintained in the parish of St. Ninians, the number of unexplained animal deaths there is relatively no higher than the numbers elsewhere in Central Scotland. Investigations beyond those described in my reply to the hon. Member on 24 October 1985 at column 236 would not therefore be warranted.

Police (Statistics)

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report a statement showing in respect of each police force division in Scotland; (a) the total number of offences notified to the police in 1985, and (b) the percentage change in the above total compared to the total so notified in 1978.

Mr. Lang: A breakdown of the figures by police force division is not available and could not be obtained except at disproportionate cost. The table sets out the figures on crimes and offences recorded by each police force area for the years specified.

Crimes and Offences Recorded, by Police Force Area, Scotland: 1978 and 1985

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will publish a table showing the number of pupils awarded places under the assisted places scheme at each participating school and for Scotland overall; and what percentage of the total number of pupils at each school they account for;

(2) what has been the total amount of money distributed to each participating school in the assisted places scheme in Scotland since its inception;

(3) how much has been paid out in clothing grants per participating schools under the assisted places scheme in Scotland in the latest available year;

(4) how much has been paid as travel grants under the assisted places scheme in each participating school in Scotland in the latest available year; and at each school what was the number of grants paid;

(5) what is the percentage of pupils in Scotland currently awarded an assisted place who have already attended a fee-paying school; and if he will publish similar figures for each participating school.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

School	Total number of assisted pupils in school 1985-86[1] (provisional) (1)	Number of pupils in column (1) attending a fee-paying school before entry to the scheme (2)	Column (2) as a percentage of column (1) (3)	Number of assisted pupils as a percentage of school roll (4)	Amount paid out in clothing grants in school year 1985-86[1] (£) (5)	Amount paid out in travel grants in school year 1985-86[1] (£) (6)	Number of travel grants paid in school year 1985-86[1] (7)	Total amount allocated to each school up to and including school year 1985-86[2] (£) (8)

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the total number of payments made for clothing grants under the assisted places scheme in Scotland in the latest year.

Mr. John MacKay: Eight hundred and ninety nine in school year 1984-85. The provisional figure for 1985-86 school year is 1,097.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland by whom decisions are taken regarding the eligibility for and distribution of clothing grants under the assisted places scheme in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: Schools determine eligibility in accordance with the provisions of the Education (Assisted Places) (Scotland) Regulations 1986 and guidance provided by the Scottish Education Department.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria he uses to assess eligibility for clothing grants under the assisted places scheme in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: Clothing grants are income related and may be made on request where the relevant income does not exceed certain statutory amounts. Currently, in the first assisted year the amount is £7,563 and for any subsequent school year £7,248. The amount of the grant is limited to actual expenditure and shall not exceed—

(a) in the first assisted year
(i) One hundred and fifteen pounds, where the relevant income does not exceed £6,638.
(ii) Eighty seven pounds, where that income exceeds £6,638 but does not exceed £6,949.
(iii) Fifty eight pounds, where that income exceeds £6,949 but does not exceed £7,248.
(iv) Twenty nine pounds, where that income exceeds £7,248 but does not exceed £7,563; and

(b) in any subsequent year
(i) Forty three pounds, where the relevant income does not exceed £6,806.
(ii) Twenty one pounds, where that income exceeds £6,806 but does not exceed £7,248.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland for what individual items clothing grants under the assisted places scheme may be obtained in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: Clothing grants may be paid for expenditure on items of uniform and other clothing, including sports clothing, required to be worn at school by an assisted pupil.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how much has been paid out in clothing grants under the assisted places scheme in Scotland in each year since the scheme's inception;

(2) how much has been paid as travel grants under the assisted places scheme in Scotland in each year since its inception.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

School year	Travel grants £	Clothing grants £
1981-82	20,217	19,028
1982-83	54,246	30,457
1983-84	70,969	36,104
1984-85	96,597	49,695
[1]1985-86	131,445	61,445

[1] Provisional figures.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will specify entitlements which pupils may receive under the assisted places scheme in Scotland, other than clothing grants and travel grants.

Mr. John MacKay: In addition to fee remission, clothing grants and travel grants, an assisted pupil may be eligible for remission of charges for school meals and field study courses.

School Milk Subsidy Scheme

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the total amount of subsidy awarded to fee-paying and independent schools in Scotland in the past two years under the European Economic Community school milk subsidy scheme; and if he will publish the figures for each school.

Mr. John MacKay: The figures relate to milk and milk products supplied during the period of the academic years (September to August) and are as follows:

1984-85 £	[1]1985-86 £
214,258	197,284

[1] Provisional.

Figures for each school are not held centrally and cannot be obtained except at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many instances in the past five years convicted prisoners, whose country of residence is not the United Kingdom, have requested that they be transferred to their own country; in how many cases these requests have been turned down; and in how many cases requests have been approved.

Mr. Mellor: The United Kingdom was not party to any international arrangements for the transfer of prisoners out of the United Kingdom before 1 August 1985, when the Council of Europe convention on the transfer of sentenced persons came into effect. The information requested in respect of prisoners in England and Wales who are nationals of countries with which the United Kingdom has the necessary arrangements is given in the table for the period 1 August 1985 to 31 July 1986. In addition, 21 petitions were received in the same period from prisoners in England and Wales who were ineligible because they are not nationals of countries with which there is a repatriation arrangement.

[1] For the period in the table, the other countries for which the convention was in force were France, Spain, Sweden, Canada and the United States.

[2] Counting as one approved request a case which was initially refused but subsequently reconsidered and approved by the other government following a further petition.

[3] Includes cases where the transfer has yet to take place.

[4] Includes cases where the prisoner was discharged before all parties had agreed to the transfer.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are currently being held in custody whose country of residence is other than the United Kingdom; and for what crimes they are being held showing those held on remand and those convicted.

Mr. Mellor: The readily available information relates to the nationality of sentenced prisoners and is given in the table. However, the usual country of residence of some of the foreign nationals is likely to be the United Kingdom. The recording of nationality for citizens of Commonwealth countries, Pakistan and Eire is not sufficiently reliable for estimates of their numbers to be given.

Estimated sentenced population[1] of foreign nationality (excluding citizens of Commonwealth countries, Pakistan and Eire) in Prison Department establishments on 31 August 1986: by offence group.

[1] Based on records held centrally which are approximate; detailed checking of individual cases would involve disproportionate cost.

[2] Rounded estimates; the components do not add to the total, because they have been rounded independently.

Television Licences

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now bring forward proposals for a system of refunds of television licences similar to that existing for vehicle excise duty.

Mr. Mellor: We are looking again at the arrangements for refunds as part of our general consideration of the television licensing requirements in the light of the recommendations of the Committee on Financing the BBC.

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek changes in the Wireless Telegraphy (Broadcast Licence Charges and Exemptions) Regulation 1984 so that all pensioners without any other source of income than their pension are required to pay only a fee of 5p a year for the television licence.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. Friend has not yet reached any conclusions on the recommendations made by the Committee on Financing the BBC for changes to the television licensing requirements, including the arrangements for licences at reduced cost.

National Marriage Guidance Council

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what amount the grant awarded to the National Marriage Guidance Council has changed since 1981-82 in real terms.

Mr. Mellor: Grants to the National Marriage Guidance Council for the years 1981-82 to 1986-87 were:

	(a) Grant (cash terms) £	(b) Grant (real terms)[1] £
1981-82	704,000	704,000
1982-83	750,000	701,250
1983-84	788,000	704,472
1984-85	827,460	704,961
1985-86	864,570	699,437
1986-87	890,500	694,590

[1] Real terms figures are the cash figures adjusted to 1981-82 price levels by excluding the effect of general inflation as measured by the GDP deflator.

The cash terms increase in each year has been in accordance with the standard revaluation factor applied to all cash limited votes as required by the Government's cash planning.

Visas

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the total number of persons in possession of visas for entry into the United Kingdom in 1985-86 who were subjected to examinations by immigration officers.

Mr. Waddington: All passengers seeking entry to the United Kingdom are examined by an immigration officer. No separate record is kept either of the number of passengers holding visas who seek entry or of the number of such passengers who are required to submit to further examination.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the countries whose nationals require visas to visit the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: The "Statement of Change in the Immigration Rules" (Cmnd. 9914) sets out a revised appendix to the immigration rules (HC 169 as amended) specifying the overseas nationals who need visas for the United Kingdom. I have today announced that further changes will be made to the immigration rules to add Ghana to the appendix with effect from 23 October 1986, and in due course Nigeria.

Immigration

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will tabulate the numbers of persons subject to immigration procedures at London airport (Heathrow) in the years 1984, 1985 and the estimate for 1986, together with the numbers of related civil servants employed each year.

Mr. Waddington: The number of passengers subject to immigration control, excluding European Community nationals, admitted to the United Kingdom at Heathrow airport was about 4·4 million in 1984 and 4·9 million in 1985. In addition, about 7·2 million in 1984 and 7·3 million in 1985 British and other European Community nationals were admitted. Corresponding estimates for 1986 are not available. The number of immigration service personnel in post at Heathrow on 31 August was 575 in 1984, 587 in 1985 and 654 in 1986.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence is normally required by his Department to establish proof that a person is a resident of the United Kingdom for purposes of paragraph 56 of the immigration rules, HC 169 of 1983.

Mr. Waddington: Most passengers who are settled in the United Kingdom are able to produce to the immigration officer on return from a visit abroad a passport which confirms that the holder has previously been given indefinite leave to enter or remain and has not been away for more than two years. In the absence of such evidence the immigration officer would seek to satisfy himself by questioning the passenger about his previous residence, by examining any documentary evidence produced or by referring to the Home Office file.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions his Department has issued to immigration officers in connection with nationals of India, Pakistan and Sri Lanka returning to the United Kingdom as residents after visits overseas, in cases where the journey overseas was undertaken before 15 October.

Mr. Waddington: Immigration officers have been instructed that citizens of Bangladesh, India, Pakistan and Sri Lanka who return to the United Kingdom after 15 October 1986 do not require a visa if either:

(i) they are settled in the United Kingdom and are returning within two years of departure; or

(ii) they are returning within a period of limited leave which has been granted with an endorsement which applies section 3(3)(b) of the Immigration Act 1971. (These will generally be people in the United Kingdom for a long term purpose such as work or study.)

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice in connection with the statement of change in Immigration Rule, Cmnd. 9914, has been issued by his Department to nationals of India, Pakistan and Sri Lanka intending to return to the United Kingdom as residents after visits overseas.

Mr. Waddington: I have placed in the Library a copy of a comprehensive information leaflet about the extension of visa requirements to citizens of Bangladesh, Ghana, India, Nigeria and Pakistan, which also covers the changes in the visa arrangements for citizens of Sri Lanka. The leaflet includes an explanation of the exemptions from the visa requirement when people who are settled in the United Kingdom, or who are here for a long-term purpose such as work or study, make trips abroad; and advises how people who are exempt may obtain a passport endorsement confirming this. The leaflet has been sent to a number of organisations which represent and offer advice in the minority communities and copies can be obtained from the immigration and nationality department of the Home Office.

EC (Interior Ministers Meeting)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting of European Community Interior Ministers on 20 October.

Mr. Hurd: The conclusions of the meeting were set out in the Presidency statement which I made at the end of the meeting, the text of which is as follows:

Community Ministers responsible for immigration, counter-terrorism and drugs and a Vice-President of the Commission met today to study new measures designed to maitain and strengthen safeguards against terrorists, drug traffickers and others involved in serious crime and against illegal immigration, in the light of the progress being made towards freer movement within the Community.

Immigration

We all want the minimum of inconvenience to travellers within the Community. Convenient travel, reduced delays at frontiers, is good for people and for business. But we also have a duty to protect the citizens of the Community. So we have all agreed to work towards a system of easier frontier formalities for Community citizens that is not open to abuse. We set up a working group to consider urgently:

(i) stronger checks at external Community frontiers;
(ii) the contribution which internal checks can make;
(iii) the role of co-ordination of visa policies of member states in improving controls;
(iv) the role and effectiveness of frontier controls at internal frontiers in the fight against terrorism, drugs, crime and illegal immigration;
(v) exchange of information about the operation of spot check systems;
(vi) close co-operation to avoid the abuse of passports;
(vii) measures to achieve a common policy to eliminate the abuse of the right of asylum;
(viii) examination of ways in which the convenience of Community travellers can be improved without adding to the terrorist threat or the risks of illegal immigration, drug trafficking and other crime.

Terrorism

The meeting noted the progress made on implementing the decisions taken on 25 September.

Procurement of the equipment for the secure communications link between police forces is being urgently pursued.

Work continues on intensifying liaison between counter terrorist experts.

Arrangements have been set in place for the mutual exchange of information about people excluded from the territory of one member state so that others can have advance warning of possible risk.

Drugs

We agreed that the Community and its member states have a major role to play in stepping up the fight against drug abuse. We have agreed a seven point plan to cover:

measures to reduce demand for drugs especially among young people;

measures to improve the treatment of addicts and rehabilitation services;

ensuring that bilateral and Community aid supports as appropriate a recipient country's efforts to combat drug abuse; steps to ensure that legislation takes account of the need to maintain effective control over illicit drug trafficking, particularly at the Community's external frontiers; mutual enforcement of confiscation orders relating to drug traffickers' assets; enhanced co-operation between law enforcement agencies involving exchange of drug liaison officers between member states, the posting of drug liaison officers to other countries and the establishment of a world-wide directory of those involved in the fight against drug abuse: this would be achieved by inviting Trevi to examine the scope for creating a co-ordinated network of drug liaison officers to monitor developments in producer countries;

preparation of joint assessment by Community ambassadors in drug producing countries in order to ensure a steady flow of recommendations for action by the Twelve.

Drink-Driving

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report full figures for each year as to the number of people (a) breathalysed and (b) breathalysed positively (i) during 1985 and (ii) during the 1985 Christmas period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Statistics on breath tests carried out in 1985, including separate figures for the Christmas period, are published in Home Office statistical bulletin 19/86, "Statistics of Breath Tests, England and Wales 1985". (Tables 1, 6 and 7.)

Fixed Penalty Offences

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any additional or bonus payments to police officers have been introduced in consequence of the new system of operation of fixed penalty offences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No such payments have been introduced.

Football Hooliganism

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, in the light of recent incidents of football hooliganism, he has any plans to review the current penalties available to the courts to deal with such offences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Adequate maximum penalties are in our view available to the courts, under the existing law or the Public Order Bill, for the wide range of offences of which football hooligans may be convicted.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to withdraw the passport of any person convicted of an offence relating to football hooliganism; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources are employed by the Metropolitan police to deal with crowd violence at football matches in London.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This depends on the teams involved and the police assessment of the likelihood of disorder. For example, on Saturday 11 October, 944 officers were deployed on duties in connection with six matches in London, whereas on Saturday 18 October, 611 officers were deployed to five matches.

Passports

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards the circumstances in which a British passport or British visitor's passport is withdrawn.

Mr. Waddington: Withdrawal of a passport would be considered on the same basis as would refusal of an application, that is in the case of:

(a) a minor whose journey was known to be contrary to a court order, to the wishes of a parent or other person or authority to whom a court had awarded custody, care and control or to the provisions of section 25(1) of the Children and young Persons Act 1933, as amended, or section 52 of the Adoption Act 1958, as amended;

(b) a person for whose arrest a warrant had been issued in the United Kingdom or who was wanted by the police on suspicion of a serious crime;

(c) in very rare cases a person whose past or proposed activities were so demonstrably undesirable that the grant or continued enjoyment of passport facilities would be contrary to the public interest;

(d) a person repatriated at public expense until the debt had been repaid.

While a British Visitor's passport could be refused and withdrawal considered on these grounds, it is not practicable to link post offices which issue them with the index on which the controls depend.

Mr. Stuart Holmes

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Dorset to establish the motives for, duration of, and outcome of the detention under the Prevention of Terrorism Act of Mr. Stuart Holmes of Manchester; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Mr Holmes was arrested at 9.30 am on 6 October on suspicion of an offence under the Theft Act. After questioning by the police he was released at 5.35 pm without being charged. He was not detained under the Prevention of Terrorism Act.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report a statement showing in respect of each police force division in England and Wales (a) the total number of offences notified to the police in 1985 and (b) the percentage change in the above total compared to the total so notified in 1978.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information that is collected centrally relates to entire police force areas. Numbers of notifiable offences recorded by each police force in 1985 have been published in Home Office statistical bulletin issue No. 4/86 (table 6), and corresponding figures for 1978 were published in the Command Paper "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" for that year. (Cmnd. 7670, table 32). A revised set of counting rules was introduced at the beginning of 1980 so that figures for 1980 onwards are not precisely comparable with those for earlier years.

Visitors

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent, under his proposed regulations requiring prior entry clearance for certain visitors to the United Kingdom, the entry clearance officer will be expected to make a decision without reference to his Department; what extra work will be involved for his Department if such references are made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Entry clearance officers will in the normal way resolve visit visa applications from the new visa nationals without referral wherever possible. The extent to which that is achieved will determine the amount of extra work in the Home Office.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many visitors arrived at Heathrow terminal 3 on 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17 October; and how many arrived in October 1985;

(2) how many visitors to the United Kingdom who arrived on 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17 October were obliged to wait for more than six hours before being examined by the Immigration Service; and how many who arrived on the corresponding dates in October 1985 were so obliged.

Mr. Waddington: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many nationals of India, Pakistan and Bangladesh arrived in the United Kingdom on 15 and 16 October (a) in possession of visas, (b) in possession of a visa exemption stamp and (c) without a visa or visa exemption stamp.

Mr. Waddington: This information is not available.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what suggestions his Department has received to improve the flow of information about visitors detained for examination by the immigration service to persons waiting for them at airports; and what response his Department has made.

Mr. Waddington: Suggestions made include:

(i) Displaying the names of persons detained on closed circuit television screens in the public areas.

(ii) Installing extra emergency telephones in the immigration office and broadcasting the numbers over the national radio network.

(iii) Installing extra telephones in the public arrivals concourse, at Heathrow, terminal 3, to enable persons to contact the Immigration Service direct.

(iv) Providing the British Airports Authority information section with a list of all persons detained awaiting examination.

The very large numbers of passengers who arrived at Heathrow, terminal 3, during the period immediately preceding 15 October and were detained pending examination made the implementation of these suggestions at short notice impracticable. Terminal 3 is at present undergoing extensive rebuilding and this will provide an opportunity to consider the various suggestions received and the scope for improving information facilities.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost to public funds of accommodation and other expenses for visitors arriving in the United Kingdom on 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17 October and obliged to wait for examination by the Immigration Service.

Mr. Waddington: It is not possible at this stage to calculate what proportion of the costs will fall to public funds. This will not be known until all decisions have been made in respect of applications from persons who sought leave to enter as visitors during the period quoted. The costs of providing accommodation for persons awaiting examination or further examination by an Immigration Officer fall to the carrying companies where the final decision is to refuse leave to enter.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inquiries were received by his Department to ascertain the whereabouts of visitors to the United Kingdom who arrived on 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17 October.

Mr. Waddington: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors to the United Kingdom who arrived on 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17 October were accommodated overnight pending examination by the Immigration Service, and how many were so accommodated on the corresponding dates in October 1985.

Mr. Waddington: The number of passengers, including those seeking leave to enter as visitors, who were required to submit to further examination and either detained or granted temporary admission to reside at accommodation arranged by the Immigration Service for the dates in question was as follows:

	Number
11 October	86 (9)
12 October	75 (7)
13 October	148 (2)
14 October	646 (9)
15 October	527 (13)
16 October	312 (4)
17 October	284 (11)

The figures in brackets refer to the corresponding dates in October 1985. Some passengers were accommodated on more than one of the dates listed. Some had already been refused leave to enter.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report the number of temporary visitors in 1985-86 from (a) the United States of America, (b) Canada, (c) Australia, (d) New Zealand and (e) South Africa, and in each case, the numbers who are not known to have returned to the country of origin within the time limit specified in their original admission; and if he will express the figures of each country as a percentage of the total number granted admission as visitors.

Mr. Waddington: In 1985 and the first five months of 1986 the number of passengers who were admitted as visitors was:

	1985	1986 (to end of May)
USA	2,627,200	580,400
Canada	417,100	111,200
Australia	281,100	89,900
New Zealand	51,000	16,700
South Africa	79,900	22,200

Recording of landings and embarkations for these, as for other nationalities, is selective and information is not available as to numbers or proportions within those totals not known to have left at the end of their permitted stay.

We have no reason to believe that the overwhelming majority of visitors to this country do not leave at the end of their stay.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many visitors from (a) India, (b) Pakistan, (c) Bangladesh, (d) Nigeria, and (e) Ghana were the subject of intervention by right hon. or hon. Members in 1984, 1985 and the current year to date.

(2) how many visitors from (a) India, (b) Pakistan, (c) Bangladesh, (d) Nigeria, and (e) Ghana were refused entry and returned to the country of origin without the involvement of a right hon. or hon. Members in 1984, 1985 and 1986 to date.

Mr. Waddington: The information requested is not available. It is not possible to state how many passengers refused entry were seeking entry as visitors, and no record is kept of the nationality of passengers in whose cases right hon. and hon. Members made representations against refusal of entry.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the flight numbers of the aircraft which were unable to land passengers at Heathrow airport on 14 October.

Mr. Waddington: No aircraft were unable to land passengers at Heathrow airport on 14 October. There was a delay of approximately one hour in completing the disembarkation of the passengers who arrived on flight No. BG 001 from Dhaka.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passengers awaiting examination by his Department since 13 October have sought or required medical attention, and, what medical attention was offered.

Mr. Waddington: The information is immediately available in respect of Heathrow airport and for arrivals since 10 October. 108 passengers who arrived at Heathrow airport since 10 October have sought or required medical attention, either during the period they were waiting examination by the Immigration Service or in some cases after refusal of leave to enter. All were examined by a qualified medical practitioner. At terminal 1, one passenger was diagnosed as suffering from malaria and was taken to hospital. At terminal 3, three passengers were referred to hospitals for further examination, of whom one is still in hospital receiving treatment for dysentry. Another passenger was diagnosed as suffering from non-infective hepatitis and is receiving appropriate treatment.

All other passengers who were medically examined were diagnosed as suffering from minor ailments such as headaches and stomach upsets for which appropriate treatment was administered.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the locations which have been used by his Department since 13 October to accommodate passengers awaiting examination, with, in each case, the numbers so accommodated on each night.

Mr. Waddington: The information is as follows:

Location	13 October	14 October	15 October	16 October	17 October	18 October	19 October
Customs Building Heathrow	9	9	13	0	14	4	3

Some passengers were accommodated for more than one night and at more than one location. Some had already been refused leave to enter.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will cause inquiries to be made as to why a sponsor of a visitor was, through error by officials of his Department, placed on an aircraft for Bangladesh; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I have no knowledge of any sponsor being placed on board any aircraft for Bangladesh by the Immigration Service or its agents at terminal 3, Heathrow airport.

Single European Market

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how United Kingdom frontier controls against terrorism and the import of illegal drugs will be affected by the proposed single European market in the European Economic Community;

(2) what changes are envisaged in British frontier controls over the movement of people and goods, during the transition to a single European market in the European Economic Community.

Mr. Waddington: Community discussions on possible changes in frontier controls are at an early stage. As it is not clear what measures will be adopted at Community level, it is not possible to say what consequential changes may be made in British frontier controls. However, the general declaration on the articles of the Single European Act dealing with the Community's internal market makes clear that the right of member states to take any measures considered necesary to deal with terrorism and the traffic in drugs will not be affected.

Football Clubs (Police Services)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was (a) charged and (b) paid, by each football club in London for police services in the 1985-86 season and in the 1986-87 season to date.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are told by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the information requested is as follows:

Chilean Police Officers

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many senior Chilean police officers have been admitted to the United Kingdom during the current year; what was the purpose of their visit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is not available, but the Department has arranged no such visits.

Women Prisoners

Ms Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women in custody in England were pregnant during each month in the current year.

Mr. Mellor: The information is not kept centrally in the form requested and could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Basmati Rice

Mr. Janner asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make representations to the appropriate directorate-general of the European Economic Community Commission concerning the proposed reduction in the levy for imports of 15,000 tons of basmati rice.

Mr. Gummer: The Government have already made very clear to the Commission their opposition to the proposal in its present form.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the first management agreement to be made in environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Our objective is to enable farmers to begin to participate in the scheme for environmentally sensitive areas from the 1987 farming year. To this end we expect to invite applications early next spring.

Straw Burning

Mr. Dalyell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the efficacy of byelaws and the Highways Act in limiting the abuse of straw burning by farmers in 1986; and if he has any conveniently available figures for the impending number of prosecutions of persons for alleged offences in relation to straw burning; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The indications are that there has been less careless or inconsiderate burning of straw during this year's harvest season. A combination of strengthened byelaws, and the Highways (Amendment) Act 1986, the publicity campaign mounted by my Department, and the code of practice issued by the National Farmers' Union have contributed greatly to this improvement in the situation.

From 1986 onwards, the Home Office will be recording separately the number of prosecutions under straw burning byelaws, but it will be some time before a complete picture is available.

Rabies

Sir David Price asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report details of his disinfestation programme to prevent rabies from crossing the channel through a Channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement on how secure such arrangements will be.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In discussions with Eurotunnel, the promoters of the Channel fixed link, Ministry officials have set out the requirements to prevent rabies entering the country through a Channel tunnel.

In addition to the use of sealed trains, Eurotunnel have agreed to the installation of physical barriers and grids at entry points, regular inspections, rigorous cleaning programmes and the continuous deployment of baited traps in both tunnel and terminal areas. Obviously discussions are still in progress. However the Government will insist on diligent application of these safeguards to ensure that they are fully effective.

Grain (Moisture Content)

Mr. Speller asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will revise the maximum moisture content for grain going into intervention from the United Kingdom 14½ per cent. limit to the 15 per cent. permitted in other European Economic Community states.

Mr. Gummer: No. This measure forms part of the process of making the cereals market more responsive to real market forces.

Food (Contaminants)

Mr. Canavan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is satisfied that his Department has sufficient resources to ensure the adequate supervision of the levels of PCBs, PCTs, PCDs, and PCDFs in food, including milk for human consumption.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I am satisfied that the resources available within my Department are sufficient to carry out adequate scientific work on residues of polycholorinated biphenyls, polychlorinated terphenyls, polychlorinated dibenzo-p-dioxins and polychlorinated dibenzofurans in foodstuffs. The resources available are part of those used for the monitoring of contaminants in the general food supply, including milk, under the auspices of the steering group on food surveillance. This interdepartmental committee keeps under review the possibilities of contamination of the national food supply.

Mr. Canavan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which laboratories in the United Kingdom are conducting the supervision of the levels of PCBs, PCTs, PCDs and PCDFs; what levels they are working to; and how the standards were obtained to set the levels.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Monitoring for residues of PCBs in foods and human tissues is carried out by the steering group on food surveillance through its working party on pesticide residues since, if present, these compounds are detected by the same analytical procedure as that used for organochlorine pesticides. The following Government laboratories participate in this surveillance:

Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF) Slough Laboratory.
MAFF, Central Veterinary Laboratory
MAFF, Fisheries Laboratory, Burnham-on-Crouch
MAFF, Food Science Laboratory
Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), Laboratory of the Government Chemist
Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland (DAFS) Agricultural Scientific Services
DAFS Freshwater Fisheries Laboratory, Pitlochry
Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland, Agricultural and Food Chemistry Division

The limit of determination employed in food surveillance for PCBs depends on the commodity being analysed but in the above surveillance, it is generally less than 0·01 mg/kg on a whole product basis. Residues of PCBs detected by the above laboratories are quantified by comparison with the appropriate commercial PCBs product, either Aroclor 1254 or Aroclor 1260.

The nature of scientific work to be carried out on PCTs is currently being considered by my Department.

Five organisations in the UK are involved in relevant Government work on PCDDs and PCDFs, although I understand that other laboratories may offer analytical services for these compounds. The organisations involved in this Government work are as follows:

MAFF, Food Science Laboratory
DTI, Laboratory of the Government Chemist
Atomic Energy Research Establishment, Harwell
University of East Anglia
Strathclyde Regional Chemist and Public Analyst

Detection limits of at least 0·02 μg/kg are currently achievable with existing analytical techniques and developments in methodology are in hand attempting to reduce the detection limit to 0·001 μg/kg. The limits vary according to a number of factors including the particular isomer under investigation and the nature of the sample. Reference standards for all the groups of isomers of PCDDs and PCDFs have been obtained from the USA for use in this monitoring.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Deakins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the United Kingdom's net farm income as a proportion of the total income of farmers.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In the 1983-84 tax year, for which provisional data are now available, the income of self-employed farmers in the United Kingdom from agriculture and horticulture amounted to almost three-fifths of their total income as assessed for tax. Corresponding estimates that include farming companies are not available. The information is derived from an anonymised sample of tax records and is not directly comparable with the established sources of farm income data, for example, the farm business survey and the departmental net income calculation.

Intervention Stores

Mr. Deakins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provision exists within the European Economic Community budget arrangements for depreciating the value of agricultural commodities in store pending their disposal.

Mr. Jopling: Council Regulation (EEC) No. 1883/78 enables the Commission subject to the views of Member States to depreciate the value of intervention stocks if their estimated selling price is below the book value. The 1986 Community budget provides 471 mecu for the depreciation of beef and butter in store.

Soil Erosion

Mr. Spearing asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports he has received and what steps he has taken to ascertain the extent of and trends in soil erosion in England and Wales; and if he will state the geological formations where related soils are currently at greatest risk.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department's Agricultural Development and Advisory Service has this year completed a five-year study of soil erosion in collaboration with the Soil Survey of England and Wales. This study covered 16 areas known to be at risk from soil erosion by water, with a variety of soil types and climates. The final report will be available early next year.

University Departments and other organisations also conduct studies on soil erosion, and publish reports on these in scientific journals from time to time.

Sandy and silty soils are more susceptible to erosion than heavier soils, but the soil texture is not always closely related to the underlying geological formation. Many other factors also influence the risk of erosion. Among the most important are the steepness and length of slopes, the amount of crop cover and the intensity of rainfall. The risk of erosion on susceptible sites can be minimised by careful soil and crop management, and my Department advises farmers on the appropriate techniques.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Drugs

Mr. Mudd asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list by date, location, substance, quantity and value, all quantities of proscribed drugs and illicit drugs seized in United Kingdom ports, or in British waters, by officers of Her Majesty's Customs in each of the years 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Brooke: I regret that this information is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Moreover, it would not be in the public interest for information about locations to be disclosed.

Personal Incomes

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will indicate the gain or loss to those with incomes under £5,000, £5,000 to £10,000, £10,000 to £15,000, £15,000 to £20,000, £20,000 to £30,000, £30,000 to £50,000 and over £50,000 a year in each Budget separately since 1979, including the 1986 Budget, including both aggregate changes for those in each category and the average change per taxpayer in each category and in every case indicating how much is due to indexation and how much is a real gain.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information is in the tables. For each financial year shown, the tables compare the yield from the tax regime in that year with the 1978-79 tax regime. All estimates are calculated on the 1986-87 tax base and all tax regimes have been indexed to 1986-87 levels by reference to the statutory formula. The comparisons therefore allow for budgetary changes in income tax rates and allowances, but not for any changes since 1978-79 in the definition of the income tax base.

The first table shows the total reduction (−) or increase (+) in tax yield from each income range; and the second table shows the average change for individual tax units.

As child tax allowances were being phased out in 1978-79 they have been excluded from the comparison.

It is not possible to provide useful estimates of the liabilities in 1986-87 for the 1978-79 regime without indexation since Inland Revenue records do not cover many of the people who would be brought into tax by such low levels of personal allowances. A partial analysis with incomplete coverage would be misleading.

Economic Growth

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if there is any correlation between the rate of economic growth and (a) the balance of payments, (b) the public sector borrowing requirement, (c) productivity, (d) earned incomes, (e) the standard rate of income tax, (f) the rate of corporation tax and (g) the rate of inflation; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what are the main economic factors which are correlated with the rate of economic growth.

Mr. John MacGregor: Economic variables are normally correlated with each other to some extent, though not necessarily at a statistically significant level. No conclusion can be drawn from such correlation, as in itself it gives no information about causal relationships in the economy.

EC (Commitment Appropriations)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reforms in European Economic Community budgetary procedures he will propose as President to ensure that commitment appropriations are not agreed unless there is revenue to meet them.

Mr. Brooke: The United Kingdom and other member states have repeatedly insisted in the Council that decisions on commitment appropriations must be taken in accordance with the budget discipline conclusions and in full knowledge of their implications for payment obligations in future years. We have also supported the Commission's initiative in preparing four-year rolling projections of expenditure and revenue. I do not think that the United Kingdom Presidency could usefully propose procedural reforms at this stage.

EC (Own Resources)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the European Economic Community Commission's view that the maximum value added rate for own resources will need to increase to 1·6 per cent. in January 1988.

Mr. Brooke: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) at column 1 on 21 April 1986.

Customs and Excise (Heathrow)

Mr. Kaufman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise were on duty in Heathrow terminal 3 on 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16 October; and how many were on duty on the corresponding dates in 1985, and on each of the first six days of October of the current year.

Mr. Lawson: For operational reasons it is not policy to disclose the number of Customs staff on duty at specific locations. The number of staff on duty at Terminal 3 Heathrow varies according to management's assessment of the risks. Resident staff are supported by mobile teams and specialist investigators who move between terminals as the need arises.

Personal Incomes (Budget Effects)

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the gain per individual arising from each relevant component of the 1986 Budget, both at current prices and net of indexation for those at one half and three-quarters of average earnings, average earnings, and one and a half, two, five and 10 times average earnings; and if he will provide comparable figures for each budget since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Inflation

Mr. Wareing asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his expectations now are for the rate of inflation during the course of 1987.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend will be publishing a forecast of inflation prospects for 1987 in the "Autumn Statement".

IMF and World Bank Meeting

Mr. Wareing asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the recent annual meeting in Washington DC of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

Mr. Ian Stewart: At the annual meetings of the IMF/IBRD, the interim and development committees noted that prospects for world growth were better in 1987, while recognising that the debt problem remains severe for many countries. They stressed the importance of determined implementation of growth-orientated adjustment along the lines proposed in 1985 by United States Treasury Secretary Baker and reaffirmed their commitment to ensure adequate funding for the World Bank.

For details, I refer the hon. Member to the communiqués of the interim and development committees, copies of which are being made available in the House of Commons Library.

Fuel and Power (VAT)

Mr. Spearing asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the actual and percentage increase in the cost of fuel and power by the imposition of value added tax on the basis sought by the Commission of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Mates asked the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list the contracts, with the subject of the assignment, awarded to management consultancy or accounting firms by the Management and Personnel Office in 1985, with the name of the consultants concerned.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on progress achieved by the Anglo-Irish conference.

Mr. Tom King: I shall reply to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if security co-operation between the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland has improved since the signing of the Anglo-Irish Agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Since the signing of the Anglo-Irish agreement welcome progress has been made under article 9(a) of the agreement in developing measures to improve cross-border security co-operation. The three joint working parties established by the RUC and the Garda have now reported and the implementation of their recommendations will increase significantly the ability of the security forces to combat cross-border terrorism. We shall continue to press for the timely implementation of those recommendations and to seek additional ways of promoting still closer and more effective co-operation with the Irish authorities.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what ways the level of violence in Northern Ireland has altered since the signing of the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Mr. Scott: The level of Republican terrorism is much the same as it was in the immediate aftermath of the signing of the Anglo-Irish agreement. During this period the security forces have had to contend with serious public disorder associated with Loyalist protests against the Anglo-Irish Agreement which has diverted police resources away from other vital duties especially the fight against terrorist crime. There has been a substantial increase in sectarian violence and vicious campaigns of intimidation against ordinary members of the public by Loyalist and Republican terrorist and paramilitary groups. Despite these great difficulties, and despite disgraceful attacks on its members and their homes and families, the RUC, ably supported by the regular Army and UDR, has continued to uphold the law with great courage and distinction.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing, on a monthly basis, whether there has been a change in civil disorder since the signing of the Anglo-Irish Agreement in 1985.

Mr. Scott: The following table details the main categories of civil disorder on a monthly basis from 1 November 1984 to 30 September 1986:

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report a table detailing the acts of intimidation that have been reported to the police in Northern Ireland on a monthly basis since the signing of the Anglo-Irish Agreement in 1985.

Mr. Scott: Statistics on incidents of an intimidatory or sectarian nature were not collated centrally until the beginning of March 1986. Since then they have been kept by four or five-week periods roughly equivalent to calendar months and are as follows:

Period beginning	Total
3 March	247

[1] To 30 September

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what improvements the closer co-operation between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of the Republic of Ireland, since the signing of the Anglo-Irish Agreement, has produced in the situation in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: I shall reply to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to when the inquiry conducted by Mr. Colin Sampson into allegations concerning the Royal Ulster Constabulary will be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Mr. Sampson is expected shortly to complete the report requested by the Chief Constable of the RUC into allegations of misconduct by members of the RUC. It will then be submitted to the Chief Constable of the RUC; the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland will also receive a copy and will consider what directions to give as to criminal prosecutions.

It would be wrong to comment on specific allegations against any individual until after any criminal or disciplinary proceedings have been completed. However, I shall, at the earliest opportunity make a statement on matters of more general interest in Northern Ireland arising from the report.

DEFENCE

Military Bases

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what action he proposes to pursue in the light of the decision by Mildenhall magistrates to declare unlawful 27 byelaws made by his Department in relation to the United States air force base at Mildenhall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The decision of the Mildenhall magistrates has been referred by the Director of Public Prosecutions to the Divisional Court for a ruling,. I am not in a position to make further comment.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for the byelaws applying to other military bases in the United Kingdom, of the decision by Mildenhall magistrates to declare unlawful 27 byelaws made by his Department in relation to Mildenhall United States air force base; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Ministry of Defence police will continue to take action under the byelaws at Mildenhall and other bases where there are similar byelaws.

Bon Ami

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Defence how, and based on what operational requirements, officials of RAF Strike Command calculated, at the conclusion of the inquiry into the loss of the Bon Ami off Kinlochbervie, Sutherland, that the cost of locating a search and rescue service helicopter in north-west Scotland would amount to £20 million; how this figure compares with the most recent establishment costs incurred in the United Kingdom for such a service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I wrote to the hon. Member on 5 September, and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Horses

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost to his Department of the services' involvement with horses, excluding the Household Cavalry, but including assistance at displays and shows.

Mr. Freeman: The annual cost of Army horses, excluding those in the Household Cavalry, is about £172,000.

Royal Ordnance Factories

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from the board of Royal Ordnance factories about the sale of Royal Ordnance factory, Leeds.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence had discussions with the chairman of Royal Ordnance plc prior to the announcement of the sale and exchanged correspondence with him. The chairman confirmed that the board of Royal Ordnance agreed in principle to the sale.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence on what terms the board of the Royal Ordnance factories has agreed to the sale of Royal Ordnance factory, Leeds to Vickers; and how this compares with its asset value.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Royal Ordnance plc and Vickers have signed a sale and purchase agreement, the details of which are subject to usual commercial confidentiality. The price is as described by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 24 July 1986, at column 618, and will not emerge finally until the audit of the net asset valuation has been completed.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence what factors were taken into account in the decision to sell Royal Ordnance factory, Leeds to Vickers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There was no single overriding factor in our decision. We took the view that the sale was the course which best satisfied the needs of the Ministry of Defence as a purchaser of tanks on the most economic basis possible; the longer term future of tank design and manufacture in the United Kingdom; and the aspirations of the work force to a secure and prosperous future in the business.

Procurement Executive

Mr. Dover asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the regulations regarding the length of time that should elapse between a member of his Procurement Executive leaving the Department and joining a private sector company which has recently been awarded a contract by his Department.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: All members of the Ministry of Defence, civilian and military are required to seek formal approval prior to accepting any appointment with a defence-related business. This requirement extends for a period of two years after either retirement or resignation. This process provides the Department with the opportunity to examine the circumstances of the proposed appointment, the individual's past official contact with the company and it's competitors. Waiting periods, when imposed, may vary depending on the relevant circumstances. Approval of an application may be withheld for a period of up to two years following an individual's retirement or resignation.

Meteorological Services

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what consultations his Department held with representatives of the aviation industry before evidence was given to the Committee on Public Accounts on the financial arrangements for the provision of meteorological services;

(2) what consultations his Department held with representatives of the Civil Aviation Authority before evidence was given to the Committee on Public Accounts on the financial arrangements for the provision of meteorological services.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No special consultations were held with the Civil Aviation Authority or the aviation industry regarding either the Comptroller and Auditor General's report on financial arrangements for meteorological services or the evidence to be given to the Committee by Ministry of Defence witnesses. However, there are regular dicussions between the CAA and the Met Office which allow the former to represent the interests of the civil aviation industry, in addition to frequent informal contacts the Met Office has with individual air operators.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements are made by his Department to ensure that the provision of meteorological services takes account of the interests of the civil aviation industry.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Since, for the purposes of international civil aviation, the Civil Aviation Authority is designated as the responsible meteorological authority for the United Kingdom, the Meteorological Office has to meet the essential requirements for meteorological services as specified by the CAA.

Defence-related Work (Scotland)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are employed in defence-related work in Scotland.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I shall answer shortly.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are employed in places in Scotland at which work related to the strategic nuclear deterrent is carried out.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I shall answer shortly.

7th Gurkha Rifles

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the incident in Hawaii in May, which resulted in a number of soldiers from the 1st Battalion Duke of Edinburgh's Own 7th Gurkha Rifles being dismissed, the number dismissed, the number that appealed, and the number re-instated; and what is his policy regarding the continued employment of Gurkhas within the British Army.

Mr. Freeman: One hundred and thirty six soldiers of support company, 1st Battalion 7th Duke of Edinburgh's own Gurkha Rifles (1/7 GR) took part in Exercise UNION PACIFIC in Hawaii between 13 April and 28 May 1986. The exercise involved company level field training, some of it in conjunction with United States marines and army units. The company was commanded by acting Major Corin Pearce, 31, a non-Gurkhali-speaking officer seconded from the Royal Anglian Regiment.

On 25 May, after the company had returned to camp following an organised off-duty party to mark the end of the exercise, an apparently spontaneous disturbance erupted during which first a Queen's Gurkha officer, Captain Chandra Kumar Pradhan, and subsequently the company commander were violently assaulted and injured. Each sustained two broken ribs, and Major Pearce also suffered head wounds requiring 15 stitches. The violence continued for some time, only two or three Gurkha soldiers or NCOs seeking to intervene or assist. Order was eventually restored with the assistance of two young British officers.

On the return of support company to Hong Kong, a full official inquiry by the special investigation branch of the Royal Military Police was set in train, the normal investigative procedure following such a serious episode. At the initial stages of the investigation, 18 suspects were held under arrest, but they were subsequently released because of the lack of corroborated evidence. Many of the company are known to have been involved in the incident to a greater or lesser extent, and it is certain that most witnessed it, but positive identification again proved difficult, both because of the confusion in the sudden fracas itself and because of the refusal of the soldiers present to give evidence about individuals involved in the assault. The available evidence of identification from various officers was insufficient to frame court martial proceedings against all the ringleaders, nor could this evidence be corroborated.

It was explained to the men that it is a military duty —as indeed it is a civil one—for witnesses to tell an official inquiry all that they know, and that failure to do so was in itself a further offence. Further opportunities were offered for the soldiers to come forward with evidence to the investigators: none did so. The inquiry was therefore closed, and the report referred upwards through the chain of command.

The attack on the two officers and the subsequent refusal of the men fully to co-operate in the inquiry were both serious offences. Together they led to a complete breakdown of trust between the men and their officers, rendering the soldiers militarily ineffective. I should emphasise that only relatively minor grievances emerged from the inquiry, and certainly nothing which in any way justified the major breach of discipline. In particular, I would mention that the allegations—made much of in media comment—that the company commander made remarks of a racist nature have been fully investigated, and no evidence found to support them. All the soldiers well knew, from their service in the Army, of the procedures for redress of complaint, which include direct access to more senior officers than their company commander should they believe it necessary.

Faced with a very serious disciplinary offence which could not be ignored or condoned and with which it was not possible to deal by court martial proceedings, the Army authorities had no alternative but to recommend the administrative discharge of all the 123 members of support company. In identical circumstances, exactly the same action would have been taken in a company of British soldiers, the key issue being that without the bond of trust a soldier is militarily ineffective.

The discharges were recommended unanimously right up the chain of command by the battalion, itself, by the Brigade of Gurkhas, by the Commander British Forces Hong Kong and by senior Army authorities in London. The recommendation was then referred to and approved by Ministers, including the Secretary of State for Defence.

The men of support company were told that administrative discharge was being considered, and advised of their right to make representations. In only 36 cases, approximately one third, were representations submitted. Each was carefully considered and discharge was subsequently rescinded in 12 cases. All those who have been discharged, a total of 110 men to date, have been advised that they have the right of appeal. The continuing availability of impartial advice and the procedures for submitting appeals on an individual basis have also been explained to them. To date two such appeals have been submitted and these are still being considered up the chain of command. At the time of this statement therefore no one has been reinstated. As the men have been administratively discharged, they retain in full their eligibility for pension or gratuity earned by their service up to the date of discharge.

We regard this unhappy incident as an isolated and wholly untypical one which in no way detracts from the very high esteem in which the Brigade of Gurkhas is held. The brigade has a long tradition of gallant and loyal service, and both this Government and the Army are determined to ensure that this episode damages neither our very close and friendly relations with Nepal nor the future role of the Gurkhas in the British Army. As my right honourable Friend the former Secretary of State for Defence made clear in a press statement on 27 September 1985, this role will continue beyond our withdrawal from Hong Kong in 1997. (The text of the statement, which is headed "Hong Kong Stability Permits Force Reductions", is in the Library).

Departmental Land

Sir Richard Body asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many acres of land are owned by his Department to which there is no right of public access at all; and how many such areas there were in 1976.

Mr. Freeman: Records are not maintained in a way that would enable this information to be provided. It is, however, Ministry of Defence policy to allow access for recreational purposes where such use is consistent with operational activity, security, safety and the activities of tenant farmers.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the establishment of, and land owned by, or leased by, or in which an interest is held by (a) the Territorial Army, (b) the Home Service Force, (c) the Royal Observer Corps, (d) recruitment offices of the armed forces and (e) the cadet Forces in Wales.

Mr. Freeman [pursuant to his reply, 22 July 1986, c. 163]: The following are the main locations which either the Ministry of Defence, which takes responsibility for the armed forces recruiting offices, or the Wales Territorial Auxiliary and Volunteer Reserve Association, which is responsible for providing accommodation for the Territorial Army, Home Service Force, the Combined Cadet Force, the Army Cadet Force and the Air Training Corps, owns, leases or holds an interest in Wales. Provision of accommodation and facilities for the Royal Observer Corps and the Sea Cadet Corps are not a matter for this Department.

Amphibious Shipping

Sir Patrick Wall asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now announce his decision on the future of amphibious shipping.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As has been made clear to the house, it is our intention to make an announcement on this subject before the end of the year.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the nature of the work carried out so far by the Property Services Agency's directorate of defence on item 1148; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Property Services Agency provided at HMS Warrior a new underground area together with a diesel generator building and associated interior and exterior utilities.

Education Costs

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what has been the total amount of money spent in allowances to his Department's personnel and certain ranks of the armed forces posted overseas to have their children educated privately in each year since 1981 in (a) Scotland and (b) in England and Wales;

(2) what financial assistance his Department offered to Ministry of Defence personnel or various ranks of the armed forces posted overseas to have their children educated as boarders in private schools in the United Kingdom; and if he will publish a table showing since 1984 (a) the schools involved and the area of the education authority they are located in, (b) the amount of money involved at each school and (c) the number of pupils involved for Scotland, England and Wales.

Mr. Freeman: Boarding school allowance is available to service parents, regardless of rank, to assist them in providing continuity of education for their children in spite of their own liability to posting moves both at home and overseas. The allowance is currently being paid in respect of about 21,500 service children, attending several hundred schools throughout the United Kingdom; information in the form requested could therefore not be provided without disproportionate effort. It is estimated that about one fifth of the children concerned are attending schools run by local education authorities rather than independent schools.

The overall cost of the allowance in each year since 1981 was as follows:

	£ million (final outturn)
1981-82	60·00
1982-83	66·30
1983-84	76·50
1984-85	78·00
1985-86	85·00

Over the same period a similar allowance has also been paid to a small number of MOD officials serving overseas. Expenditure in each year has been approximately £0·5 million.

Chile (Warships)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the warships sold by the United Kingdom to Chile since September 1973 giving warship type and date of delivery in each case.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Since September 1973 the following warships have been sold by the United Kingdom to Chile:

ENVIRONMENT

Housing Associations

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his replies to the right hon. Member for Brent, East on 4 July, Official Report, column 675, how much was provided for housing associations to build new homes by his Department in each of the last three years; and how much finance was provided by the private sector.

Mr. Tracey: Development finance for registered housing associations' projects for fair rent and low cost home ownership is provided either by the Housing Corporation within the approved development programme agreed by this Department, or by local authorities within their housing investment programmes, or by the private sector. The Department then pays housing association grant on completion of the projects. The Department does not hold information on private sector funding. The figures for Housing Corporation and local authority investment in providing homes either by newbuild or rehabilitation are as follows:

Gross lending to Housing Association (England) for fair rent and low cost home ownership

	Housing Corporation £ million	Local authorities £ million
1983-84	734	138
1984-85	697	149
1985-86	711	130

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his replies to the right hon. Member for Brent, East on 4 July, Official Report, column 675, how many homes for sale or shared ownership housing associations applied to his Department for finance to build; and what proportion of these bids were actually granted in each of the last three years.

Mr. Tracey: Housing associations make their applications for such finance either to the Housing Corporation or to local authorities. We do not hold information on the number made or the proportion granted.

Housing Market

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the reply of 14 July, Official Report, column 322, what assumptions the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State had in mind concerning the relationships between different sectors of the housing market in order to prepare estimates of the current shortfall between demand for and the supply of public rented accommodation to meet both general and special needs which cannot be met by other means; and what evidence his Department has concerning the extent to which such assumptions may or may not hold true over time.

Mr. Tracey: This Government have brought about fundamental changes in the housing market by making it possible for almost three quarters of a million council tenants in England to buy their own homes, and by encouraging the private sector to cater for a much wider range of housing needs. For the future, we are aiming for further, equally fundamental, changes through further increases in owner-occupation and the creation of a healthy and diversified private rented sector. Because of the changing interplay of all these factors, it would be inappropriate at the present time to make detailed assessments of the balance of supply and demand for public rented housing.

Homelessness

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homeless households were recorded by local authorities in bed and breakfast accommodation (a) at the end of December 1985 and (b) at the end of March 1986; what is his Department's assessment of the reasons for the difference between these figures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Patten: In England there were 4,270 households in bed and breakfast accommodation at the end of December 1985 and 4,940 at the end of March 1986. This increase will reflect such factors as those referred to in my reply on 30 January, at column 610, to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker). We do not know how many of the households concerned were placed in bed and breakfast accommodation pending inquiries into their circumstances.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is his Department's estimate of the number of homeless households accepted by London boroughs who were placed in bed and breakfast accommodation at the end of the first quarter of the current year; what figure has been supplied to his Department by Shelter based on returns from London boroughs concerning the number of homeless households they placed in bed and breakfast accommodation on the same date; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list those local authorities failing to provide his Department with information (a) within the last quarter, (b) within the last half year, (c) within the last year and (d) within the last two years on (i) the number of homeless households accepted in their area and (ii) the number of homeless households placed in bed and breakfast accommodation at the end of the quarter as requested on his Department's quarterly PIE forms; what steps his Department is taking to improve local authorities' response rate to his Department's PIE forms; and what steps his Department is taking to revise its grossing-up procedure to take account of non-returns in the publication of the quarterly homelessness statistics.

Mr. John Patten: It is important that we have an accurate picture of the extent of homelessness and therefore that local authorities respond promptly to our regular requests for information on the subject. Most local authorities do so, but regrettably a number do not. The table sets out those authorities which have yet to respond in respect of the last published quarterly statistics—the second quarter of 1986—and those who did not respond to earlier requests for information.

Given the lack of response from certain local authorities, the Department's aggregate figures on homelessness have necessarily involved some estimation.

We are continually seeking to improve the response from local authorities. In addition we are considering possible adjustments to our methods of estimation.

Homelessness: Local authorities failing to respond to the quarterly P1(E) in respect of the second quarter of 1986

Ronan Point

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken subsequent to the discovery of further faults in the construction of Ronan Point, Canning town.

Mr. Tracey: The Building Research Establishment began a detailed appraisal of Ronan Point in 1984 and identified faults in its construction. We therefore published a report of that appraisal in May 1985, and advised every local authority in England which owned similar blocks on the action they ought to take. The evidence uncovered by the demolition process reinforces the advice we then gave, but it does not give any grounds for modifying it.

London Docklands Development Corporation

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has approved for a study to be commissioned by the London Docklands Development Corporation on the social impact of its activities; and if he will state the expenditure approved by the corporation for this study.

Mr. John Patten: The London Docklands Development Corporation has commissioned a study to examine the social impact of its housing, employment and other programmes on local communities in the Isle of Dogs. The study will cost just under £50,000, and no departmental approval was required.

Housing and Planning Bill

Mr. Mikardo asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received from local authority tenants' organisations and from individual local authority tenants concerning clause 5 of the Housing and Planning Bill; what proportions have expressed support for or opposition to the clause as it stands; what specific issues have been raised; and whether he intends either to withdraw clause 5 from the Bill or to bring forward further amendments to the clause in the light of these representations.

Mr. John Patten: We have received over 500 written representations about clause 5 (now clause 9) of the Housing and Planning Bill from people who are local authority tenants or from tenants' organisations. Two per cent. specifically opposed it and 98 per cent. asked questions or expressed concern.

The main concerns appear to stem from a fundamental misunderstanding of the purpose and effect of the clause. The worries were that the clause would remove the statutory security of tenure we gave council tenants for the first time in 1980; that despite the obligation the clause would impose on councils to consult tenants and to obtain the Secretary of State's approval before disposing of property for redevelopment and improvement and to offer alternative accommodation, it would afford inadequate safeguards; that, despite the enhanced opportunities it would give to bring in extra resources from the private sector for repair and improvement, the housing stock would somehow be diminished; that the chance of getting more homes repaired by private contractors would remove existing means of redress against poor workmanship and would reduce employment; and that the opportunity to harness the resources from private sector to bring empty houses back into use would add to homelessness.

The Government have no intentions of withdrawing or further amending the clause into which we have already built exceptional safeguards for the secure tenants (and which will extend their eligibility for home-loss payments).

Written Answers

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average cost of answering a written parliamentary question to his Department; and at what level he considers the cost to be disportionate.

Mr. Ridley: Comprehensive information on the costs of answering parliamentary questions to my Department is not available. A Civil Service wide survey, based on staff by grade, estimates the average cost of answering a written question to be £43.

An advisory figure of £200 is used throughout Government as the level at which consideration might be given to whether the cost of a full reply in a particular case is justified. Individual cases are considered on their merits, and there is no maximum level of costs which automatically disqualifies a question from answer.

Toxic Wastes

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will list those laboratories to which the Industrial Air Pollution Inspectorate refer samples for the monitoring of PCBs, PCDs, PCDDs, PCDFs and other toxic wastes in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waldegrave: Samples taken by the industrial air pollution inspectorate are analysed at the Health and Safety Executive's laboratories at Cricklewood, north London. Additionally they have commissioned the school of chemical sciences, university of East Anglia, to analyse soil and herbage for PCBs, PCDDs and PCDFs.

Honorary Aldermen

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to which local authorities have made use of their powers under the Local Government Act to appoint honorary aldermen.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has no information. The appointment of honorary aldermen is entirely at the discretion of the local authorities, and they do not have to notify him.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when his inspector's decision in respect of the planning appeal held on 1 July in respect of appeal reference No. APP/DO325/A/85/034973 will be known.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend's decision on the apeal was issued on 16 October 1986.

LPG Storage Tanks

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he proposes to take to issue guidance to local planning authorities on the installation of liquified petroleum gas storage tanks on domestic premises.

Mr. Tracey: The Health and Safety Executive's guidance note CS5 "The Storage of Liquid Petroleum Gas at Fixed Installations", which is available from HMSO, is currently being revised to include more specific guidance relating to liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) on domestic premises. Local planning authorities are required to consult HSE on the safety aspects of planning applications which involve the presence of 25 tonnes or more of LPG. HSE are ready to provide advice on other applications if the planning authority considers that there are special circumstances which make advice on safety aspects necessary.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, pursuant to the reply of 25 July, Official Report, column 559, he will give the date of the letter from the London Residuary Body referring to support from the Association of London Authorities for the transfer of the Greater London Council's seaside and country homes to a housing association where fair rents apply.

Mr. Chope: The letter which referred to support from the ALA was from the Greater London Council, dated 5 November 1985.

(2) if he has formalised directions regarding the drawing up and presentation of the accounts of the London Residuary Body for 1985-86; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions have been held between his Department and the London Residuary Body concerning the non-payment by the London Residuary Body of pensions to a number of former Greater London Council staff in April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The London Residuary Body has kept my Department informed of progress on the payment of pensions.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether discussions have been held with his Department concerning procedures for approval of disposal of property by the London Residuary Body; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make an order under section 77 of the Local Government Act 1985 to direct the London Residuary Body to distribute all capital receipts to the London boroughs for the purposes of capital expenditure.

Mr. Chope: The Department is considering representations made in response to the revised draft order circulated for comment on 19 September 1986.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what items of expenditure by the London Residuary Body have been the subject of discussion with his Department since August 1985.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue a direction under section 65 of the Local Government Act 1985 to the London Residuary Body to require it to hold regular consultation with the London boroughs on matters of mutual concern.

Mr. Chope: No. The conduct of the day-to-day affairs of the London Residuary Body is a matter for it to decide. The London Residuary Body consults London boroughs as and when necessary.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions have taken place between his Department and the London Residuary Body concerning the shortfall in the income of the London Residuary Body between 1 April and 31 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: There have been no such discussions, and I am not aware of any such shortfall.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to lay before the House the annual report of the London Residuary Body; and if all the residuary bodies' reports will be laid together.

Mr. Chope: We expect that the annual reports of all the residuary bodies will be laid at the same time, early next Session.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has received the final formal submission of the accounts of the London Residuary Body for 1985-86 as required under section 78(5) of the Local Government Act 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: No.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the reply of 25 July, Official Report, column 559, what representations have been considered by his Department from interested parties in relation to borrowing by the London Residuary Body in 1986-87.

Mr. Chope: The Department has received no such representations, other than those from the London Residuary Body itself, about which I am answering other questions from the hon. Member today.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the hon. Member for Newham, North-West can expect a response from the chairman of the London Residuary Body to points raised in the debate on 23 May as promised in that debate and subsequently in letters from Ministers on 6 June and 6 August; and in the written answer of 25 July, Official Report, column 562.

Mr. Chope: I understand that the London Residuary Body will respond this week to the points raised.

LRB's recommendations to my right hon. Friend will be submitted in due course. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources he has made available to the Football League to assist in the campaign against hooliganism.

Mr. Tracey £3 million of public funding has been provided through the Sports Council since 1978 for schemes creating stronger links between football clubs and their communities. The longer term aim has been to discourage hooliganism by bringing fans, particularly younger ones, into closer association with clubs. The council works with the Football Trust. The trust's contribution has exceeded £1 million.

Schemes of this type also receive support from the community programme. A recent new pilot project involves the funding of 61 participants, at a cost of about £250,000, at six League clubs in the north-west. These clubs are operating pilot projects for the "Football in the Community" scheme developed by the Footballers Further Education and Vocational Training Society which is a joint Football League and Professional Footballers Association body. The Manpower Service Commission also funds, at a cost of about £2·5 million, 700 youth training scheme places at Football League clubs.

The Department expects to discuss these proposals with LPAC shortly. There will be wide public consultation on a draft of the guidance in due course.

On staffing, I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 21 October 1985 at column 105. Currently four posts in the unit are filled and a fifth will be filled shortly. The remaining two posts will be taken up as and when the need arises.

Mr. Chope: The operation of the Trust for London is the responsibility of its trustees. My right hon. Friend intends that £10 million should be made available to the trust by 31 March 1987.

International Garden Festival Site, Liverpool

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the future of the former Liverpool international garden festival site.

Mr. John Patten: Following the unfortunate collapse of Transworld Leisure plc the garden festival site is now back under the control of the Merseyside development corporation. Whilst the corporation considers the future of the site, it will continue to maintain the gardens to their customary high standard.

I can assure the people of Merseyside that at least the 45 acres of Riverside park will be open for them to enjoy next summer.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 25 July, Official Report, column 563, when his Department received a copy of the report by Messrs. Richard Ellis, chartered surveyors, and property consultants, on the disposal of county hall; and if he will now place a copy in the Library.

(2) if his Department was made aware of the contents of the first draft of the consultants' report by Messrs. Richard Ellis on the disposal of county hall;

(3) what discussions have been held between his Department and the London Residuary Body in the light of the report by Messrs. Richard Ellis on the future of county hall concerning (a) the structural condition of the complex, (b) possible disposal as accommodation for the private sector, (c) the separate disposal of buildings in the complex, (d) uses for the complex other than offices, (e) use of the main building as an hostel and (f) the marketing of the complex by Messrs. Richard Ellis, and the cost of such marketing;

(4) if his Department has been consulted about alterations, or adaption to the interior of county hall by the London Residuary Body; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The London Residuary Body has kept us informed in general terms about county hall.

ILEA (County Hall)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the continued occupation by the Inner London Education Authority of county hall.

Mr. Chope: The Government's policy is reflected in the abolition legislation, which gives the London Residuary Body the power to dispose of property it considers surplus. It is also empowered to terminate the occupation of any successor authority. The exercise of these powers is a matter for the LRB's discretion.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the increase in cost in money and percentage, respectively, of applying value added tax to sewerage services and water, on the basis sought by the Commission of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Peter Brooke: I have been asked to reply.

I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the increase in cost in money and percentage terms to private and public funds, respectively, of the application of value added tax to all new building and construction work, on the basis sought by the Commission of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Brooke: I have been asked to reply.

I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Museums and Galleries, Merseyside

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has had with the board of trustees of the national museums and galleries on Merseyside since its inception indicating which subjects were discussed.

Mr. Luce: I have been asked to reply.

I have formal or informal discussions from time to time with trustees of the national museums and galleries funded from the arts budget. Such discussions cover a wide range of subjects.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the names and occupations of the members of the board of trustees of the national museums and galleries on Merseyside.

Mr. Luce: I have been asked to reply.

Woolwich Ferry

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether any discussions have been held by his Department concerning disruption to the ferry service at Woolwich since 1 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I have been asked to reply.

As our agent for this ferry the London borough of Greenwich has had extensive discussions with the work force. The outcome of these discussions is reflected in normal working since mid-August.

Merseyside

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to make Merseyside a special development area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I have been asked to reply.

The category of special development area was abolished as a result of the major review of regional industrial policy which culminated in the statement in the House by my right hon. Friend the Member for Kingston upon Thames (Mr. Lamont), the then Minister of State, Department of Trade and Industry, on 28 November 1984. I have no plans to reintroduce it. But Merseyside will continue to enjoy maximum benefits available under its present status of a development area.

Golf Course (Occombe, Devon)

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider calling in the application to construct a golf course at Occombe, Devon.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 17 July 1986, c. 625]: Planning permission for the development had not in fact been given at that time. Accordingly, consideration was given as to whether my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State should call in the applications, but it was decided that such action was not justified. I apologise for misleading the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Prisoners (International Agreements)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries with which the United Kingdom has international agreements for the transfer of prisoners; and how many prisoners were transferred under these agreements showing which countries they were transferred to and of what crimes they had been convicted.

Mr. Eggar: The United Kingdom is currently party to one international agreement for the transfer of prisoners, the Council of Europe convention on the transfer of sentenced persons, which came into force for the United Kingdom on 1 August 1985. Other states which have ratified the convention are Austria, Cyprus, France, Spain, Sweden, Canada and the United States. At present 13 other States have signed the Convention with the intention of ratifying it in due course.

Between 1 August 1985 and 31 July 1986 there have been 12 transfers comprising two prisoners transferred from Sweden to the United Kingdom, nine from the United Kingdom to the United States and one from the United Kingdom to Canada. There have been none since. Of the 10 outward transfers, seven convictions were under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971, one under the Official Secrets Act 1911 and two under the Theft Act 1968. The two inward transfers were of persons convicted of drugs offences.

British Overseas Prisoners

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what visits to British prisoners in prisons in Thailand have been undertaken by diplomatic representatives in Bangkok in the last year.

Mr. Eggar: From 15 October 1985 to 14 October 1986 the staff of Her Majesty's embassy Bangkok made 70 consular visits to prisons. These entailed 125 meetings with individual British citizens and 499 meetings with individual British dependent territories citizens. Not included in the totals are visits to police stations to see citizens before they are committed to prison.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice and assistance is given to friends and relatives visiting prisoners abroad when they arrive at Her Majesty's diplomatic posts.

Mr. Eggar: Friends and relatives who wish to visit prisoners abroad should preferably give the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Consular Department advance notice of their plans. Current prison regulations could then be confirmed with Posts overseas and, if necessary, applications made for visits. Posts can also advise visitors on the best means of reaching the prison, whether and if so what prison comforts are allowed, timing and length of permitted visits and so on, and provide letters of introduction if required.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British prisoners are currently held in foreign prisons, analysed by country.

Mr. Eggar: According to the most recent survey there were, on 11 September 1986, to the best of our knowledge, 1,290 British citizens detained in prisons in the following countries:

Argentina	1
Australia	10

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice is given to Her Majesty's diplomatic representatives about contacting British prisoners in foreign gaols; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Standing instructions for British consular officers overseas are that British nationals, under arrest or detention, should be visited as soon as possible after their arrest or detention. Thereafter they should be visited at reasonable intervals, whether awaiting trial or serving a sentence (unless it has been made clear by the prisoner that visits are not required).

Chile

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has made any representations to the Government of Chile concerning the release of the organiser of the national days of protest in July; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We made representations on behalf of the European Community at the time of the July demonstrations concerning the deaths and injuries associated with them, and about the detentions of National Civic Assembly leaders. We welcome their release; and that of Ricardo Lagos and Andrea Palma, who were detained in September. We regret, however, the continued detention of German Correa and Rafael Maroto.

Visas

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Foreign an Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about British passport holders transitting United States airports without a visa; and what advice his Department gives to airline passengers about obtaining a transit visa or tourist visa for use on such occasions.

Mr. Eggar: We are aware of complaints from members of the public who have run into difficulties transitting United States airports without a visa. Although it is not for us to advise on the visa requirements of other countries, we have discussed this problem with the United States Embassy in London. Their advice is that while British passport holders may transit the United States without a visa, they can be certain of avoiding any obstacles by obtaining either a transit or a tourist visa in advance, both of which are free of charge.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state for each country concerned the average duration of a visa issued to visitors to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is not available. However, single entry visas now being issued are normally valid for presentation at a United Kingdom port within six months. Where a multiple entry visa is issued, this is now normally valid for up to two years.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries which require visas for visitors from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: On the latest information available the following foreign and Commonwealth countries require British citizens to obtain an entry visa before making a visit:

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state (a) the total number of applications for visas received by his Department in 1985 from intending visitors to the United Kingdom, from each country concerned and (b) the total number of such applications refused, from each country concerned.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested about applications and refusals is not readily available and can only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state the total cost to his Department in 1985 of processing applications for visas from intending visitors to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: The total cost to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office budget for entry clearance work worldwide in 1985 was £19 million. It is estimated that of this figure £7 million was for processing long-term entry clearances and £12 million for short-term entry clearances, which includes all visitors.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state, in respect of each country concerned, the average length of time taken by his Department in 1985 to process an application for a visa from an intending visitor to Britain.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department requires nationals of countries who require visas to visit the United Kingdom to make personal applications for such visas.

Mr. Eggar: Not in the great majority of cases. Many visas are issued as a result of postal applications.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he had with Commonwealth Governments prior to the decision to introduce new visa procedures for some Commonwealth states.

Mr. Eggar: No prior consultation took place. I informed diplomatic representatives in London of the Governments concerned of the new requirements on the day the decision was taken. At the same time Governments were informed by our missions in those countries. Subsequent discussions have taken place both in London and other capitals.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate, for each of the Commonwealth nations subject to new visa procedures, the number of applications for visas he expects in the year 1987 together with an estimate of the extra number of staff and costs incurred in each country.

Mr. Eggar: The estimated number of extra applications and extra entry clearance officers for the four Commonwealth countries is contained in the following table:

	Estimated number of extra applications for 1987	Estimated extra number of entry clearance officers
Nigeria	132,000	27
Ghana	25,000	4
India	149,000	22
Bangladesh	7,700	4

Start-up costs in these four countries is expected to be £6·3 million spread over financial years 1986-87 to 1988-89. Recurrent costs are estimated to be:

Nigeria	£8·3 million
Ghana	£0·6 million
India	£3·1 million
Bangladesh	£0·5 million for the 1987-88 financial year, making a total of £12·5 million.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many additional staff were on duty in Her Majesty's diplomatic missions in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh on 6 October to process applications for visas from intending visitors to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: None. Additional staff began arriving at posts shortly before visa requirement began on 15 October.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state (a) the number of applications received by his Department since 6 October for visas from nationals of India, Pakistan and Bangladesh, listing separately the number from each country, (b) the number of such applications from each country which were (i) granted, (ii) refused and (iii) still outstanding on 17 October and (c) in relation to each country the average length of time taken from application to grant of a visa.

Mr. Eggar: Information relating to applications made in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh is given in the following table. (Details of applications received outside those countries are not available centrally.)

Visit Visa Applications

	Received (6 October onwards)	Granted	Refused	Outstanding (as at 17 October)	Average time: application to issue
India	3,500	3,338	19	143	same day
Pakistan	1,218	1,166	25	27	same day
Bangladesh	195	172	23	—	same day

These figures discount the possibility that a very small number of nationals of one country may have applied in another.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff in addition to normal complement were in post on 14 October at Her Majesty's diplomatic missions in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh, to process applications for visitors' visas.

Mr. Eggar: On 14 October additional entry clearance staff in post were as follows: India, none; Pakistan, two; Bangladesh, one.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state the hours at which Her Majesty's diplomatic missions have been open since 6 October to receive applications for visas from visitors from India, Pakistan or Bangladesh.

Mr. Eggar: Missions in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh have been open since 6 October to receive applications for visit visas from nationals of those countries, as shown on the table.

Post	Hours open to Public	Office Hours
New Delhi	09.00—12.30	09.00—17.00
Bombay	08.00—11.30	08.00—16.00
Calcutta	09.00—12.30	09.00—17.00
Madras	09.00—12.30	09.00—17.00
Islamabad	08.00—12.30	Sunday/Monday 07.30—17.00 Tuesday/Thursday 07.30—14.10
Karachi	08.00—12.30	Sunday/Wednesday 08.00—13.30 Monday, Tuesday & Thursday 08.00—17.00
Dhaka	07.30—14.00	07.30—14.00

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement as to why the additional staff necessary for the administration of visas for visitors from India, Pakistan and Bangladesh were not available in Her Majesty's diplomatic missions in the days immediately preceding 15 October; and if he will state when they will be available.

Mr. Eggar: Intolerable pressures at Heathrow necessitated early implementation of the visa regimes. For logistical reasons it was not possible to deploy the extra staff allocated by 15 October. All but one will have arrived by the end of October.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement in relation to the conditions faced by applicants for visitors' visas at Her Majesty's high commission in New Delhi as a result of shortage of staff since 6 October.

Mr. Eggar: Up to 9 October numbers of applicants were easily manageable but on 13-14 October the immigration section was under pressure as applications rose to 166 and 157 respectively. On 15 October the new applicants' waiting area came into operation and conditions have now improved. Those applying for visit visas have on average been issued within 90 minutes.

Single European Act

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he now has concerning the establishment of courts of first instance under the Single European Act and in particular the locations of any such courts sitting in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Chalker: It will, in accordance with the Single European Act, be for the European Court of Justice to make detailed proposals to the Council about the work of the Court of First Instance. No proposals have yet been received. The Court of First Instance will not sit in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when and by what means Her Majesty's Government published and distributed the text of the decisions taken by representatives of member states of the European Services Community on the occasions of the signing of the Single European Act.

Mrs. Chalker: The Decision adopted by Ministers, meeting in the framework of European Political Co-operation, on the occasion of the signing of the Single European Act was placed in the Libraries of both Houses on 25 April 1986. It was published in the minutes of evidence that I gave to the Foreign Affairs Committee on 7 May 1986.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the proceedings of the new Courts of first instance of the European Communities, as authorised by the single European Act, will be open to the public.

Mrs. Chalker: Article 28 of the protocol on the statute of the Court of Justice provides that hearings before the court shall normally be in public. I would expect oral proceedings, of the new Court to be similarly open to the public.

Mr. James Abra

Sir Patrick Wall asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to obtain the release of Mr. James Abra from a Libyan jail.

Mr. Eggar: Mr. Abra's lawyer has lodged an appeal for a review of his trial and sentence. We are concerned about the prison sentence passed on Mr. Abra but we cannot intervene while the appeal remains pending. In spite of almost daily requests, both orally and in writing, no consular visit to Mr. Abra has yet been authorised.

USSR (Jewish Emigration)

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to the number of Jews who have been permitted to emigrate from the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in each month of 1986.

Mr. Renton: The number of Jews who have left the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in each month of 1986 are:

	Numbers
January	79
February	51
March	47
April	72
May	42
June	55
July	31
August	88
September	126

We regard these figures as unacceptably low.

British Overseas Visitors

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funds are disbursed on the welfare of British prisoners abroad.

Mr. Eggar: No official funds are provided but families and friends of prisoners abroad are welcome to deposit funds for prison comforts with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Consular Department which are made available to prisoners through our posts abroad. Some consulates are also able to call on funds from local charities to provide prisoners with basic necessities if required.

Diplomats (Children's Education)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what form assistance is given to diplomatic service members posted overseas to have their children educated at private schools in the United Kingdom; and what is the current maximum and minimum allowance given.

Mr. Eggar: All members of the Diplomatic Service who serve at posts overseas are eligible to apply for an allowance towards the costs of their children's boarding school education. The current maximum allowance is £1,695·19 per term for a boy at senior school. There are separate and lower allowances for girls' senior and boys' and girls' junior schools. The minimum allowance is £1,464·64 per term.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will publish a table showing the amount of financial assistance given to members of the Diplomatic Service towards their children's education at private schools in England and Wales since 1984, indicating (a) the names of the schools involved and the local education authority area they are situated in, (b) the amount of allowance spent on this education scheme at each of these schools and (c) the number of pupils involved in each school;

(2) if he will publish a table showing the amount of financial assistance given to members of the Diplomatic Service towards their children's education at private schools in Scotland since 1984, indicating (a) the schools involved and the region of Scotland they are situated in, (b) the amount of allowance spent on the education scheme at each of these schools and (c) the number of pupils involved at each school;

(3) how much has been spent in total on assistance to members of the Diplomatic Service to have their children educated at private schools in Scotland, while they are posted overseas in each year since 1981;

(4) how much has been spent in total on assistance to members of the Diplomatic Service posted overseas to have their children educated at private schools in England and Wales in each year since 1981.

Mr. Eggar: The detailed information is not available in the form requested and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost. I refer the hon. Member to the following six answers on the same subject:

Visitors

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any efforts were made through Her Majesty's diplomatic missions abroad to warn intending visitors to Britain of the likelihood of congestion at Heathrow airport on the days immediately preceding 15 October; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The degree of congestion at Heathrow airport immediately preceding 15 October was not anticipated.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he can make of the cost of living on St. Helena compared with the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: Living conditions on a small and remote island such as St. Helena are very different from those in the United Kingdom. A comparison between the costs of living in St. Helena and the United Kingdom could not therefore be achieved without a calculation of a new United Kingdom index based on the cost of living in St. Helena.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he can make of the percentage increase in the cost of household goods after they have been transported to St. Helena from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: Informal estimates suggest that goods overall are 30 per cent. more expensive after transport. However, within this average a number of high volume household items, such as canned and paper goods, are markedly more expensive. St. Helena has no value added tax; but import duties and mark-up on non-food items offset this.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he can make of the present percentage of electors on St. Helena able to stand for election to the Legislative Council.

Mr. Eggar: Local estimates indicate that about 40 per cent. of the present registered electors would be eligible to stand for election.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to lower the voting age to 18 years on St. Helena.

Mr. Eggar: The matter is being considered by St. Helenians in the context of the need for constitutional reform.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many St. Helenians are on the electoral roll at present on St. Helena; how this compares with three years ago; and what estimate he can make of the total population eligible for inclusion on the roll.

Mr. Eggar: The number of St. Helenians currently on the electoral roll is 1,644. The figure for 1982 was 1,704. The estimate of the total population eligible for inclusion on the roll is 3,345.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether asbestos is still used in the construction of dwellings in St. Helena.

Mr. Eggar: After careful consideration of the report produced in 1984 by the hon. Member and my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, East (Mr. Sayeed), the St. Helena Government continue to use asbestos cement corrugated roofing sheets on Government built dwellings. The introduction of stringent safety precautions and work practices has reduced the health danger to a level judged by the island's chief medical officer as minimal. The use of alternative roofing materials has been discounted on technical, financial and suitability grounds.

Ascension Island

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in limiting the numbers of feral cats on Ascension Island.

Mr. Eggar: Ascension Island services are currently undertaking a second cat cull for 1986. Additional cat traps were obtained this year and to date number of feral cats destroyed are:

	Number
1st cull (February—May)	173
2nd cull (1st half October)	58
	231

SOCIAL SERVICES

Mental Health

4. Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he is satisfied with the operation of the present legislation governing the treatment of mental health patients; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The Mental Health Act has been in operation for just three years and, in general terms, it is working well. My right hon. Friends, the Home Secretary and the Secretary of State for Social Services, are currently seeking views on options for amending the present legislation as regards the treatment of psychopathically disordered offenders and on proposals for procedural changes within the existing statutory provisions. Other amendments have been suggested, and will be considered, but the 1983-84 changes are still very recent.

Hospital Patients

12. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients were treated in National Health Service hospitals in the most recent year for which figures are available; and how this compares with the figure for 1978-79.

Mr. Fowler: In 1985, National Health Service hospitals in England treated some six and a third million in-patient cases, 960,000 day cases, and 37·4 million out-patient cases. That is nearly one million more in-patient cases, 400,000 more day cases, and almost three and a half million more out-patient cases than in 1978.

Health Authorities (Services)

13. Sir Reginald Eyre asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about health authorities' plans for developing and improving services to patients in the coming year.

Mrs. Currie: Regional health authorities' programmes for 1986-87, which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State approved last March, set out plans for a significant expansion and improvement of patient services. As my hon. Friend knows, in 1985 health authorities treated 6,350,000 in-patient cases — an increase of nearly a million since 1978, and 960,000 day cases—an increase of 400,000. They are planning a further increase of 180,000 in-patient and day cases in 1986-87. The number of out-patient attendances in 1985 stood at 37,400,000, an increase of no less than 3,300,000 since 1978, and health authorities are planning a further increase of 370,000 in 1986-87.

Limited List Prescribing

14. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has any plans to amend the operation of the selected list of medicines available on prescription.

Mr. Newton: No.

NHS Finance

15. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much more money, in real terms, is being spent on the National Health Service in the current year than in 1978-79; if he will provide a breakdown of where this additional money is being spent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Spending on the National Health Service in England has increased from £6·4 billion in 1978-79 to £15·6 billion in 1986-87. That is an increase in real terms of 24 per cent. Patients ad staff in all parts of the service and in all areas of the country are benefiting. The additional resources have contributed to the employment of more doctors and nurses in the hospitals, more general practitioners, to major increases in the number of patients treated and to the greatest sustained hospital building programme ever.

22. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is yet able to make any estimate of the outturn expenditure of the social security budget for the current financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: An estimate of outturn on the social security programme in this financial year will be included in the autumn statement of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

25. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about funding of the National Health Service in London, with particular reference to the resource allocation working party formula.

Mr. Newton: The resource allocation working party formula seeks to ensure equal access to services for people in equal need by reducing historical disparities in provision between regions as far as possible, and also responding to population movements. The RAWP formula itself is currently under review to ensure that it does measure relative need for services as fairly as possible. Wide-ranging consultation ended on 30 June and we are expecting an interim report later this year.

29. Mr. Jessel asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the review of the resource allocation working party system.

Mr. Newton: Wide-ranging consultation on the review ended on 30 June. We are expecting an interim report later this year.

30. Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make a further statement on resources available to the Leicestershire district health authority under the National Health Service.

Mr. Newton: I am glad to confirm that the Leicestershire district health authority's revenue allocation has increased by over one-third in real terms since 1978-79. I would expect further increases as a result of continued progress towards the Government's aim of ensuring an equitable distribution of National Health Service resources across the country.

Liverpool

16. Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the level of provision for the National Health Service care and facilities in inner Liverpool.

Mrs. Currie: There is a good story to tell. While the population has declined substantially from 527,000 in 1978 to 494,000 in 1985, revenue cash allocations to the Liverpool health authority have increased each year to the present level of £140·5 million. As a result, the number of patients treated has increased from 100,000 in 1978-79 to 108,000 in 1985/86. Additionally, more than £30 million in capital is currently being invested in the city. The waiting list has fallen from 11,951 in 1978 to 8,147 in 1986.

Hospital Waiting Lists

18. Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he is taking to reduce hospital waiting times in Yorkshire.

Mr. Newton: We are determined that the Health Service will not only continue to treat increasing numbers of patients but that it will also treat them with the promptness which they have the right to expect. That is why my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently announced a three-year drive to reduce the time people have to wait for diagnosis and treatment. All regional health authorities, including Yorkshire, have been asked to prepare plans for action and to report back by the end of this month.

Supplementary Benefit

19. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claims for supplementary benefit have been made in the past 12 months.

Mr. Lyell: The latest available figures are for the year ending April 1986. In that period there were nearly 6 million claims for supplementary pensions or allowances.

21. Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people were claiming supplementary benefit in the north-west of England at the latest available date; and how this compares with the figure for October 1979.

Mr. Lyell: A total of 781,573 people were receiving supplementary benefit in the Department's north-west region on 13 August this year (the latest figure available). The present region did not exist in 1979 but the comparable figure for August 1979 was 494,277.

31. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people are now in receipt of supplementary benefit in Coventry.

Mr. Lyell: Coventry is covered for social security purposes by the Department's offices at Coventry (east) and Coventry (west). The total number of people receiving supplemenatry benefit from those two offices on 13 August 1986—the latest available figures—was 41,603.

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action.

40. Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the latest figures for the average length of time taken to deal with claims for supplementary benefit.

Mr. Lyell: During the four weeks ending on 26 August this year, the average time taken to deal with a fresh claim for supplementary benefit was seven working days.

NHS Land and Property

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much money will be released from the sales of health authority land and property: and to what extent health authorities will be able to benefit from this directly.

Mrs. Currie: It is estimated that in the current financial year £130 million will be received from the sale of surplus National Health Service land and property. All of this money will be retained by health authorities for the direct benefit of the Health Service.

Severe Weather Payments

23. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has any plans to change the eligibility rules for the payment of exceptionally severe weather payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: Proposals for a new system of severe weather payments have been referred to the Social Security Advisory Committee. Final decisions on new regulations will be taken in the light of its report.

Warnock Report

24. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what further repreentations he has received about the implementation of the Warnock report.

Mr. Newton: I am fully aware of both continuing concern and widely differing views about the issues dealt with in the Warnock report.

General Managers (Pay)

26. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the proposed salary increases for general managers within the National Health Service.

Mr. Newton: As has already been announced, general managers in the National Health Service are to receive pay increases averaging 5·9 per cent. from 1 September 1986. This followed a review of the general managers' pay rates in the light of general pay movements in the National Health Service, and the increases are in line with those movements. Authorities in the National Health Service have been informed.

North-West Regional Health Authority

27. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the north west regional health authority about the future funding of the authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: We have frequent discussions with chairmen and general managers of all regional health authorities on funding for the National Health Service, including the Northern regional health authority. We are firmly committed to the principle of equitable distribution of resources and, as regions approach their targets, it is important that these reflect relative need as fairly as possible. The review of the RAWP formula, which is currently under way, is looking at the scope for improving measurement of need and has included wide-ranging consultations with health authorities and other interested parties. It is too soon to speculate on the outcome of the review but we expect an interim report later this year.

Wrightington Hospital

28. Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he will be in a position to make a statement about the proposed closure of the children's ward at Wrightington hospital, Lancashire.

Mr. Newton: I hope to make an announcement shortly.

Rents

32. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from organisations representing rent officers regarding issues arising when rents are paid by housing benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: None. However the Institute of Rent Officers submitted evidence to the independent housing benefit review in 1984.

Day Nurseries

33. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to how many new day nursery places have been provided by social services departments since 1979.

Mrs. Currie: It is estimated that between 1979 and 1986 the number of day nursery places provided by Social Services Departments in England increased by over 500. The numbers for each year are given in the table.

Day nursery places provided by Social Services Departments in England 1979 to 1986

As at 31 March	Number (thousands)
1979	28·3
1980	28·4

1985	28·9

[1] The figure given for 1986 is a provisional estimate based on returns from 83 per cent. of local authorities.

NHS Waiting Lists

34. Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his latest information about regional variations in National Health Service waiting lists.

Mr. Newton: Copies of the national and regional summaries of in-patient waiting list statistics at 30 September 1985, the latest available, have been placed in the Library. Corresponding figures for 31 March 1986 will be available shortly.

AIDS

35. Mr. Sumberg asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what reactions he has so far received to his Department's public information campaign on acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Newton: Detailed research is being conducted to measure both the effectiveness and the public acceptability of the campaign. The results so far are generally very encouraging. There is almost unanimous support for the Government's campaign. The advertisements have been widely read and understood and only a very small percentage of people have found them in any way offensive or distasteful.

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the monthly figures for the number of acquired immune deficiency syndrome patients and the number of deaths from acquired immune deficiency syndrome notified to his Department over the last three years.

Mr. Newton: Monthly cases and deaths from acquired immune deficiency syndrome by date of reporting to the Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre over the last three years are as follows:

	Number of cases	Number of deaths
1983

In addition there were 24 cases including 11 deaths reported between the introduction of the surveillance system in 1982 and October 1983.

Disabled and Long-Term Sick Persons

36. Mr. Brandon-Bravo asked the Secretary of State for Social Services by what percentage in real terms spending has increased since 1978-79 on cash benefits for the disabled and long-term sick.

Mr. Major: A total of 55 per cent., on the basis of the latest estimate of expenditure for 1985-86.

Benefits

37. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about the latest figures for the take-up of benefits by people aged 16 to 25 years.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Single Payments

38. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the latest figures for the average length of time taken to deal with claims for single payments.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that this information is not available. However, claims are determined as soon as possible after all the information required has been collected, urgent claims being given priority.

Mortgage Interest Payments

39. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has had any further representations on the proposal not to meet mortgage interest payments in full in the first six months of unemployment.

Mr. Lyell: We have now received the Social Security Advisory Committee's report on the proposals. Its comments and recommendations are being considered, and we shall announce the final decision in due course.

Benefits (Non-householder Addition)

41. Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has had any further representations on the effect of the removal of the non-householder addition.

Mr. Lyell: We have had no representations on the effect of the removal of the non-householder addition from supplementary benefit for new claimants aged under 25 since the provision was introduced on 28 July 1986.

Urgent Needs Payments

42. Mr. Ewing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the latest figures for the average length of time taken to deal with claims for urgent needs payments.

Mr. Lyell: These claims are almost invariably determined on the day they are made.

Surrogacy Arrangements Act 1985

43. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a further statement on the operation to date of the Surrogacy Arrangements Act 1985.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the statement in the Official Report, columns 806-807, 1 July if he will make a statement on his review of the case for amending legislation to the Surrogacy Arrangements Act 1985.

Mr. Newton: I am unable to add to the reply my predecessor gave my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Bruinvels) on 1 July at column 806. If it is shown that the act is ineffective the need to amend it will be considered.

Bed and Breakfast Accommodation

44. Mrs. Shields asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received any representations concerning accommodation with three beds for elderly people which is also being used as bed and breakfast accommodation.

Mrs. Currie: No; but 13 representations have been made about the fact that residential care homes with fewer than four residents in all do not have to be registered with local authorities under the Registered Homes Act 1984.

Kidney Transplants

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proposals he has to increase the availability of matching tissue for kidney transplants.

Mrs. Currie: Increasing the number of cadaveric organs becoming available for transplantation is a major priority. A study is being undertaken which seeks to provide a more accurate estimate of organs potentially available for donation and to identify the reasons why a proportion of them are not in practice made available; the findings will enable us to devise better strategies for increasing the supply.

The Royal College of Physicians has now agreed to establish a working party to consider the introduction of a voluntary code of practice under which doctors would agree to ensure that, whenever a patient died who was clinically suitable as an organ donor, the relatives were asked for their permission for the organs to be removed. We are continuing to promote the donor card scheme and to support national and local initiatives. We are also monitoring developments, in consultation with representatives of professional and voluntary bodies, and considering with them how matters might best be taken forward.

Irradiated Food

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will introduce regulations to ensure the clear labelling of irradiated food; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: We have no plans at present for further amendments to the Food (Control of Irradiation) Regulations, 1967, which in effect prohibit the process and the importation and marketing of irradiated foods for general use. In due course, we will consider the "Report on the Safety and Wholesomeness of Irradiated Foods" by the Advisory Committee on Irradiated and Novel Foods which has advised that food irradiated up to an overall average dose of 10 kilogray is safe for human consumption. The report included a recommendation by the Food Advisory Committee that irradiated foods and food containing irradiated ingredients should be clearly indicated as such throughout manufacture and at the point of sale.

Measles and Whooping Cough Vaccine

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans his Department have to improve the uptake of measles and whooping cough vaccine.

Mrs. Currie: I am glad to say that the uptake rate in England and Wales for vaccination against measles improved from 63 per cent. in 1984 to 68 per cent. in 1985 but further improvement is essential if children are to be spared the avoidable distress and disability arising from this disease. A meeting of experts will be held next month under the aegis of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation to consider afresh what steps might best be taken to achieve this.

On whooping cough, the chief medical officer and chief nursing officer wrote to all doctors and nurses on 21 July 1986 urging them to take what further steps they could to increase uptake levels. They pointed out that epidemics of this disease need not recur if an adequate level of immunity in the population could be attained.

The incidence of both diseases is kept under constant review, and we shall be considering what further action needs to be taken in the light of advice from the JCVI and others.

Students (Hull)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the total number of students registered at the Oriel and Brittania House branches of his Department in Hull seeking supplementary benefit in the months of July, August and September, respectively;

(2) how long it took to process each student applicant of supplementary benefit at the Hull branch of his Department for the months of July, August and September, respectively;

(3) whether he will assign further staff to work on student applications for supplementary benefit at the two Hull offices of his Department;

(4) what was the average number of staff employed by his Department in assessing student applications for supplementary benefit at the Hull offices of his Department for the months of July, August and September, respectively.

Mr. Lyell: The table sets out the total number of supplementary benefit claims received from students at the Oriel and Brittania house local offices in the months of July, August and September. Records are not kept of the time taken to process each claim. However, the estimated average processing times for student claims during the months concerned were 12 working days at Brittania house and 13·5 working days at Oriel house.

Student claims received

	Hull (Oriel house)	Hull (Brittania house)
July	400	1,091
August	46	221
September	70	184
Total	516	1,496

The staff resources allocated to the Department's Hull offices include an element for assessing students' claims but no records are kept of the number of staff employed on the work. There are no specific plans to increase the number of staff dealing with these claims which is largely of a seasonal nature.

Doctors (Conduct)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what statements he has made since 1 July concerning the remedies available to the General Medical Council in respect of conduct of registered medical practitioners which they find unacceptable; what action he has taken; and what further steps he intends to take.

Mr. Newton: Since 1 July my right hon. Friend has not had occasion to make a statement on this matter. We continue to keep in touch with the General Medical Council on the effect of its revised guidance issued last year which effectively widened the scope of what constitutes serious professional misconduct.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to introduce legislation to provide the General Medical Council with statutory powers to take remedial action in respect of registered medical practitioners whose conduct their professional conduct committee has judged unacceptable.

Mrs. Currie: The General Medical Council has statutory powers to take remedial action in respect of registered medical practitioners whose conduct its professional conduct committee has judged serious professional misconduct. In exercising those powers in 1985 the committee, according to the General Medical Council's annual report, considered 53 cases. The names of 13 doctors were erased from the medical register; eight doctors were suspended from the register; conditions were imposed on the continued right to practise of two doctors; three cases were adjourned to 1986 and a further 12 doctors were found guilty of serious professional misconduct and were admonished or the cases otherwise concluded. We have no present plans to extend the council's disciplinary powers but we will continue to discuss with the council any possible problems in this area.

Asylum Seekers (Benefits)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the number of asylum seekers in receipt of supplementary benefits and single payments for each year since 1982.

Mr. Lyell: No separate records are kept of claims to benefit from asylum seekers.

Cervical Screening

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list, for each district health authority, the number of smear tests for cervical cancer screening which are currently delayed and the number of weeks' work which this backlog represents in each case.

Mrs. Currie: All health authorities were told in January this year to give priority to ensuring that laboratories can meet demand and avoid backlogs which should not regularly exceed one month's work. Regions were asked to report the number of districts that, as at 31 March 1986, were served by laboratories that were not meeting this requirement and the action being taken to improve matters.

The information supplied is set out as follows. Regional health authorities will be ensuring that remedial action is taken before they report to us again. Information on the number of smears at individual laboratories is not collected centrally.

District health authorities served by laboratories in which the backlog of cervical smears was reported by exceeding one month's work as at 31 March 1986

Prescription Charges

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the total administrative costs involved in prescription charges and the exemption certificate system, with a full breakdown of the total.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information on which to base a reliable estimate is not available.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether, in the light of paragraph 3.2.5 of the MRC 1986 corporate plan, he will establish at least one new centre for the study of and care of patients who have Alzheimer's disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: It is for the Medical Research Council, which receives a grant-in-aid from the Department of Education and Science, to decide whether a centre for research into Alzheimer's disease should be established. The recognition of this need in its 1986 corporate plan is welcomed, as is the council's known attachment of some priority to meeting it. The care of people suffering from Alzheimer's disease, and the provision of support for relatives and other carers, are important matters for health and social services authorities to consider when planning and providing a comprehensive range of local mental health services in accordance with Government policy.

Dental Research Projects

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report in tabular form details of all dental research projects currently supported by his Department together with the name of the researcher, the location at which the work is being carried out and the total cost of each project.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is in the following table:

Health Authorities (Staff Accommodation)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his reply, Official Report, column 527, 12 March, he will now state the names of any district health authority in England which has taken legal action to require staff to quit accommodation owned by them, or which has withdrawn any such application.

Mr. Newton: On 23 May 1986 at columns 693-696, my right hon. Friend the Member for Brentford and Isleworth (Mr. Hayhoe) repeated the assurance that nobody would be made homeless as a result of the rationalisation of National Health Service residential accommodation. He went on to say that if other circumstances arose which made it necessary for an authority to consider giving notice to quit, it must first seek the Department's approval. A circular adivsing health authorities of these arrangements was issued in June 1986.

In the four months since these arrangements were introduced, the Department has agreed eviction in 11 cases, in the following health authorities: Hounslow and Spelthorne, Barking Havering and Brentwood, Bloomsbury (three cases), Kingston and Esher, North-West Surrey (three cases), Winchester and Solihull.

Over the same period, the Department has agreed that notices to quit may be issued in 63 cases as a means of assisting the tenant to secure local authority housing, on condition that eviction should not proceed unless and until that alternative accommodation is available. The health authorities concerned were: Hampstead, Barnet, North-West Hertfordshire, Riverside (four cases), Brent, Paddington and North Kensington (14 cases), Bloomsbury (five cases), Enfield, North-East Essex, Croydon, Mid Surrey (three cases), North-West Surrey (10 cases), Kingston and Esher, South-West Surrey, East Surrey (two cases), Southampton and South-West Hampshire, Isle of Wight, Basingstoke and North Hampshire, Rugby and Stockport.

Drug Abuse

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what progress he has made with his advertising campaign to warn young people of the dangers of drug abuse; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The campaign of education and information on drug misuse which has been running since February 1985 has been carefully evaluated. The reports of the campaign evaluation have been placed in the Library. The results indicate that the campaign has been achieving its aims of improving levels of information and hardening attitudes towards heroin. In particular evaluation shows:

—that the campaign has been widely noticed by young people
—that a greater proportion of young people were aware of the physical and social consequences of heroin misuse —that fewer young people saw heroin as attractive or glamorous
—that a greater proportion (94 per cent. after the first year of the campaign compared with 83 per cent. before) of young people said that they would refuse an offer of heroin.

We are continuing to monitor the effects of the campaign.

Earnings Rule

Mr. Cash asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons over the age of 65 years have the earnings rule applied to them.

Mr. Lyell: The rule applies to women aged 60-64 and men aged 65-69. An estimated 3,500-4,000 people are affected. A further 100,000 people are estimated to be deferring retirement, probably because they would be affected by the earnings rule.

These figures are based on 1982-83 survey data. Up-to-date information should be available in early 1987.

Azidothymidine

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether Azidothymidine has been approved for clinical trials on acquired immune deficiency syndrome patients in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: All information provided to the licensing authority in connection with applications made under the Medicines Act 1968, including clinical trial applications, is, under the Act, treated as confidential by the Department. But in this case, the company concerned has agreed that the Department should indicate that it had already applied to carry out trials under the clinical trials exemption scheme set up under the Act and that the licensing authority had agreed.

In addition, section 9 of the Medicines Act 1968 provides exemption from the licensing requirements to enable a doctor to administer an unlicensed medicinal product to a particular patient of his. Information on the availability of this drug for such use would be a matter for the supplier.

Hospital Building Programme

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services of the £3 million hospital building programme, what proportions are represented by (a) planning, (b) design and (c) construction; how many projects at the construction stage will be completed in each of the next 15 years, what is the value of the construction to be completed in each of these years; how many of these projects in each year are hospitals and how many are smaller projects; and how many of the planning and design projects, respectively, are expected to start in each of the next 15 years.

Mr. Newton: Infromation held centrally on the 380 schemes in the programme, which totals almost £3,000 million, shows that 54 per cent. are at the planning stage, 23 per cent. are being designed and 23 per cent. are under construction. Information on the 88 schemes currently under construction is set out in the table:

Year Due for Completion	Number of Schemes	Estimated—Total Cost (building and engineering works and estimated fees and equipment) (£ million)	Hospitals or [1]Phases of Hospitals	Smaller Projects
1986	16	70	5	11
1987	50	289	23	27
1988	21	230	15	6
1989	—	—	—	—

[1] New hospital developments are usually accomplished in phases.

Detailed information on the anticipated dates for the start of construction of schemes at the planning and design stages is not held centrally, but it is estimated that about 75 per cent. of these schemes will start on site by 1990 and the remainder by 1994.

Health Districts (Performance)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the 70 indicators of performance used to compare health districts since 1983; and if he will set out a table illustrating the performance of each health district in accordance with each indicator.

Mr. Newton: The Department first published performance indicators (PIs) in book form in 1983. A national summary plus 14 regional books provided values and ranks for 145 PIs for every district health authority in England. Copies of these booklets are held in the Library. The indicators covered activity, finance, manpower and estate management and were based on 1981-82 data. A list of these indicators was given in the reply from my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Rushcliffe, (Mr. Clarke) to my hon. Friend the Member for Halifax (Mr. Galley) on 9 July 1984 at columns 408-411. This initial set of PIs was revised and expanded and in July 1985 a new package of PIs based on 1983-84 data was issued to every health authority in England. There are 421 PIs in this new package which cover acute services, services for children, the elderly, the mentally ill, mentally handicapped, support services, manpower and estate management. A table listing them has been placed in the Library.

The values and ranks for these indicators for every district health authority and many hospitals are contained on floppy discs to run on microcomputers. In December 1985 PIs based on 1984-85 data were issued; 1985-86 PIs will be issued this December. Presentation of the indicators on microcomputers allows easy access to the values for any district health authority. Full advantage is taken of graphical displays to facilitate comparisons between health authorities.

Copies of the computer-based PI package are held in the statistics section of the Library.

ENT Treatment (Barnsley)

Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will itemise in the Official Report the number of patients within the Barnsley health authority awaiting ear nose and throat treatment, specifying urgent and non-urgent cases, (a) all cases, (b) cases on the list for more than one month and (c) cases on the list for more than one year.

Mr. Newton: A copy of the most recent publications of waiting list statistics is in the Library. It shows that at September 1985 there were no urgent cases on the waiting list for admissions to ear, nose and throat beds in Barnsley. There were 295 non-urgent cases, none of which had been waiting for more than a year.

Disabled People

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many representations about cases of alleged discrimination against disabled people he has received in each of the years 1980 to 1985 and in the first nine months of the current year; how many such allegations were proved; and what action he took in each case;

(2) if he will list those organisations of disabled people he has consulted during the current parliamentary Session; and what subjects were discussed in each case.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations he has received concerning discrimination against disabled people in employment; what plans he has for combating it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: I have been asked to reply.

I have received no such representations recently.

We are continuing to promote vigorously to employers the code of good practice on the employment of disabled people. Over the next year, the Manpower Services Commission will undertake research into the numbers and characteristics of disabled people in the working population which will help us to decide whether the quota scheme can be made more effective.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the expenditure level of family practitioner services each year since 1970; what has been the percentage change each year; and what percentage of total National Health Service expenditure is represented by general medical services for each of these years.

Mr. Newton: The figures requested are given in the table.

Radiotherapy Department (Southend)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) when he expects to announce his decision on the proposal of the North-East Thames regional health authority to close the radiotherapy department in Southend; and what criteria he takes into account in making decisions on such proposals;

(2) how many letters he has received from the general public on the proposal to close Southend's radiotherapy cancer unit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I shall let my hon. Friend have replies as soon as possible.

Regional Health Authorities (Gifts)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will issue guidance to regional health authorities on the propriety of their receiving gifts from district health authorities conditional on specialist facilities being located within their district; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Southend Health Authority

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to require the North-East Thames regional health authority to make good the underfunding of the Southend health authority on the basis of the resources allocation working party formula; and what has been the total of this underfunding over the past five years.

Mr. Newton: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Radiotherapy Facilities

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidance he has provided to regional health authorities about the minimum numbers of new patients requiring radiotherapy treatment which should be the basis of an area radiotherapy unit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

ENVIRONMENT

Tree Planting

37. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what initiatives his Department is taking to encourage tree planting and the success of National Tree Week from 29 November to 7 December.

Mr. Waldegrave: We welcome National Tree Week and fully support the Tree Council's efforts to promote the planting, care and maintenance of amenity trees throughout the country. To that end we are making the council a grant of nearly £16,000 in 1986-87. The Countryside Commission has its own grant-aid scheme and expects that nearly 2 million trees will be planted with its financial assistance this year. The Department's own planting programme by the Property Services Agency and within the royal parks will continue. We have also in hand several arboricultural research projects.

Dangerous Wild Animals Act

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now list in the Official Report the fees charged by each local authority in England and Wales for the issuing of a licence under the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976.

Mr. Waldegrave: I would refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on Wednesday 21 November 1985, at column 259.

Community Charge

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is his estimate of the number of tax units gaining and losing in the first year of transition from domestic rates to the community charge as set out in figure J5 and the number of tax units gaining and losing with full replacement of domestic rates by the community charge as set out in figure J8 of the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" when these numbers are recalculated on the basis of existing social security arrangements;

(2) what is his estimate of the number of households gaining and losing in the first year of transition from domestic rates to the community charge as set out in figure J4 and the number of households gaining and losing with full replacement of domestic rates by the community charge as set out in figure J7 of the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" when these numbers are recalculated on the basis of existing social security arrangements.

Mr. Chope: The recalculated estimates of the numbers of households and tax units in Great Britain gaining and losing from the introduction of the community charge, assuming existing social security arrangements, are set out in the following tables:

Table 1: number of households gaining and losing in the first year of transition from domestic rates to the community charge (comparable to figure J4 in the Green Paper Cmnd. 9714 "Paying for Local Government");

Table 2: as for table 1 but for tax units (comparable to figure J5);

Table 3: number of households gaining and losing with the full replacement of domestic rates by the community charge (comparable to figure J7);

Table 4: as for table 3 but for tax units (comparable to figure J8).

(Note: in Annex J of the Green Paper, the numbers in figures J4, J5, J7, and J8 were rounded to the nearest 25,000. The numbers in these tables have not been rounded but should not be taken to imply a higher standard of accuracy).

The tables incorporate the assumptions set out in paras. J7-J11 of "Paying for Local Government" except that under both the present rating system and with the community charge it has been assumed that the present social security arrangements are in existence. The benefit rates used were those as at November 1985, deflated to a 1984-85 price level.

The tables illustrate what the impact of replacing domestic rates by the community charge might have been in a past year — 1984-85 — under the existing social security arrangements. In future years, both the pattern of local authority spending and household characteristics will have changed so that the gains and losses may be rather different from those illustrated here. In addition, the proposals contained in "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691) will have been implemented. The tables in annex J are therefore a fairer reflection of the likely impact of our proposals.

Acid Rain

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the effect of a reduction in sulphur emissions by the Central Electricity Generating Board on (a) acidity of Scandinavian lakes and (b) plant damage.

Mr. Waldegrave: It is difficult to quantify the effect of a reduction in CEGB sulphur dioxide emissions on the acidity of Scandinavian lakes because they are only a small part of the total emissions affecting Scandinavia and because the process by which deposited sulphur compounds are transformed in the soil are complex. The recent decision in principle to retrofit flue gas desulphurisation equipment to three major power stations should result by 1997 in a reduction of sulphur deposition between about 1 and 2 per cent. of today's total depositions in Scandinavia.

I am not aware of any evidence of plant damage having been caused by current levels of CEGB sulphur dioxide emissions.

Secondary Mortgage Market

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to publish his report on the operation of the secondary mortgage market.

Mr. John Patten: I announced on 11 June that I had established a working group to examine the secondary mortgage market. I expect to receive the group's first report shortly.

Local Authorities (Compulsory Tendering)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to extend compulsory tendering by local authorities beyond those services referred to in the Green Paper "Competition in the Provision of Local Authority Services"; how he intends to consult interested parties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Government have not yet finally decided which activities should be included in legislation to extend compulsory competitive tendering by local authorities. We do not, however, see a need for further formal consultations following the many responses we received to last year's consultation paper.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will estimate the increase in cost in money and percentage terms to private and public funds, respectively, of the application of value added tax to all new building and construction work, on the basis sought by the Commission of the European Economic Community;

(2) if he will estimate the increase in cost in money and percentage, respectively, of applying value added tax to sewerage services and water, on the basis sought by the Commission of the European Economic Community;

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 21 October 1986]: The Government do not accept the Commission's contention that the sixth VAT directive requires the imposition of VAT on sewerage services and water. If they did, however, the increase in cost would depend on the rate imposed.

PRIME MINISTER

South Africa

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister on what basis, with what frequency and for what purpose, information has been exchanged between Her Majesty's Government and the United States Administration concerning the role of the African National Congress in relation to events in South Africa; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: We exchange information regularly with the United States Administration on a wide range of subjects, including South Africa.

Higher Education and Industry

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister why Her Majesty's Government have not yet replied to the report of the working group on improving research links between higher education and industry; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government's response to the working group's report was contained in "The Development of Higher Education into the 1990s" (Cmnd. 9524), published in May 1985. That Green Paper drew attention to the importance for both higher education and industry, of improved links between them, commended examples of good practice in this field and announced measures to promote more effective and profitable collaboration.

Norway

Mr. Parry asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on her visit to Norway.

The Prime Minister: I visited Norway on 11 and 12 September at the invitation of the Norwegian Government. I had useful talks with the Norwegian Prime Minister which underlined the close friendship between Britain and Norway and our co-operation in many fields, including defence and North sea oil. I was able to inform the Norwegian Government of new measures we have taken to reduce sulphur dioxide emissions from British coal-fired power stations. I also visited Tromso in northern Norway and NATO installations near Oslo. I was honoured to have an audience of His Majesty King Olav V.

Aircraft Industry

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Prime Minister what practical support and encouragement the appropriate Departments in Her Majesty's Government are giving to sustaining and expanding the work force and the high technology involved in (a) the airframe, (b) the avionics, and (c) the power plant aspects of the British aircraft industry; what estimates have been made of the contribution of the aircraft industry to the United Kingdom's balance of payments; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Department of Trade and Industry and the Ministry of Defence are giving practical support and encouragement to the aircraft industry in many ways, including (in the Department of Trade and Industry's case) the provision of launch aid to British Aerospace for the Airbus A320, to Rolls-Royce for the V2500 engine and to Westland for the EH101 helicopter. The avionics industry benefits indirectly from this support. In addition, the Department provides funding under its civil aircraft and aero-engine R and D budget which is designed to assist the industry to maintain and develop its technology base, and individual companies are eligible for various types of selective financial assistance.

The Ministry of Defence's policy is to procure defence equipment by competitive means whenever practicable and reasonable in order to get the right equipment for the armed forces and the best long-term value for money for the taxpayer. Procurement choices are made in the light of all the factors which are relevant to obtaining long-term value for money, including the defence benefits of maintaining particular industrial capabilities. The Defence Ministry believes that operating this way will not fragment or weaken our defence industries but on the contrary strengthen them and increase their competitiveness.

In 1985 the United Kingdom exported £3,752 million of new aerospace equipment. This represents 4·8 per cent. of all United Kingdom visible exports and a surplus of exports over imports of £1,180 million.

EMPLOYMENT

Wage Rates

40. Mr. McKelvey asked the Paymaster General what is his latest estimate of the number of firms paying workers less than wages council minimum rates in (a) Ayrshire and (b) Kilmarnock and Loudoun; and how many subsequent prosecutions have taken place since June 1983.

Mr. Trippier: No estimates of the numbers of firms paying workers less than the wages councils' minimum rates have been made. However, Wages Inspectorate statistics for 1985 show that 19 per cent. of all establishments checked in the Scotland (west) division of the inspectorate, which includes Kilmarnock and Loudoun, were underpaying one or more of their workers. This figure is not representative of all firms covered by wages councils because the inspectorate tends to concentrate on the firms more likely to be underpaying.

Statistics are not collected for areas smaller than Wages Inspectorate divisions.

No firms in the Scotland (west) division have been prosecuted since June 1983 for offences under wages council legislation.

Maternity Leave

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General if he will state the percentage of women leaving work to have a baby who returned to work after taking maternity leave, in the latest year for which such figures are available.

Mr. Trippier: I regret that this information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Sunday Trading

Mr. Wareing asked the Attorney-General what plans he has to seek to take action against the owners of shops who are acting in contravention of the Sunday trading laws.

The Attorney-General: Section 71 of the Shops Act 1950 places the duty to enforce the Sunday trading provisions on local authorities. Those authorities have power to prosecute offenders and, where appropriate, to institute proceedings to have offenders restrained by injunction from further contravention of the law. These powers are sufficient to enable local authorities to fulfill their statutory responsibility and are used throughout England and Wales. The existence of these powers does not derogate from my general power to seek the enforcement of obedience to the law and, if the public interest so requires, it is open to me to bring proceedings "ex officio". I have taken the view that at present no action on my part is required but I am continuing to monitor the situation and have asked for the help of the Association of District Councils in doing so.

Illegitimacy

Mr. Wareing asked the Attorney-General what plans he has to reform the illegitimacy laws; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Government have accepted the recommendations of the Law Commission in its first report on illegitimacy (Law Com. No. 118), as subsequently modified in its second report (Law Com. No. 157). The Government plan to introduce legislation to give effect to the Law Commission's recommendations at the earliest possible opportunity.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Badgers

Mr. Marland asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how he intends to define the problem areas for the purposes of badger control operations as envisaged in the Dunnet report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My right hon. Friends the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretary of State for Wales have recently given thought to those recommendations in Professor Dunnet's report relating to the definition of areas in which there has been a recent history of herd breakdowns attributed to infected badgers, where we would propose to undertake badger removal operations automatically in the event of future otherwise unexplained herd breakdowns.

With the benefit of advice from the consultative panel we have defined the 183 parishes listed, mainly in the south-west of England, within which such control action would take place. However, as we have previously made clear, such control action would be limited to at most the area of the breakdown farm and would only be initiated once all other possible non-badger origins of infection had been investigated and ruled out. Outside the "problem" parishes, as Professor Dunnet recommends, control operations would only proceed with the prior agreement of the consultative panel.

My right hon. Friends have also considered the need to retain statutory powers to kill badgers in the problem areas. Taking account of the control strategy now in place we are not convinced of the case for retention of these powers and believe that, without risk to the wider TB eradication programme, it will be possible for future badger control operations to proceed by voluntary agreement with the occupiers of the land concerned. We therefore intend to revoke the Badgers (Control Areas) Order 1977.

Sheep Compensation Scheme

Sir Hector Monro asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how he proposes to pay the fees and expenses of assessors appointed under the Sheep Compensation Scheme 1986 as envisaged in his announcements of 13 August and 10 September.

Mr. Gummer: Parliamentary approval of new subheads to cover this new service will be sought in Winter Supplementary Estimates for class IV, vote 4, class XVI, vote 2 and class XVII, vote 2. Pending that approval urgent expenditure will be financed by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund. In the case of class XVI, vote 2, the new subhead and advance from the Contingencies Fund will also cover the costs of the emergency testing services undertaken by the Scottish Office.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Rolls

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many pupils entered the first form in maintained secondary schools in (a) England and Wales and (b) Leicestershire in September 1986, September 1983 and September 1979.

Mr. Dunn: Information on the number of pupils entering maintained secondary schools in England is not collected on a regular basis. The nearest approximation is the numbers of pupils aged 11 or under in secondary schools; these are given for Leicestershire and England for January 1980, 1984 and 1986.

Figures for Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

[3] January 1986 figures are provisional.

A and O-level Passes

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will provide comprehensive figures detailing the number of passes attained in A and O-levels in the summer of 1986 and in each of the past five years giving the percentage of the numbers actually taken.

Mr. Dunn: Information on the 1986 summer examinations is not yet available. Figures for the years 1981 to 1985 are as follows:

Deaf People

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has had from the Royal National Institute for the Deaf; what reply he is sending; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The chief executive of the institute has written recording the institute's recognition of the potential benefits of the in-service training route for specialist teachers of the deaf, stressing the need to ensure an adequate supply of trained teachers through this route and proposing a meeting to discuss how to encourage teachers to take up the training opportunities available to them. The reply from my predecessor sets out our intention to ensure sufficient in-service training in this field through the new training grant scheme. The chief executive and education officer of the institute met officials of the Department last Friday.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many places allocated to initial teacher training in special needs are currently filled by student teachers of the deaf; how many teachers of the deaf in training now are funded by full secondment from their local education authority; how many teachers of the deaf are receiving training in 1986 on full-time courses.

Mrs. Rumbold: There are currently two courses of initial teacher training for teachers of the deaf, both at Manchester university. One is a four-year undergraduate course, to which intakes in 1983, 1984 and 1985 were 28, 28 and 27 respectively. The other is a one-year postgraduate course to which the intake in 1985 was 10. The numbers of students admitted to training in the academic year 1986-87 are not yet available.

Information on the number of student teachers of the deaf on full secondment from a local education authority is not available. 86 students beginning a course of training to teach the deaf in 1985 were employed in maintained schools or institutions of further education.

120 student teachers of the deaf began full-time courses of training in 1985.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will ensure that the new arrangements to fund the training of teachers of the deaf will be reviewed 12 months after they have been introduced.

Mrs. Rumbold: Yes.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how many places he envisages funding for training for teachers of the deaf through the in-service pooling arrangements;

(2) if he intends to issue advice to local education authorities regarding the number of places earmarked through the in-service pooling arrangements for training of teachers of the deaf.

Mrs. Rumbold: Funds will be available in 1987-88 to support the present level of in-service training. The arrangements for administering the allocations covering the academic year 1988-89 and later will also take account of the need for additional in-service training to replace the initial teacher training for teachers of the deaf which will then be being phased out.

Pre-school Provision

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list for each local education authority in England at the latest date for which figures are available the number and proportion of three and four-year-olds attending (a) nursery classes, (b) nursery schools, (c) play groups, and (d) total pre-school provision; and what are the waiting lists in each case.

Mr. Dunn [pursuant to his reply, 25 July 1986, c. 523.] The number of pupils aged under five receiving education in January 1986 in (a) nursery classes of maintained primary schools (b) nursery schools and (c) all under-fives in maintained schools, together with the proportion these represent of the three and four-year-old population, are given in the table.

The Department does not collect information on the number of pupils aged under five on waiting lists for pre-school education.

Places in play groups and day nurseries and places with child minders are provided by local authority social services departments and not by local education authorities. Some information is collected by the Department of Health and Social Security, but not precisely in the form requested. The number of premises and places, the number of places per 1,000 children aged under five and the waiting lists in each authority in England are given in "Children's Day Care Facilities at 31 March 1984, England" (A/F84/6), copies of which are available in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Trade Statistics

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will bring up to date the figures given in reply to a question on 21 March 1978, Official Report, column 543, showing the ratio of the increase in manufactured export prices to the corresponding increase in wholesale prices, using trade in 1980 as a base.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is in the following table:

Comparisons of changes in export unit values and producer price indices (manufactures)

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will bring up to date the figures given in reply to a written question, Official Report, 18 November 1976, column 697, showing the index figure for trade competitiveness each year and the rate of growth of imported manufactures relative to the growth of exported manufactures.

Mr. Alan Clark: Volume growth rates for trade in manufactures are in the following table. Because the previous answer covered total trade growth rates, the series are taken back to 1963.

Wolverhampton Group of Steel Companies

Mr. Cash asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answers of 3 June, Official Report, column 409, to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) concerning the Wolverhampton Group of Steel Companies, on what date representations were last received by him from the former managing director and principal shareholder; and what response he made.

Mr. Howard: Between 12 July 1984 and 28 February 1985 representations on behalf of the former managing director and principal shareholder of the Wolverhampton Group of Steel Companies were received by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, by the Attorney-General, and by Her Majesty's Treasury, from the hon. Member for Calder Valley (Mr. Thompson) in whose constituency he resides. The response was that no case for compensation to be paid by the Crown to the companies concerned or to their former managing director and principal shareholder could be sustained and I have no reason to take any other view.

Airbus

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many firm orders and options had been placed for the A320 aircraft as at 17 October; whether any financial support given by Her Majesty's Government will be recovered; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: As at 17 October 1986, 134 firm orders and 131 options had been placed for Airbus A320 aircraft. In addition, other commitments for up to a further 152 A320 aircraft had been made at that date under letters of intent, memoranda of understanding or other agreements.

The launch-aid being provided to British Aerospace in respect of its participation in the A320 programme is recoverable by a combination of payments on a fixed timescale in 1990-92 and levies on aircraft sold. In terms of the eventual recovery of the Government's investment the level of firm orders, options and other commitments presently held is very encouraging for an aircraft not scheduled to enter airline service until spring 1988.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions have taken place between his Department and British Aerospace in relation to supporting the proposed A330 and A340 Airbus; what priority his Department gives to active British participation in future developments of such larger civil aircraft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: My Department has maintained close contact with British Aerospce as the Airbus Industrie proposals for the Airbus A330 and A340 have evolved in recent months. An application from British Aerospace for launch-aid in respect of the proposed A330-A340 programme was received earlier this week and will be carefully considered.

Manufactured Goods

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the balance of trade in manufactured goods between the United Kingdom and each of the EEC six states in 1972 and in 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is in the following table.

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for the United Kingdom and for each of the European Economic Community countries, the change in the ratio of export unit values for manufactures to the wholesale price of (a) manufactures and (b) consumer prices between 1956 and 1985, 1966 and 1985 and 1976 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 25 July 1986, c. 614]: Data for 1956 and certain other years for some of these countries are not readily available. The information is in the following table.

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year from 1956 the United Kingdom share of world trade in manufactures in terms of volume and value, respectively.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 25 July 1986, c. 613]: Information on shares in volume terms for years prior to 1963 is not readily available. The other United Kingdom shares of the main manufacturing countries exports of manufactures are in the following table.

Engineering Goods

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will bring up to date the figures showing particulars of production and trade in engineering goods in certain countries given in the reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 26 November 1979, Official Report, column 489.

Balance of Payments

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what he expects the United Kingdom's balance of payments on current account to be during 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Economic prospects for 1987 will be outlined in the Chancellor of the Exchequer's autumn statement later this year.

Quality and Standards

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress in the United Kingdom in quality and standards since the 1982 White Paper "Standards, Quality and International Competitiveness," Cmnd. 8621.

Mr. Pattie: My right hon. Friend today published an illustrated booklet entitled "Quality Counts" setting out the Government's role since 1982 in encouraging the adoption of modern quality techniques and improvements in the creation, and use, of standards relevant to the needs of British industry. A copy of the booklet has been sent to all hon. Members today.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Foreign Nationals (Electoral Register)

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make an estimate of the number of citizens of the Republic of Ireland who, being resident in the United Kingdom, are registered as electors on the current electoral register.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On the basis of the numbers of persons who reported that they were citizens of the Irish Republic in the most recent labour force survey, it is estimated that nearly half a million citizens of the Irish Republic aged 18 and over were usually resident in the United Kingdom in mid-1984. It is not known how many of them were on the electoral register; there is no requirement for applicants for electoral registration to state their citizenship—nationality.

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report a list of the Commonwealth and other countries whose citizens if resident in the United Kingdom are entitled to register as electors; and if he will indicate those countries on the list who allow British citizens who are residents to register as electors in those countries.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Citizens of all Commonwealth countries and citizens of the Irish Republic are entitled to register as electors in the United Kingdom. As at September 1982, the latest date for which information is readily available, the Commonwealth countries listed allowed all other Commonwealth citizens, including those who are now British citizens, to vote at their elections. In addition, British citizens may vote at elections in the Irish Republic.

Antigua and Barbuda

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further information he has about the use of illegal drugs in Her Majesty's prisons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury St. Edmunds (Sir E. Griffiths) on 24 July 1986, at column 397.

Released Prisoners (Reconvictions)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide such information as is available of the number of prisoners released on licence from life sentences who are (a) convicted for another offence, (b) convicted of murder and (c) convicted of any other grave offence; if he will give the actual percentage rate for reconviction and also parallel figures for non-lifer prisoners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Information on the reconviction of those released on life licence in the years 1974 to 1984 is published in "Reconviction and recalls of life licensees", Home Office statistical bulletin, issue No. 22/86. Of the 807 persons released on licence in the period 1974-84, four had been reconvicted of murder by the end of 1984. The other figures requested are given in the bulletin (tables 2 and 3 and paragraph 14).

Mr. John Stalker

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent findings by Mr. Colin Sampson, chief constable of West Yorkshire, into the affairs of Mr. John Stalker, deputy chief constable, Greater Manchester police.

Mr. Hurd: Mr. Sampson submitted his report on his investigation to the Greater Manchester police authority on 14 August. The police authority later decided not to initiate disciplinary proceedings against Mr. Stalker, and advised him to be more circumspect in his political and criminal associations.

I asked for observations from those principally concerned so that I could be fully aware of all the aspects of the case and consider whether there were any lessons to be learnt for the investigation of any future allegations against senior police officers.

I have also considered whether a further inquiry should be undertaken into the origin of the allegations against Mr. Stalker, having regard to continued speculation that the allegations were linked in some way to the Royal Ulster Constabulary and to the inquiry which Mr. Stalker was then conducting and which is nearing completion under Mr. Sampson's leadership. However, Mr. Sampson was aware of that speculation but found no evidence to substantiate it. Moreover, a further inquiry at this stage could be prejudicial to any criminal proceedings which might follow from the inquiry which Mr. Sampson is now conducting in Northern Ireland.

Police Advisory Board

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Police Advisory Board first began to consider the question of non-police organisations wearing diced hat bands; at how many of its meetings this item has been on the board's agenda; why no conclusions on this issue have been reached; and when he expects the board to make recommendations to him.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This was first considered at the meeting of the Police Advisory Board's standing committee on conditions of service on 25 January 1985 and it has been on the agenda for the five subsequent meetings of that committee. There has been some difficulty in establishing the extent to which it presents a national problem but I expect the committee to reach a conclusion at its next meeting in January 1987.

Prisoners (Escort)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the police staff associations were consulted before his Department circulated proposals for the police to take over from the prison service responsibility for escorting prisoners between courts and prisons; what representations he has received from the Association of Chief Police Officers, the Police Federation and the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis; and how and when he intends to implement this proposal.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have invited the views of the police staff associations and the Metropolitan police on the recommendations affecting the police in the report of a joint scrutiny by the Home Office and the Lord Chancellor's Department of prisoner escort tasks. Consultations on these recommendations are still in progress and the decision whether or not to implement is dependent on the outcome.

National Reporting Centre

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the National Reporting Centre has been re-named the Mutual Aid Co-ordination Centre; and if, to avoid confusion, he will now revise the initials MACC that now apply to military aid to the civil community.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The title was changed to the Mutual Aid Co-ordination Centre as a result of a recommendation by the Association of Chief Police Officers following its review of the policing of the NUM dispute. I do not consider there is likely to be confusion over the change of title.

Detoxification centres

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department why he has ceased to fund the two experimental detoxification centres.

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Mr. Murphy) on 20 November 1985, at column 167.

Police (Health Protection)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements have been made to protect police officers from infections arising from (a) prisoners or arrested persons suffering from infectious diseases, hepatitis B and acquired immune deficiency syndrome, (b) hypodermic needles seized from drug addicts, and (c) sharp instruments including syringes and razor blades.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Arrangements for protecting police officers while on duty from infectious diseases such as AIDS and hepatitis B are an operational matter for chief officers of police to consider. Guidance on appropriate precautions against specific infections is issued from time to time by the Association of Chief Police Officers on the basis of expert medical advice and the situation is kept under constant review.

Police Complaints Authority

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average length of time taken by the Police Complaints Authority to resolve complaints against police officers in which it has intervened.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: For cases completed in September 1986 the average time taken by the Police Complaints Authority to consider complaints investigation reports forwarded to them by police forces together with proposals in respect of disciplinary action against the officer or officers concerned was 37 days.

South America (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent visit to South America of the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Putney (Mr. Mellor).

Mr. Mellor: I visited Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador and Colombia from 6 to 19 September to assess the scale and likely development of cocaine production and trafficking. I met senior members of their Governments, including the President of Bolivia, and representatives of law enforcement agencies as well as other individuals and organisations concerned with the drug problem. I was impressed with the degree of commitment and awareness which I found, but saddened and concerned at the scale of the problem and the paucity of resources to tackle it. The visit was welcomed by all those I met in demonstrating United Kingdom and European commitment and concern. The Government are reinforcing that message by providing contributions to the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control for law enforcement support activities in the region and by meeting a number of requests for bilateral assistance. The visit was particularly valuable in laying the basis for future co-operation with the four Governments and we are most grateful for their contributions to its success.

European Drugs Task Force

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the United Kingdom's European Economic Community partners about the setting up of a European drugs task force to combat the traffic in illegal narcotics; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: On 20 October I chaired a meeting of Community Ministers in London, at which we agreed that the Community and its member states have a major role to play in stepping up the fight against drug abuse. We agreed upon a seven-point plan which would be pursued in conjunction with the Council of Europe's Pompidou group, covering:

(i) measures to reduce demand for drugs, especially among young people;
(ii) measures to improve the treatment of addicts and rehabilitation services;
(iii) ensuring that bilateral and Community aid supports as appropriate a recipient country's efforts to combat drug abuse;
(iv) steps to ensure that legislation takes account of the need to maintain effective control over illicit drug trafficking, particularly at the Community's external frontiers;

(v) mutual enforcement of confiscation orders relating to drug traffickers' assets;

(vi) enhanced co-operation between law enforcement agencies involving exchange of drug liaison officers between member states, the posting of drug liaison officers to other countries and the establishment of a world-wide directory of those involved in the fight against drug abuse — this would be achieved by inviting Trevi to examine the scope for creating a co-ordinated network of drug liaison officers to monitor developments in producer countries;

(vii) preparation of joint assessments by Community ambassadors in drug producing countries in order to ensure a steady flow of recommendations for action by the Twelve.

Ministers did not discuss the setting up of a European drugs task force; this would be for the Commission to propose if it considered that it fell within Community competence.

Women Prisoners (Pregnancy)

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many women detained in Her Majesty's prison, Holloway experienced complications necessitating transfer to a general hospital during pregnancy in each month of the current year;

(2) how many women detained in Her Majesty's prison, Holloway experienced pregnancy which ended in the death of the foetus before full term during each month of the current year;

(3) how many women in custody in England experienced pregnancy which ended in the death of the foetus before full term during each month of the current year;

(4) if he will state the number of infant deaths occurring among children delivered to women during the term of their imprisonment in England for each month of the current year;

(5) how many women were pregnant in Her Majesty's prison, Holloway for each month during the current year.

Mr. Mellor: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Visa and Immigration Officers

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what he estimates to be the cost of the training and placement of visa or immigration officers at Heathrow airport; and what is the minimum, the average and the maximum cost of the employment of a visa or immigration officer at Heathrow airport.

Mr. Waddington: The information readily available is as follows. On first appointment immigration officers undergo 10 weeks training comprising a six-weeks recruit course followed by four weeks desk training. Throughout this period they receive the basic salary in the range of £5,605-£10,188, plus allowances. The average cost per place of non-residential courses at the immigration service training unit at Harmondsworth is of the order of £200 a week. Interviewing passengers from a number of countries, including in particular the Indian subcontinent, also requires the service of interpreters.

Immigration (Members' Representations)

Mr. Norris asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes he proposes to make in the guidelines on the handling of representations by Members of Parliament in immigration cases.

Mr. Hurd: The change will substitute the following for paragraph 3 of the present guidelines:

"Representations to the Minister

3. A Member wishing to submit representations in the case of a passenger refused entry may request the Minister's Private Office, or, out of working hours, the Home Office Duty Officer, to arrange for the removal of the passenger to be deferred. If the passenger was refused entry because he did not have the required entry clearance under the Immigration Rules action to remove him will not automatically be deferred. If the passenger wishes to come to the United Kingdom he should apply abroad for the required entry clearance. In other cases action to remove the passenger will normally be deferred for a period of 12 working days to enable the Member to submit written representations.

Note

An entry clearance may take the form of a visa, an entry certificate (for non-visa Commonwealth citizens) or a letter of consent (for all other non-visa nationals). Visa nationals require a visa whatever the purpose of their journey here. All other nationals require an entry clearance when coming for work, settlement, marriage leading to settlement or as a dependant of one of these categories."

Copies of the amendment have been placed in the Library and are available also in the Vote Office.

Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984

Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he has made for the 1986 review of the operation of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984.

Mr. Hurd: Sir Cyril Philips, who was appointed in 1985 to carry out the annual review of the prevention of terrorism legislation, has had to give up this work because of other commitments. I am glad to say that Viscount Colville of Culross has accepted my invitation to carry out this annual review.

Iran and Iraq (Visitors)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many citizens of (a) Iran and (b) Iraq have been admitted to the United Kingdom in each of the years 1981 to 1986; and for what reasons they visited the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: Information on the numbers of passengers admitted to the United Kingdom by nationality and purpose of journey is published annually in table 1 of "Control of Immigration: Statistics, United Kingdom" (Cmnd. 8533, 8944, 9246, 9544 and 9863 for the years 1981 to 1985 respectively). Corresponding figures for 1986 will be published in 1987.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state the number of people claiming supplementary benefit in South Yorkshire ad at each of the offices of his Department serving the Wentworth constituency in 1979 and at the latest available date, the percentage change this represents, the percentage change in the number of staff dealing with this benefit and the total number of staff employed in these offices in 1979 and at the present time.

Mr. Lyell: South Yorkshire is covered by 13 of the Department's offices (Rotherham North, Rotherham South, Sheffield South-East, Sheffield South-West, Sheffield North-East, Sheffield North-West, Barnsley West, Barnsley East, Wath on Dearne, Doncaster East, Doncaster West, Mexborough and Goldthorpe). Mexborough and Goldthorpe are national insurance offices and do not deal with supplementary benefit.

Wentworth constituency is covered by Rotherham, North and Wath on Dearne offices. The boundaries of the offices are not conterminous with the boundary of the constituency.

Comprehensive figures are not available before 1982-83 and information on the number of individuals who claimed supplementary benefit is not available in the form requested.

The information that is available is as follows:

	Number of new-repeat claims to supplementary benefits (including unsuccessful)			Number of people[1] receiving supplementary benefit

Direct comparisons between numbers of staff and claims are misleading as workloads vary considerably by type and duration of claim and the action that has to be taken. All these factors vary over time as a result of legislative, policy and procedural changes. Examples of such changes are the introduction of housing benefit and postal claim forms.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give the numbers of people receiving supplementary benefit in each of the 36 metropolitan districts for each year from 1979 to 1986;

(2) if he will give the numbers receiving supplementary benefits per thousand head of population in each of the 36 metropolitan districts for each year from 1979 to 1986;

(3) if he will list the numbers of children in each of the 36 metropolitan districts who are dependent upon supplementary benefit claimants for each year from 1979 to 1986;

(4) if he will list the numbers of children dependent upon people receiving supplementary benefit per thousand head of population in each of the metropolitan districts for each year from 1979 to 1986.

Mr. Major: I shall let the right hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Residential Homes

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the number of private residential care homes for the elderly operating in the East Midlands; if he will list them by district, giving the number of residents in such homes by district; and if he will also give comparative information for Leicestershire, and also in total the number of such homes and the total number of residents in England and Wales.

Mrs. Currie: The analyses available centrally relate to shire counties and the latest information for England is given in the table. The figures for Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Doctors and Dentists Review Body (Recommendations)

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what discussions he has had with the relevant professions about the implementation of the recommendations of the Doctors and Dentists Review Body.

Mr. Newton: My right hon. Friend normally meets representatives of the medical and dental professions each year to inform them of the review body's recommendations and explain the Government's response. The last such meeting took place on 22 May. Subsequently, detailed proposals for implementing the recommendations in full from 1 July 1986 were accepted by the professions.

Wheelchairs

Mr. Cash asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many electrical wheelchairs for disabled persons have been withdrawn from service which had been supplied by his Department and were in need of repair or replacement over the last 12 months.

Mr. Major: Information is not held in the form requested. In the 12 months to 30 June 1986 a total of 2,829 electrically powered indoor wheelchairs were withdrawn from service (against 11,706 on issue), but information is not held centrally as to what proportion of these were withdrawn for repair or replacement, and what proportion were withdrawn for other reasons such as the need for a different model, voluntary relinquishment or the death of the user.

Mentally Handicapped Children

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many mentally handicapped children remain in long-stay hospitals;

(2) when he expects his Department's information paper on mentally handicapped children in long-stay hospitals to be published;

(3) if he will set a date for letting all mentally handicapped children out of long-stay hospitals and into appropriate community facilities; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he will meet representations from Exodus, the organisation pressing to bring mentally handicapped children out of long-stay hospitals; and if he will make a statement;

(5) when he last consulted with regional health authority chairmen about transferring all mentally handicapped children from long-stay hospitals to the community; and what conclusions were reached;

(6) how many mentally handicapped children have been transfered from long-stay hospitals to the community in each of the last seven years; and if he is satisfied that adequate community provision has been made for them.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the right hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Departmental Offices, Liverpool

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if a decision has yet been reached on the relocation of his Department's offices at Parthenon drive, Liverpool; which interested parties have been consulted; what representations he has received about the matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: It has been decided to rehouse the Department's office at Parthenon drive, Liverpool in alternative accommodation which has recently been obtained at Stopgate lane, Liverpool. Adaptation work will now proceed quickly to ensure that the unsatisfactory premises currently occupied by the local office can be vacated as soon as possible.

Local Members of Parliament were consulted. Only one representation has been received — from the hon. Member himself — asking whether the office could be resited nearer to its present location. This has not proved possible.

Other interested parties are being advised of the resiting of the office.

Alternative Medicine

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on his policy towards the use of alternative medicine; and if he has any plans to establish a regulating body to control its practitioners.

Mrs. Currie: Medical practitioners in the National Health Service can offer any form of treatment, including alternative medicine, which they consider to be in the interests of their patients and which they feel competent to provide. Practitioners of alternative medicine who work outside the National Health Service are at liberty to offer their services privately, subject to the provisions of statute and civil law. We have no present intention to establish a regulating body to control its practitioners.

Social Security Convention (Canada)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what progress is being made towards a social security convention with the Canadian Department of Health and Welfare to enable pensions payable to British pensioners residing in Canada to be uprated; and what the annual cost of such uprating would be.

Mr. Lyell: The Government have accepted the case in principle for a social security convention with Canada which would include uprating United Kingdom pensions in Canada.

Officials of the Department and of the Canadian Department of Health and Welfare have held discussions on the preparatory technical matters. Such a convention, however, would involve extra expenditure for the United Kingdom to which we cannot at present be committed. The cost of paying full index-linked United Kingdom pension to pensioners in Canada at November 1985 rates is estimated to be over £35 million a year. The cost of paying only the pension increases due after any convention came into effect is estimated at about £4·8 million in the first year, rising year by year until all British pensioners are being paid at full United Kingdom rates. Consequently, we cannot say when we shall be able to make further progress towards a new social security convention with Canada.

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what, in the light of the recent European Court of Justice ruling in the case of Miss Marshall v. South West Hampshire area health authority, he plans to do to ensure that occupational pension schemes do not discriminate against women on grounds of either their sex or their part-time working.

Mr. Major: The Sex Discrimination Bill currently before Parliament would make it unlawful for a woman to be dismissed on grounds of age when a man of the same age and in comparable circumstances would not. This complies with the ruling of the European Court of Justice in the case referred to. The Government are considering the whole question of equal treatment for men and women in occupational pension schemes in the light of the recent European Community directive.

Orthodontic Treatment (Leicester)

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how long outpatients have to wait for an appointment at the orthodontic department of Glenfield hospital, Leicester.

Mr. Newton: The information is not available centrally. The hon. and learned Member may wish to write to the chairman of the Leicestershire district health authority.

Disabled Persons

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those organisations of disabled people he has consulted during the current parliamentary Session; and what subjects were discussed in each case.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 21 October 1986]: The Department has consulted extensively with a large number of organisations representing disabled people on a wide range of issues during the current parliamentary Session. To prepare a complete list of the organisations involved and the subjects discussed would be a major task and could not be justified, on the ground of disproportionate cost.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Stamp Duty

Mr. Heddle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the amount of stamp duty collected on conveyances which are subject to a mortgage under section 57 of the Stamp Act 1891 for each of the last five years;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the number of cases where stamp duty has been collected on conveyances which are subject to mortgages in accordance with section 57 of the Stamp Act 1891 for each of the last five years;

(3) if he will publish in the Official Report the cost to the Exchequer of collecting stamp duty on conveyances which are subject to mortgages under section 57 of the Stamp Act 1891 for each of the last five years.

Mr. Ian Stewart: A conveyance subject to a mortgage is only one of a variety of circumstances in which section 57 of the Stamp Act 1891 provides for ad valorem stamp duty to be charged on the conveyance of property. The Inland Revenue does not keep separate records of cases which concern mortgages, or indeed records of section 57 cases as a whole separately from others. I regret therefore that I cannot provide my hon. Friend with this information.

Personal Taxation (Green Paper)

Mr. Wareing asked the Chancellor of Exchequer what recent representations he has received concerning the effects on married women of proposals contained in the Green Paper on personal taxation; what his response has been; and if he will make such representations available in the Library.

Mr. Norman Lamont: We have received a wide-ranging response to the Green Paper and are now studying all the comments very carefully. As responses to the Green Paper are regarded as confidential they will not be made available in the Library, but it is open to those who have commented to make public their own response, and I understand a number of organisations have already done so.

Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Dorrell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the latest meeting of the European Community's Economic and Finance Council.

Mr. Lawson: The Economic and Finance Council met in Luxembourg on 13 October. I chaired the meeting and my hon. Friend the Minister of State represented the United Kingdom.

The Council discussed the Commission's proposal for a further tranche of investment project finance for small and medium-sized firms in the Community under the new Community instrument facility. The Council will return to this topic later in the year.

The Council had a useful discussion on budgetary discipline and Community spending on agriculture. The context of the discussion was the latest Commission assessment that there will be a substantial overrun of agricultural expenditure in 1987 and the long-term problem of restraining common agricultural policy expenditure.

There was general agreement in the Council and with the Commission on the urgency and seriousness of the situation. I tabled some Presidency conclusions which received general support in the Council, though the German, Greek and Danish delegations expressed some reservations.

These conclusions provided that, with a view to bringing expenditure under better control, avoiding the production of surpluses for which markets cannot be found and opening the way for a more structured approach to disposal of existing stocks, forthcoming policy decisions should, while respecting the principles set out in article 39 of the treaty, have regard to the following principles:

(i) Community support prices should more closely reflect supply, demand and market conditions, especially in sectors where there is surplus production;

(ii) the intervention system should operate according to its intended role, as a safety net to support the market at times of particular pressure and not as a standard alternative marketing outlet;

(iii) price support policies should wherever possible be flexibly operated so that commercial risks are not borne in their entirety through public finance.

Budget Council

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the latest meeting of the European Economic Community Budget Council.

Mr. Brooke: Further to my answer of 25 July, at column 461, the Budget Council reconvened in Brussels on 8 to 9 September. As before, I served as chairman and my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary represented the United Kingdom.

The Council continued its discussions on the Commission's preliminary draft budget proposals for 1987. The Council also considered the Commission's preliminary draft amending budget for 1986 and amending letter for 1987.

The Council took note of the serious situation revealed by the Commission's communications whereby there is likely to be a revenue shortfall in the 1986 budget which could have serious implications for the resources available in 1987. The Commission undertook to provide later in 1986 more precise data on revenue and expenditure. The Council urged the Commission to take all possible measures to ensure that expenditure is reduced in an equitable way, while taking account of the Community's obligations and avoiding the slippage of expenditure to 1987.

The Council agreed by a qualified majority to establish a draft budget for 1987. The United Kingdom formed part of the qualified majority. Italy abstained. Portugal and Ireland voted against.

The draft budget respects the 1987 reference framework set by the ECOFIN Council in April, and is fully consistent with the budget discipline conclusions agreed by the Council in December 1984.

The expenditure proposed by the Council totals 35,946 million ecu (£22,552 million[1]) of payment appropriations and 36,945 million ecu (£23,179 million) of commitment appropriations. The Council proposed 22,961 milliom ecu (£14,406 million) of payment and commitment appropriations for agricultural guarantee expenditure; this is consistent with the 1987 budget discipline guideline for agricultural expenditure. It proposed 4,103 million ecu (about £2,574 million) in payment appropriations for other compulsory expenditure (somewhat below the limit in the 1987 reference framework). It also proposed 8,881 million ecu (£5,572 million) of payment appropriations and 9,855 million ecu (£6,183 million) of commitment appropriations for non-compulsory expenditure. These increases, which amount to 4·05 and 3·73 per cent. respectively, are within half the 1987 maximum rate of 8·1 per cent.

On the revenue side, the draft budget proposals imply that the highest rate of VAT paid by member states other than the United Kingdom and Germany would be 1·3445 per cent., while the United Kingdom's rate would be 0·7784 per cent. Provision is made for the United Kingdom to benefit from a VAT abatement of 1,633 million ecu (£1,025 million), in accordance with the abatement system agreed at the Fontainebleau European Council. The Council noted that revenue changes in 1986 would increase substantially the United Kingdom's share of VAT payments and thus our subsequent entitlement to abatement. The Council agreed that, to the extent that this abatement increase was not taken into account in the 1987 budget, the Council would include provision for it when establishing the 1988 draft budget.

The draft budget has now been forwarded to the European Parliament. The Parliament is expected to vote on its first reading of the budget in the week beginning 10 November.

[1] All figures converted at the 1987 Budget exchange rate of £1 = 1·5939 ecus.

Inland Revenue (Cash Limit)

Mr. Sackville asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he is proposing any change in the Inland Revenue's cash limit for 1986-87.

Mr. McGregor: Yes. The cash limit for class XIX, vote 7 — Economic and Financial Administration (Inland Revenue) — will be reduced by £1,600,000 to £958,817,000. This reflects expenditure which will be accounted for by the Property Services Agency on a programme to rationalise local Inland Revenue offices. The Inland Revenue's running costs target is not affected.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Spearing asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the actual and percentage increase in the cost of fuel and power by the imposition of value added tax on the basis sought by the Commission of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 21 October 1986]: The Government do not accept the Commission's contention that the sixth VAT directive requires the imposition of VAT on fuel and power. If they did, however, the increase in cost would depend on the rate imposed.

TRANSPORT

Road Repairs and Maintenance

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has yet received a copy of the Horne report on road repairs and maintenance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Horne report on public utilities' street works was published in November 1985. I announced the Government's response to the report on 24 July at column 455. The Gaffney report on structural highway maintenance was published on 21 July 1986 along with the Department's initial response.

Ministry of Transport Tests

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many appeals against the withdrawal of authorisation to conduct Ministry of Transport tests were considered in the last annual period for which figures are available; and what was the average decision time involved.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: One hundred and two appeals were considered in 1985. Of these 71 were by authorised examiners (garages) against withdrawal of authorisation and 31 were by nominated testers against their suspension from testing. The average decision time was 15 weeks.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many garages were authorised to conduct Ministry of Transport testing at the most recent date for which figures are available; and how many of these authorisations were withdrawn in each of the first five years, respectively.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: For the quarter ending 30 September 1986 there were 16,939 privately operated testing stations authorised to conduct MOT testing. I regret that information regarding the number of these authorisations that may have been withdrawn in each of their first five years of operation is not readily available and can only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to speed up the consideration of appeals against the withdrawal of Ministry of Transport authorisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The number of appeals against withdrawal of MOT authorisations is increasing. Eighteen appeals were dealt with in 1982; 60 in 1983; 87 in 1984; 102 in 1985, and the 1986 figure is expected to be even higher. As a result, the consideration of these appeals within our existing resources is taking longer than I would like. Measures for reducing the time taken are currently being looked at as part of the Department's review of the workings of the MOT scheme.

Mersey Tunnels (Tolls)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning his recent decision to sanction increased tolls for the use of the Mersey tunnels; what his response has been; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Letters objecting to the decision have been received from the Merseyside chamber of commerce and industry and from a member of the public. Another member of the public has written to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister. It has been explained to correspondents that the decision to confirm the tolls increase order made by the former metropolitan county council was taken on the basis of the evidence presented at a public inquiry. The reasons were fully set out in the decision letter of 25 July. It would have been inappropriate to reopen the matter.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Irish Foreign Minister (Representations)

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response he made to the Foreign Minister of the Republic of Ireland to his comments about Royal Ulster Constabulary decisions in respect of the July Orange processions when they met in Brussels during the recent meeting of the EEC Council of Ministers.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs wrote to the hon. Member on 14 August and copies of the letter have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Turkey

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the protocol agreement between the United Kingdom and Turkey will be ratified; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs wrote to my hon. Friend on 6 August and copies have been placed in the Library of both Houses.

Expo 86

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many firms based in Scotland were asked to consider participating in the British Pavilion at Expo 86 in Vancouver; and how many actually participated.

Mr. Eggar: I wrote to the hon. Member on 8 September and copies of the letter have been placed in the Library of the House.

Embassies

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy in relation to the purchase of fittings, furnishings, equipment, materials, utensils, crockery, and so on, for British embassies and consulates throughout the world.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs wrote to the hon. Member on 8 August and copies of the letter have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Pakistan (Human Rights)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made about human rights in Pakistan.

Mr. Eggar: We continue to draw the attention of the Government of Pakistan to the public and parliamentary concern in this country about violations of human rights.

Middle East

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent visit to the middle east of the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton), indicating Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the recent talks between President Mubarak of Egypt and King Hussein of Jordan; and what rôle Her Majesty's Government see for the Palestine Liberation Organisation in any peace negotiations.

Mr. Renton: I held useful talks in Sudan, Egypt and Jordan and reaffirmed our support for efforts to achieve a just and lasting settlement of the Arab/Israel dispute: we believe that representatives of the Palestinian people have an important part to play in peace negotiations.

Visas

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what he estimates will be the maximum and the average cost of sending a visa or immigration officer to India as a result of the Government's new visa requirements; how many such officers he expects to send to India; and what will be the total cost of the training and sending of such officers to India.

Mr. Eggar: The maximum cost of posting an entry clearance officer to India is £126,000 per year based on 1986-87 prices. (This relates to Bombay where costs are highest.) The average cost is £121,800. Twelve additional entry clearance officers are being sent to India at a total cost of £1·46 million at 1986-87 prices. Initially there will be no additional training costs because experienced immigration officers are being sent to posts.

Mr. Knowles asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the costs of the new visa regimes will be met.

Mr. Eggar: Our objective is to meet these costs from the fees charged for visas, though it may not be possible to do this in the first year. Visa fees are currently under review in the normal way.

Russian Embassy

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken to acquire the sites in London to be made available to the Russians for new embassy premises; and on what basis the titles of the sites will be held.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Two sites in London are to be made available to the Government of the USSR for new embassy premises, 1-7 Kensington Palace Gardens and 245 Warwick Road. The former will remain part of the Crown Estate but we have recently completed arrangements with the Crown Estate Commissioners under which in due course I, as a corporation sole, will take a lease of the site from the commissioners. As for 245 Warwick Road, I took a conditional transfer of the freehold title to this site from the Secretary of State for Defence on 18 March 1985 and it is proposed that this transfer will be made absolute in the near future. In due course 99-year leases of the sites will be granted by me to the Government of the USSR.

The sites will be acquired on the basis of powers granted under section 2 of the Commissioners of Works Act 1852 and section 122 of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has signified her consent to my exercise of these powers to acquire the sites.

Foreign Affairs Council

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will report on the outcome of the meeting of the Foreign Affairs Council on 15 and 16 September.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I represented the United Kingdom at the Foreign Affairs Council in Brussels on 15 and 16 September.

Meeting in the framework of European political co-operation, the Foreign Ministers reviewed the policy of the Twelve towards South Africa and agreed a statement. They called for the lifting of the state of emergency and the release of all those detained without trial. They emphasised the importance of positive measures to assist the victims of apartheid. They deplored the South African Government's failure to take the steps needed for genuine national dialogue and, as a consequence, they decided to adopt certain restrictive measures towards South Africa. These are a ban on new investment and on the import of iron, steel and gold coins from South Africa. The representatives of the Governments of the Member States of the ECSC meeting in the Council agreed that the ban on the import of iron and steel would enter into force on 27 September. Further consideration would be given to the implementation on the ban on gold coins and new investment. The UK has already imposed a ban on the import of gold coins and announced after the Commonwealth Review meeting its intention to impose a volutary ban on new investment.

Foreign Ministers also issued a statement on Chile expressing deep concern about the reimposition of the state of siege and calling for it to be lifted. Foreign Ministers issued a statememt welcoming the release of political prisoners in Poland. They expressed the hope that it would be followed by other measures designed to promote dialogue and democratic reform. Copies of all three statements have been placed in the Library of the House.

Ministers reaffirmed the need for the closest possible co-operation in the fight against international terrorism in the light of the latest terrorist outrages.

The Council approved the EC/EFTA Annual Report for 1985 and 1986 and endorsed a declaration on EC/EFTA relations which reviewed the progress made since the Luxembourg Declaration of April 1984, reaffirmed the Community's commitment to the EC/EFTA relationship and set out priorities for future work.

The Council discussed a revised mandate for negotiations with the Community's Mediterranean partners on the maintenance of trade access following enlargement. Ministers also discussed the results of the negotiations between the Commission and the United States on the citrus/pasta dispute with a view to early EC endorsement of the agreement reached.

A meeting at Ministerial level of the EC/Turkey Association Council was held on 16 September.

The Council also adopted a resolution on Community energy objectives for 1995.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Listed Buildings

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, in relation to listed buildings, the statutory charges registered under article 108 and schedule 4 to the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1972 include any object or structure fixed to a building or forming part of the land and comprised within the curtilage of the building as required under article 31(7).

Mr. Needham: Objects or structures, as referred to in paragraph (7) of article 31 of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1972, are not required to be registered in the statutory charges register.

Footbridge (Newtownbreda)

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the present works commenced at the footbridge opposite Saintfields road Presbyterian church, Newtownbreda; when these works are due for completion; what is the objective of these works; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: This work began on 4 August 1986 and was completed on 18 September. The objective was to replace the bridge deck and end supports which were severely damaged in a traffic accident.

From the numerous inquiries received from local residents and representatives about the timing of repairs to the bridge and their concern for the safety of children, I am satisfied that there is a demand for the footbridge at this location.

Commissioners of National Education

(General Lesson)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report the General Lesson issued in 1835 by the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland and circulated to schools in the Province by his hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, the hon. Member for Peterborough (Dr. Mawhinney).

Dr. Mawhinney: The text is as follows:—

"CHRISTIANS should endeavour, as the Apostle Paul commands them, to live peaceably with all men (Romans c 12 v 18), even with those of a different religious persuasion.

Our SAVIOUR, CHRIST, commanded his Disciples to love one another. He taught them to love even their enemies, to bless those that cursed them, and to pray for those who persecuted them. He himself prayed for his murderers.

Many Men hold erroneous doctrines; but we ought not to hate or persecute them. We ought to hold fast what we are convinced is the truth; but not to treat harshly those who are in error. JESUS CHRIST did not intend his Religion to be forced on men by violent means. He would not allow his Disciples to fight for him.

If any persons treat us unkindly, we must not do the same to them; for Christ and His Apostles have taught us not to return evil for evil. If we would obey CHRIST, we must do to others, not as they do to us, but as we would wish them to do to us.

Quarrelling with our neighbours and abusing them, is not the way to convince them that we are in the right, and they in the wrong. It is more likely to convince them that we have not a Christian spirit.

We ought, by behaving gently and kindly to everyone, to show ourselves followers of CHRIST, who, when he was reviled, reviled not again. (1 Peter c. 2 v. 23)."

(17) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Jimmy Johnston in South Tyrone on 8 May 1984; and if he will give details;

(18) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Ivan Hillen in South Tyrone on 12 May 1984; and if he will give details;

(19) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Robert V. Huggins in Fermanagh on 18 May 1984; and if he will give details;

(20) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Thomas H. Agar in Fermanagh on 18 May 1984; and if he will give details.

Mr. Scott: There have been convictions in relation to seven of these murders. One person was convicted of the murder of James Gibson and another of the murders of Thomas Harron, Oswald Neely, Ronald Alexander and John Roxborough. Two people were convicted of the murder of Cyrus Campbell. The other convictions were connected with the murder of Silas Lyttle. One person was convicted of manslaughter and another of possession of firearms and membership of the IRA.

SCOTLAND

Dentistry

15. Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will initiate a review of the system of remuneration for dentists, and dental charges for retirement pensioners and students.

Mr. John MacKay: We have no plans to review the remuneration arrangements. Many pensioners receive full or partial remission of charges on grounds of low income. Students receive assistance with dental charges according to their personal circumstances. The Government have no plans to alter any of these arrangements.

Labour Statistics

16. Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Scotland are presently unemployed.

Mr. Rifkind: On 11 September 1986, the latest date for which information is available, the number of unemployed claimants in Scotland totalled 363,037 (14·4 per cent.).

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the latest level of unemployment in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: On 11 September 1986, the latest date for which information is available, the number of unemployed claimants in Scotland totalled 363,037 (14·4 per cent.).

The problem of high unemployment remains, of course, a major concern. Employment prospects for all unemployed people will best be enhanced by a better economic performance and increased industrial competitiveness which the Government's policies are designed to secure. In the meantime, the full range of the Government's special employment and training measures are available to those hardest hit by unemployment.

Forestry Commission

17. Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the latest figures from the Forestry Commission on plantings of hardwoods and softwoods.

Mr. John Mackay: The figures for the year ended 31 March 1986 are as follows:

Hectares

	New planting		Restocking		Total
	Hardwoods	Softwoods	Hardwoods	Softwoods	Hardwoods	Softwoods
Forestry Commission	56	4,277	306	6,991	362	11,268
Private Sector	849	18,170	1,492	2,847	2,341	21,017
Totals	905	22,447	1,798	9,838	2,703	32,285

The private sector figures comprise the areas of planting for which grant aid was paid by the Forestry Commission during the year.

32. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what new initiatives are being planned by the Forestry Commission in the field of conservation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The Forestry Commission's environmental policies have evolved over many years. The recent revision of its conservation policy, published in March 1986 under the title "The Forestry Commission and Conservation", took account of its new statutory duty to seek to achieve a reasonable balance between forestry activities and environmental considerations. The commission has consulted conservation organisations over the implementation of this policy, an important aim of which is to improve the conservation value of each forest as a whole. This will be achieved through the development of conservation plans for all commission forests, prepared in consultation with the Nature Conservancy Council and other organisations.

Private Hospital Development

18. Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on private hospital development in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: Under section 14 of the Health Services Act 1976, as amended by section 14 of the Health Services Act 1980, private hospital developers are required to notify the Secretary of State of proposals to establish private hospitals up to 119 beds in size. In cases where the number of beds planned exceeds 119 the Secretary of State's authorisation is required. There are eight private hospitals in Scotland. No new private hospital developments have been notified to my right hon. and learned Friend nor proposals submitted for authorisation during 1986.

Electricity Generation

19. Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Scottish director of British Coal to discuss electricity generation in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has not met the Scottish director of British Coal to discuss this matter. The requirement for coal for electricity generation in Scotland is a matter for commercial negotiation between the Scottish electricity boards and British Coal.

Scottish Economy

20. Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the state of the Scottish economy.

Mr. Rifkind: I am encouraged by underlying strengths in the Scottish economy such as recent growth in manufacturing productivity and the progress made in developing newer high technology industries such as electronics. Although in recent months the adverse effects of the fall in the price of oil have been more apparent in Scotland than elsewhere in the UK, Scotland should benefit from the wider effects of the fall in the oil price on the UK and world economies.

Rural Areas

21. Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the financial support given by his Department for rural areas.

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Office administers a wide range of assistance to rural areas. This includes direct support for basic rural industries such as agriculture, fisheries, forestry and tourism, amounting to almost £400 million in the current year; recognition of rural needs in the rate support grant distibution and the planning of public expenditure programmes; assistance for social and community development projects through the local capital grants scheme; and the continuing work of the Scottish Development Agency and the Highlands and Islands Development Board, which between them will invest over £50 million in the rural economy this year.

Springburn Initiative

22. Mr. Michael J. Martin asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement regarding the latest progress of the Springburn initiative.

Mr. Lang: I understand from the Scottish Development Agency that good progress is now being made in putting together the detailed proposals for the initiative.

Steel Industry

23. Mr. James Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when next he will meet the chairman of the British Steel Corporation to discuss the state of the steel industry in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend plans to meet the chairman of the British Steel Corporation again in the near future and to continue to do so at regular intervals.

Job Creation

24. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will visit Dundee to discuss with local organisations measures to reduce unemployment.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has visited Dundee twice this year, most recently on 17 October when he met representatives of Tayside regional council. Dundee enjoys the full range of Government employment and training measures, and also benefits from other specific measures including development area status, the Tayside enterprise zone, and the Dundee project, all of which should assist levels of unemployment.

Manufacturing Productivity

25. Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the trend of manufacturing productivity in Scotland since 1979.

Mr. Lang: The annual growth rate in manufacturing output per employee in Scotland over the period 1979 to 1985 has been 6·2 per cent. This exceeds the corresponding United Kingdom figure of 3·8 per cent. and is also well above the low increase of 0·4 per cent. achieved in the previous six-year period.

Cervical Smears

26. Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what delay there has been in carrying out cervical smears as a result of the shortage of cytology staff at the department of pathology in the University of Aberdeen; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: I understand that the department of pathology asked general practitioners in the area not to send routine smears from asymptomatic women during August and September while efforts were made to overtake a heavy backlog of work. The situation has since been remedied by the recruitment of extra staff to the department, and I am informed that non-urgent smears are now being reported on within two weeks.

Teachers' Salaries

27. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has yet received the report of the committee of inquiry into teachers' pay; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend received the report of the Main committee on 22 September and it was published on 2 October. I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. and learned Friend gave to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro) earlier today.

29. Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to give his response to the recommendations of the Main committee on teachers' pay and conditions.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. and learned Friend gave to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro) earlier today.

Employment (Stirling)

28. Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has about employment structures in the Queensland ward of the Stirling constituency.

Mr. Lang: I refer to the answers given to my hon. Friend on 24 June and 1 July 1986 at columns 91 and 485 and to the letter which my right hon. and noble Friend Lord Gray of Contin sent to my hon. Friend on 2 July, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House.

European Regional Development Fund

30. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total value of grants made towards projects in Scotland by the European regional development fund since its inception in 1975.

Mr. Lang: Commitments and allocations for Scotland total £616 million.

Rating Reform

31. Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Scottish branch of the National Federation of Small Businesses and the Self-Employed to discuss rating reform.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. Friend last met representatives of the Scottish branch of the federation on 14 March this year.

Ayrshire (Investment)

34. Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet the chairman of the Scottish Development Agency to discuss investment by the agency in Ayshire.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans at present for such a meeting. He met the chairman recently.

Company Liquidations

35. Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many companies went into liquidation in Scotland during 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Lang: The numbers of liquidations notified for these years were published on page 45 of the Scottish Economic Bulletin, No. 33, June 1986. Copies have been provided to Members with constituencies in Scotland.

Primary School Closures

36. Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occassions since the introduction of the consultation procedure prior to the closure of a primary school this has led to the retention of the school; and on how many occasions closure has followed.

Mr. John MacKay: This information is not held centrally. It is for the education authority to decide whether to propose a particular school for closure and whether to proceed with closure.

Forestry

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to provide Government financial assistance for forestry roads.

Mr. Rifkind: It is up to local authorities to assess priorities in their roads and transport financial plans, but I am prepared to take such expenditure into account when determining capital allocations for future years. In assisted areas, a 30 per cent. grant is available under the Industrial Development Act 1982 for improvements to roads required for the extraction of timber.

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Scottish Development Agency and Scottish forestry products development group report on forest products in Scotland in the light of the importance of roads to the harvesting of timber.

Mr. Rifkind: The report, which derived from a major study of the opportunities for growth in exploiting Scotland's timber resources, described in brief terms the industrial infrastructure which exists in Scotland, including the transport and communications network. The group's study remit did not extend to considering the provision of roads.

Where a regional council considers improved communication links to be important to industrial development, and for other purposes, it can, as local roads authority, determine to upgrade roads in its area. If an authority includes such work on its roads and transport capital programmes, I shall take account of it in determining capital allocations.

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about a national financial assistance scheme for forestry industry projects and the production of promotional literature concerning opportunities in the Borders region for the development of forest products.

Mr. Rifkind: In May of this year, Borders regional council's economic development department sent to the Scottish Office a copy of its report on forestry and woodlands in the Borders which covers these matters. As regards a national financial assistance scheme, I would refer to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Eastwood (Mr. Stewart) to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 20 June, at column 670.

Re-Chem International

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will make available funding to investigate the incidence of children born with eye defects within the vicinity of the former Re-Chem chemical waste disposal plant at Roughmute, Bonnybridge.

Mr. John MacKay: Funding in this area has already been made available. An epidemiologist from the University of Edinburgh is examining the incidence of microphthalmos in the Forth Valley health board area, under the direction of the working group on microphthalmos.

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland on what date he received a dossier about Re-Chem International from the office of Alex Falconer, Member of the European Assembly; and if he will make a response.

Mr. Ancram: The dossier arrived in my office on 28 January 1986. I replied to Mr. Falconer on 13 February.

Mortality and Morbidity Statistics

(Denny-Bonnybridge)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what steps were taken to analyse the mortality and morbidity figures in the Denny-Bonnybridge area in 1983-84: and what are the results of such analysis;

(2) whether he will take steps to analyse the mortality or morbidity figures in the Denny-Bonnybridge area for at least the next decade.

Mr. John MacKay: As the hon. Member is aware, the independent group chaired by Professor Lenihan concluded that the mortality and morbidity rates in the Bonnybridge-Denny area showed no unusual features. Further investigation related to two congenital anomalies — microphthalmos and duodenal atresia — were, however, recommended by the group. These investigations are being undertaken. Figures for cancer incidence and congenital abnormalities in the Forth Valley area are routinely recorded.

Pollution

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what his Department considers to be a safe level of polychlorinated biphenyls, polychlorinated dibenzodioxin (especially 2, 3, 7, 8 TCDD) and polychlorinated dibenzofurans in milk, soil, water and human tissue.

Mr. John MacKay: The steering group on food surveillance, the committee on the medical aspects of contamination of air, land and soil and the interdepartmental committee on dioxins have been asked to look at various aspects of the toxicological significance of polychlorinated biphenyls, dioxins and dibenzofurans. None is yet in a position to comment.

Some guidance already exists in relation to short-term and long-term exposure to airborne polychlorinated biphenyls. This is contained in guidance note EH 40/86 "Occupational Exposure Limits 1986" issued by the Health and Safety Executive, copies of which are available in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Mortgages

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses were being bought on mortgage in 1986 and in each of the past seven years.

Mr. Tracey: The proportion of households buying their homes with a mortgage loan is estimated from information collected in the annual general household survey: the latest results available are for 1984. The figures are derived from those proportions and from my Department's estimates of total households.

Owner-occupiers buying with mortgage loans: England

Council Housing

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council houses were empty for more than a year (a) nationally, (b) in the east midlands and (c) in Leicester in each of the past seven years, giving the same areas, the total numbers of council housing stock and the relevant percentages; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The figures are derived from local authorities' annual housing investment programme returns.

Merseyside Development Corporation

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many units of accommodation will be available for sale or rent within the dockland area of the Merseyside Development Corporation.

Mr. John Patten: Over the next five years about 430 houses and approximately 210 flats will be built in Merseyside Development Corporation's designated area. Of these, 130 houses will be available for rent.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the luxury apartments in the Albert dock complex on Merseyside will be available for sale or rent.

Mr. John Patten: Arrowcroft Ltd. is engaged in discussions with Merseyside Development Corporation on the design of flat units within the Albert dock complex. It is intended to provide over 100 units for sale. No time scale for their construction has yet been decided.

Portsmouth (Housing)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the content of the telephone call between his Department and an officer of Portsmouth city council concerning the Portsdown Park housing estate on 3 March;

(2) if he will make available copies of all the correspondence and details of any other contacts between his Department and Portsmouth city council with regard to the city's plan to refurbish the Portsdown Park estate which took place between the original submission of the Barratt's bid and the final decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Grant-related Expenditure

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will rank in descending order, using their 1986-87 budgets, all English local authorities on the basis of the percentage above or below their grant-related expenditure assessments for 1986-87.

Mr. Ridley: I have today placed the information in the House of Commons Library.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the shares of total grant-related expenditure given to (a) London, (b) the metropolitan areas and (c) non-metropolitan areas in each year from 1981-82 to 1987-88 (provisional), taking account of all changes in definition and service transfers from year to year.

Mr. Ridley: Following are the figures requested:

	London	Metropolitan Areas	Non-Metropolitan Areas
1981-82[1]	18·7	25·2	56·1
1982-83[1]	19·0	25·0	56·0
1983-84[1]	19·0	25·1	56·0
1984-85[1]	18·7	25·0	56·3
1985-86	18·6	25·3	56·1
1986-87	18·9	25·5	55·6
1987-88[2]	19.0	25·5	55·5

[1] Prior to 1985-86 GLC received GRE in respect of public passenger transport: in later years responsibility for public passenger transport has resided with London Regional Transport. The GLC GRE for public passenger transport represented no more than about 0·1 per cent. of total GRE in any year.
[2] Provisional.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will arrange for the publication of the technical handbook on grant-related expenditure for 1987-88.

Mr. Ridley: We aim to publish the technical handbook on grant-related expenditure for 1987-88 within two months of laying the 1987-88 RSG settlement report before the House. This will be some two to three months earlier than in previous years.

House Condition Survey

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, how properties have been selected for inclusion in the current house condition survey being undertaken by his Department.

Mr. Ridley: The 1986 English house condition survey, which is currently in progress, consists of a sample of 30,700 dwellings distributed across England. The sample was chosen to include all 8,200 addresses surveyed in the 1981 EHCS. Subject to certain technical adjustments to take account of regional differences in dwelling age and tenure, the remaining addresses were selected at random from the Post Code Address File.

UK 2000

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress of UK 2000, listing the membership of the board and those businesses which have agreed to sponsor schemes.

Mr. Ridley: Since the launch of UK 2000 on 14 July the board has concentrated on helping the voluntary organisations to develop projects, on seeking sponsorship, and on setting up detailed administrative arrangements. Criteria for UK 2000 projects have been defined and steps have been taken to encourage projects from other organisations not represented on the board. The target for the board to fill 5,000 Manpower Services Commission community programme places by April 1987 remains unchanged.

The names of the members of the UK 2000 board are listed in the table.

I understand that several voluntary organisations have themselves attracted sponsorship for projects; details of these agreements will be available soon. The UK 2000 central unit is separately negotiating with some 35 organisations which have expressed interest in sponsoring aspects of UK 2000, but these discussions are not yet complete.

UK 2000 Board Members

Richard Branson[1], (Chairman) Virgin Group;

Jean Denton[1], Rover Group;
Stephen O'Brien[1], Business in the Community;
John Pontin[1], Bristol;
Ian Branton representing the British Trust for Conservation Volunteers;
Brian Lymbery representing the Civic Trust;

Local Government Reform

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is able to give details of savings that have arisen from the abolition of the Greater London council and the six metropolitan county councils.

Mr. Ridley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Surbiton (Mr. Tracey) on 22 May 1986, at columns 295-96. I cannot yet add substantively to that reply. Further information on manpower levels and redundancies is currently being received and analysed. I hope to make a further statement in due course.

Rates

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the average unrebated domestic rate bill paid in each year since 1966 by householders in England.

Mr. Ridley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply to him on 14 April, at column 307.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the amount of rate support grant paid to each local authority in each of the years from 1978-79 to 1986-87 expressed in constant 1986-87 prices.

Mr. Ridley: Tables of rate support grant paid to local authorities since 1974-75 were placed in the House of Commons Library on 6 March. These figures can be converted into real terms at 1986-87 prices by multiplying the figure for each year by a factor which takes account of inflation based on the GDP deflator as in the following table:

Factors for converting rate support grant in cash terms to real terms at 1986-87 prices

Year	Factor
1978-79	1·957
1979-80	1·675
1980-81	1·412
1981-82	1·285
1982-83	1·198

Year	Factor
1983-84	1·147
1984-85	1·100
1985-86	1·037
1986-87	1·000

Notes:
The grant figures for 1974-75 to 1980-81 are not comparable with those for 1981-82 to 1986-87 because:

i. They comprise the needs, resources and domestic elements whereas from 1981-82 onwards the figures comprise block grant and domestic rate relief grant;

ii. Grant in support of services provided by metropolitan county councils was paid to the districts up to 1980-81 and to the counties thereafter.

The grant figures in the tables for London and metropolitan areas for 1981-82 to 1985-86 are not comparable with those for 1986-87 because of the abolition of the GLC and metropolitan county councils on 31 March 1986.

All figures in the grant tables are in cash terms. Those for 1981-82 and earlier years are final entitlements. Domestic rate relief grant figures for 1983-84 and 1984-85 are final entitlements; those for 1985-86 and 1986-87 are first estimates. Block grant figures for 1983-84 and 1984-85 are entitlements after holdback based upon provisional outturn expenditure; those for 1985-86 are entitlements after holdback based on budgets; those for 1986-87 are entitlements based on initial claims.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish figures showing (a) the percentage increase in domestic water rates for each year since 1978-79 for each English regional water authority and the overall average, (b) the cumulative percentage increase since 1978-79 on the same basis and (c) the average domestic water rates bill per household for each year since 1978-79 for each water authority and the overall average.

Mr. Ridley: The information requested is shown in the table. The average household bills are taken from charges returns made annually to DOE.

Derelict Land Clearance

Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he hopes to announce his decision relating to the application by the Caradon district council for a derelict land clearance grant in respect of the site formerly occupied by HMS Fisgard, Torpoint; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The Caradon district council's application for derelict land grant is under consideration by my Department along with many such applications from other authorities, both in the south-west region and nationally. A decision on whether funds can be made available in 1987-88 for the proposal will be made early in 1987.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average gross weekly rent for all local authority tenants in England in April 1979 and each subsequent year to 1986; and what proportion of average weekly earnings these gross weekly rent payments represent in each of those years.

Mr. Ridley: The estimated figures are as follows:

Average Weekly Unrebated Rents Local Authority Tenants England

	Rent £ per week	As per cent. of average male adult earnings[1]
April
1979	6·41	6·3
1980	7·70	6·2

Local Government Expenditure

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish for each authority selected for rate limitation in 1986-87 the percentage increase or decrease in its 1986-87 budgeted total expenditure compared with its original 1985-86 budget.

Mr. Ridley: The information is as follows:

	Per cent.
Basildon	+24·1
Camden[1]	+25·2
Greenwich[1]	+63·9
Hackney[1]	+40·5
Haringey[1]	+22·9
Islington[1]	+23·8
Lambeth[1]	+34·8
Lewisham[1]	+39·5
Liverpool[1]	+12·7
Newcastle[1]	+21·3
Southwark[1]	+25·6
Thamesdown	+ 4·6

[1] Figures for these authorities for 1985-86 and 1986-87 are not directly comparable, because of the effects of costs included in 1986-87 budgets in respect of services inherited on abolition of the Greater London council or the metropolitan county councils.

Housing Finance

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the housing subsidy paid to each London borough, metropolitan district and non-metropolitan district in each of the years from 1978-79 to 1986-87, expressed in constant 1986-87 prices.

Mr. Ridley: I shall answer this question shortly.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the housing investment programme allocations made to each London borough, metropolitan district and non-metropolitan district in each of the years from 1978-79 to 1986-87, expressed in constant 1986-87 prices.

Mr. Ridley: Lists of the housing investment programme allocations for all housing authorities in England are placed in the House of Commons Library each year. A list of these allocations for the years 1978-79 to 1986-87, adjusted to 1986-87 prices, will be placed in the Library as soon as possible. It should of course be noted that the level of allocations to authorities does not correspond to the level of housing capital expenditure by those authorities in those years, because of the growth of expenditure financed by other means, principally from capital receipts.

Local Authorities (Capital Receipts)

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library details of accumulated capital receipts for 1985-86 in a similar manner to those given for 1984-85 on 16 July, Official Report, columns 544-45.

Mr. Ridley: Returns from local authorities are currently being received and analysed. As soon as the information is reasonably complete, I will place details in the Library on the same basis as before.

Cement Industry

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the present condition of the domestic cement industry.

Mr. John Patten: The United Kingdom industry can meet domestic demand both in quantity and quality. Capacity in 1985 was 15·8 million tons, with usage running at 84 per cent. The quality of the ordinary Portland cement produced is higher than BS12. It is well able to compete with unsubsidised imports from the European Community.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the turnover of the domestic cement industry and its total profits or losses in each year since 1980.

Mr. John Patten: The information for the United Kingdom is given in the following table. The profit figures are pre-tax and interest deductions.

£ million

	Turnover £	Profit £
1980	537	55
1981	526	41
1982	590	55
1983	616	55
1984	632	37
1985	639	23

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the quantity and value of cement used in Britain annually and the respective percentages supplied by the domestic cement industry.

Mr. John Patten: The figures are as follows:

	Total Consumption		Domestic Share per cent.
	Volume Metric tonnes	Value £ million	Volume Metric tonnes	Value £ million
1980	14·2	537	99	99
1981	12·3	540	98	99

1983	13·5	631	97	98

PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Bernard Ingham

Q57. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if she will dismiss Mr. Bernard Ingham, in the light of the fourth report from the Defence Committee on Westlands.

The Prime Minister: No.

EEC Budget

Mr. Deakins asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her reply of 26 March, Official Report, column 493, if it remains Her Majesty's Government's policy to oppose the inclusion in EEC budgets of special extra provisions for the cost of the past problems; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Yes. The Government will continue to argue against special extra provision in the EC budget for the so-called cost of the past problem. The Government voted in favour of the Council's draft budget for 1987, which respects the budget discipline limits.

Dr. Kurt Waldheim

Mr. Freeson asked the Prime Minister if she will now make a further statement on progress being made with the investigation of Ministry of Defence records regarding the alleged involvement of Dr. Kurt Waldheim of German Army Group E in the interrogation and subsequent deaths of British prisoners of war during world war 2.

The Prime Minister: In May hon. Members sent to me and to the Leader of the House the names of eight service men believed to have been taken prisoner in Greece by German Army Group E during world war 2. On 9 June the hon. and learned Member for Leicester, West (Mr. Janner) sent four further names to the Secretary of State for Defence. The Ministry of Defence has undertaken a thorough and painstaking search of military records for information relevant to Dr. Waldheim's involvement in the fate of these men. The search relating to the first group of eight service men has been completed. Of these, two are known to have survived the war; one died of wounds; and the fate of the rest cannot be precisely established. The search relating to the second group of four service men is continuing. The search of records so far completed has revealed no evidence of criminal activity on the part of Dr. Waldheim.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 23 October.

Mr. Hirst asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 23 October.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 23 October.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 23 October.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 23 October.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. Following Questions in the House I shall be going to sign the book of condolence opened for President Machel of Mozambique.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Office

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the procurement activities of the Post Office will be published.

Mr. Howard: The report is published today.

The Commission was asked to investigate the efficiency and cost of the way goods and services are purchased by and distributed within the Post Office, whether the efficiency of these procurement activities, costing some £380 million in 1985, could be improved and whether they had improved since the telecommunications business was separated from the Post Office in 1981. In its report the commission has taken account of the effect on the arrangements for procurement of a major structural reorganisation, announced by the Post Office during the commission's inquiry, which establishes separate letters, parcels and counters businesses.

The commission found that since 1981 purchasing standards in the Post Office had been improved substantially and in general had secured value for money, but it recommends a number of ways in which purchasing, stock management and distribution and staffing practices should be further improved.

The commission found that the Post Office largely shared its views on actions to be taken to improve the efficiency of procurement activities and is already putting in hand many of the necessary changes, although progress has in some cases been relatively slow. It did not find that the Post Office was pursuing a course of conduct which operates against the public interest.

The commission considers it essential that goods purchased centrally should be offered to users in the separate businesses at prices which take account of all the costs of procurement (including distribution) so that they may be compared with the cost of direct purchasing by the businesses. It considers that where the businesses' own choice would be direct procurement this should be refused only when there is a clear advantage to the Post Office as a whole.

Among its more detailed findings the commission sees the development of management information and accounting systems as important, in particular, in determining the charges to users for goods and services and in the improvement of demand forecasting and stock management. It recommends careful control of current computer systems development to assure achievement of these objectives.

The commission makes several recommendations aimed at correcting shortcomings found in stock management. It recommends a reduction in stocks (excluding strategic stocks) to an average by value level of three months by not later than August 1987 and that consideration be given to whether there is scope for further reduction to two months. It recommends a review to determine whether any of the goods stocked would be better supplied directly from the manufacturers to the users under centrally negotiated contracts.

The commission recommends specific measures to improve procurement in particular areas of goods and services which it had considered in detail, including stamps, vehicles, uniforms, advertising and building and engineering maintenance.

The commission was concerned to discover that in the regions the Post Office had, until very recently, no method of assessing the effectiveness of expenditure of £80 million per annum on goods and services and maintained no central record of regional stocks, the number of stores or the number of staff employed in them. The commission considers that the recent appointment of regional purchasing and supply officers should improve purchasing in the regions. It recommends closer control of local stores by the new businesses, and that each should be obliged to account for its stocks and review stockholdings.

The commission makes recommendations relating to the staffing of procurement activities, including the measurement and monitoring of work loads, regular external reviews of staff levels, local productivity schemes, closer budgeting and reduction of overtime. It found that the pay rates of storekeepers, which were under review when the commission completed its work, are much higher in the Post Office than elsewhere and recommends that they should be brought into line with remuneration for comparable work in other organisations.

The Post Office will be producing written responses to the commission's findings and I shall report on those statements at the appropriate time.

South Africa

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what agreements are currently in force relating to South African commodities entering (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the EEC; what quotas are currently in operation on those commodities; and of which of these commodities there is a surplus within the Community.

Mr. Alan Clark: There are no agreements relating to imports of South African commodities into the United Kingdom and the EEC; no quotas are in operation; and there are no imports of commodities known to be in surplus in the Community.

Liverpool (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the recent visit to Liverpool by the Minister for Information Technology, the hon. Member for Chertsey and Walton (Mr. Pattie).

Mr. Pattie: I visited Liverpool on 14 October 1986.

In the morning I opened new premises of a design and management company in Cheshire and on arrival in Liverpool I visited the Wavertree technology park, where I met representatives of two companies sited on the park. I addressed a lunchtime meeting of the University of Liverpool Conservative Association and in the afternoon visited a computer service company in Liverpool.

In the evening I attended a dinner with representatives from local industry and commerce.

Employment Assumptions

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the assumptions regarding employment and related prospects for the regions in the United Kingdom contained in his Department's report to the European Commission of Government assumptions about employment and industry up to 1990.

Mr. Giles Shaw: In the opinion of the Government it is not sensible or practicable to make forecasts of national unemployment for several years ahead. However, in order to comply with the rules of the European regional development fund, it was necessary to submit a report on the United Kingdom's regional development programme 1986-90. This has been submitted but not yet considered by the European Community Regional Policy Committee or the Commission. As part of the requirement the report contains assumptions about the number of unemployed claimants in each region of the United Kingdom in 1990. These used the national unemployment assumption from the 1986 public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9207), covering the period 1986-87 to 1988-89. The 1990 figure was derived by repeating the assumption for 1988-89 a further year. The national assumption was allocated to regions in proportion to 1985 regional unemployment, to reach regional assumptions. No specific assumption about industry was made, but in some cases the document refers to possible trends.

Cement (Imports)

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the quantities of cement imported into Britain from each European Economic country in 1985 and to date in 1986.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is as follows:

United Kingdom imports of cement from EC member states

	1985	1986 January to August
Federal Republic of Germany	72·5	38·6
France	40·0	45·3

Notes:
(i) All figures are provisional.
(ii) — no trade.
0·0 negligible trade.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the dumping of Greek cement in Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have received numerous representations from the British cement industry and from consumer interests about the possible imports of cement from Greece. I have taken up these representations and refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Beverley (Sir P. Wall) on 21 October 1986, at column 780.

Company Liquidations

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list for each year from 1979 to 1983 the percentage of businesses established in each year by young people aged 16 to 25 years which have gone into liquidation within a three-year period.

Mr. Howard: The information requested is not available.

Council of Industry Ministers

Mr. Porter asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the progress made at the recent European Community Council of Industry Ministers.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Industry Council met under my chairmanship on 20 October. The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Industry represented the United Kingdom.

The Council adopted a resolution approving the broad strategy of the Commission's action programme for small and medium-sized enterprises, and also a statement on deregulation which welcomed the Commission's new procedure — involving its task force on SMEs — for assessing the compliance costs that Commission proposals will have on business.

I secured the unanimous support of the Council for a resolution welcoming the Commission's determination to apply strictly the code on state aids to the steel industry and to ensure that none of its provisions are undermined. The Council had initial discussion of the Commission's proposals to free certain steel products from the production quota system, during which there was general agreement that the process of liberalisation should continue. I noted that majorities appeared to exist for the liberalisation of category Ic (galvanised sheet) from quota, and for the removal of Commission powers in connection with divergences from traditional intra-Community trade flows in steel products on the understanding that Commission surveillance would continue. I postponed final decisions on these and the other detailed Commission proposals until the next Industry Council on 18 November, for which the Commission had agreed to prepare a preliminary analysis of Eurofer's important recent initiative on steel restructuring.

The Council discussed the Commission's proposal for a sixth Council directive on aid to shipbuilding to replace the existing directive, which expires on 31 December 1986. There was broad agreement on the Commission's approach that a common ceiling should be set on direct and indirect aids benefiting ship production and that there should be separate provision for aids for restructuring. I concluded that the necessary preparations should be made to enable the Council to have decisive negotiations on the directive at the next Industry Council.

The Council also noted the Commission's intentions to bring forward proposals to help restructure Portuguese industry.

EMPLOYMENT

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Clay asked the Paymaster General what percentage of businesses using the enterprise allowance scheme in the Northern region have ceased to trade (a) within one year of the commencement of their business and (b) between one and two years from the commencement of their business.

Mr. Trippier: The percentages are:

(a) 13·4 per cent. of those people who joined the scheme in August 1985 had ceased their trading in their EAS business before the end of their year on the allowance (August 1986);

(b) information is not available for the period requested. Completed surveys are on a national basis but a current survey will provide a regional breakdown and results will be available in spring 1987. However, the latest survey results show that of 44 people surveyed in the Northern region who joined the scheme between 1 March and 30 April 1984 and completed a year in the scheme six had ceased to trade six months after the allowance had stopped. The survey report will be published in November and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Clay asked the Paymaster General what percentage of businesses nationally which used the enterprise allowance scheme in its first year of operation, August 1983-84, were still trading in August 1985.

Mr. Trippier: Information is not available for the period requested. However, the latest survey evidence shows that 76 per cent. of participants who joined the schemes between 1 March and 30 April 1984 and completed a year on the scheme were still trading six months after the allowance had stopped. The survey report will be published in November and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Clay asked the Paymaster General what percentage of businesses in the Northern region, set up by the 18 to 25 years age group, and which used the enterprise allowance scheme during its first year of operation, August 1983-84, were still trading in August 1986.

Mr. Trippier: This information is not available. Existing survey results are based on a sample of only six people in this age group in the Northern region and no valid conclusion can be based on such a small sample. A survey presently being conducted on those who set up in business 18 months ago will be based on a larger sample. The results of this survey will be available by March 1987.

Mr. Clay asked the Paymaster General what percentage of businesses in the Northern region which used the enterprise allowance scheme during its first year of operation, August 1983-84, were still trading in August 1986.

Mr. Trippier: Information is not available for the period requested. Completed surveys provide evidence of survival rates nationally; a current survey will provide a regional breakdown and results will be published in spring 1987. However, the latest survey reports show that of the 44 people surveyed in the Northern region who joined the scheme between 1 March and 30 April 1984 and completed a year on the scheme 30 were still trading six months after the allowance had stopped. A copy of the report to be published in November will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Clay asked the Paymaster General what percentage of businesses using the enterprise allowance scheme nationally have ceased to trade (a) within one year of the commencement of their business and (b) between one and two years from the commencement of their business.

Mr. Trippier: The percentages are:

(a) 11·5 per cent. of those people who joined the scheme in August 1985 had ceased trading in their EAS business before the end of their year on the allowance (August 1986).

(b) Information is not available for the period requested. However, the latest survey results show that of the 781 people surveyed who joined the scheme between 1 March and 30 April 1984 and completed a year on the scheme 188 (24 per cent.) had ceased to trade six months after the allowance had stopped.

Mr. Clay asked the Paymaster General what percentage of businesses nationally which were established by the 18 to 25 years age group, and which used the enterprise allowance scheme during its first year of operation, August 1983-84, were still trading in August 1986.

Mr. Trippier: Information is not available for the period requested. However, the latest survey results show that of the 86 people between the ages of 18 and 24 surveyed who joined the scheme between 1 March and 30 April 1984 and completed a year on the scheme 59 were still trading six months after the allowance had stopped. The survey report will be published in November and will be placed in the Library.

Long-term Unemployed Persons

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General if a person refusing to attend an interview for a place on the proposed six-month training course for the long-term unemployed under 25 years of age will be liable for benefit sanctions.

Mr. Lee: The purpose of the new job training scheme is to help participants to acquire skills to compete on equal terms for the increasing number of job vacancies. Participation in the scheme will be voluntary and no benefit sanctions will be applied to people not wishing to take part.

This training scheme is only one of the range of opportunities which may be offered in the pilot areas at an interview under the restart scheme. People who fail to respond to a request to attend an interview at a jobcentre without good reason are under social security legislation liable to benefit sanctions.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General (1) how many persons are presently eligible for the proposed six-month training course for the long-term unemployed under 25 years;

(2) in the case of the proposed six-month training course for the long-term unemployed under 25 years (a) how many places there will be on an annual basis, (b) how it will be funded, (c) who will provide training and (d) what qualifications it will lead to;

(3) if an element of work experience will be included in the proposed six-month training course for the long-term unemployed under 25 years.

Mr. Trippier: Job training scheme pilot programmes will be open to adults unemployed for six months or more in the pilot areas. Some 50,000 people were in this category at the latest count.

The Manpower Services Commission is currently discussing the scale and nature of provision within the pilots with potential managing agents and I shall write to the hon. Member with further details when these are available. The costs of the pilots will be met from within the adult training budget.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General if he will provide an update of the statistics published in July in the Official Report concerning the destinations of the long-term unemployed interviewed to date under the national restart programme.

Mr. Lee: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General how many persons have ceased to claim benefits as a result of being interviewed or after being called to interview under the national restart scheme.

Mr. Lee: The information is not available in the precise form asked for, but as at 11 September 1986 the number of people who had left the unemployed count (most of whom would have been receiving benefit) following invitation to a restart counselling interview or attendance at such an interview was 54,367.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General if a person completing a course relating to the restart programme and failing to find full-time employment will remain classified as long-term unemployed for statistical and benefit purposes.

Mr. Lee: People attending a restart course continue during their participation to claim and receive unemployment benefits to which they are entitled. Consequently there is no change to their classification statistically or for benefit purposes.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General what was the number of long-term unemployed 12 months ago, six months ago and at the latest available date.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. The table shows the number of claimants who had been unemployed for over a year in Great Britain (excluding Northern Ireland) 12 months ago, six months ago, and at 10 July 1986, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by duration is available.

Unemployed claimants

	Number
10 October 1985	1,292,777
10 April 1986	1,295,641
10 July 1986	1,285,366

This comparison is affected by the change in the timing of the compilation of the unemployment count in February 1986.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Aid

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government have any plans to increase their programme of overseas aid for the financial year 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The planned aid budget for 1987-88, contained in the 1986 public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702), is £1,230 million, an increase of £43 million or 3·6 per cent. over the aid budget for 1986-87. The outcome of this year's public expenditure survey will be published in the Government's 1987 public expenditure White Paper.

Bophuthatswana

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funding out of the Overseas Development Agency budget, and for what projects, has been given to Bophuthatswana.

Mr. Chris Patten: None.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student grants

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the value of the student grant inside and outside London at outturn and at constant prices together with its real value, indexed using 100 as a base, when compared with the rise in retail prices, average earnings, rents and books for (a) each year since 1962 and (b) each year since 1979; and if he will show the total value of students' grants expressed as a proportion of the gross domestic product for each year.

Mr. Walden: The information is as follows:

	"Elsewhere" rate of grant £	Real value in percentage terms (September 1962 and 1979 = 100 respectively) deflated by increases in								London rate of grant £	Real value in percentage terms (September 1962 and 1979 = 100 respectively) of the grant deflated by increases in								Total cost maintenance as a percentage of Gross Domestic Product (GDP)

Reyes Syndrome

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether the Medical Research Council is supporting research into Reyes syndrome or has any plans to do so.

Mr. Walden: I refer the right hon. Member to my reply to him of 13 June, at column 318. The MRC is always willing to consider soundly based research proposals for support through its grants schemes in competition with other applications.

Callington Primary School

Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the normal period of time between an inspection by Her Majesty's inspectors of a primary school and their published report; and if he is now able to publish Her Majesty's inspector's report on Callington primary school following the inspection visit in July 1985.

Mr. Dunn: I am pleased to tell my hon. Friend that the report by Her Majesty's inspectors on Callington primary school was issued on 8 October 1986 and was published on 22 October 1986.

As to the wider issues he raises, since 1 January 1983 there have been a total of 700 reports published on schools and colleges on the basis of full inspections, of which 294 related to primary schools. The average time between inspection and publication is nine months. It remains the aim of Her Majesty's Inspectorate that reports should be issued to individual institutions within six months of an inspection. It is working to achieve that time scale. However, no institution or governing body has to wait that long to know the findings of the inspections, as Her Majesty's Inspectorate discusses these and other matters with the head and staff during and at the end of each inspection and with the governing bodies shortly after.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how the extra £40 million resources for education authorities for books for the general certificate of secondary education has been allocated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The Government are supporting £40 million expenditure on books and equipment for the GCSE over three years. £20 million is being made available this year: £15 million is being supported through education support grant and the other £5 million is a grant for the provision of scientific and technological equipment made available by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment in conjunction with the Manpower Services Commission. A further £20 million at least is being set aside for books and equipment through education support grant over the next two financial years.

To secure an equitable distribution of the amount available through ESG for books and equipment a ceiling on the amount of expenditure has been set for each authority. These allocations have been calculated on the basis of 75 per cent. according to the relevant school population and 25 per cent. according to the number of maintained secondary schools. The £5 million available through the MSC for equipment has been allocated on the basis of 50 per cent. according to relevant school population and 50 per cent. according to the number of maintained secondary schools.

SCOTLAND

Health Boards (Administration)

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance he has issued to health boards in Scotland about the employment of nursing staff as unit managers in the re-structuring of health board administration; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Guidance on the implementation of general management in units of the Scottish Health Service was issued by the Scottish Home and Health Department on 25 August 1986 in NHS Circular 1986 (GEN) 20, copies of which are in the Library.

Unit general manager posts will be widely advertised by health boards. Competition will be open. There will be no presumption for or against applicants from any particular background. The principal criterion for selection will be management skill and aptitude. The circular contains guidance on appropriate involvement of nursing and other professional staff in support of unit general managers.

Housing Lists

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will request from all local authorities in Scotland a detailed report of the number of persons on their council's housing list, showing age groups of applicants, length of time on waiting lists; and their plans for reducing such lists.

Mr. Ancram: Housing plans which the local authorities submit to the Scottish Development Department at regular intervals already include proposals for reducing waiting lists. I do not think that the benefit of requesting further information from local authorities on housing lists would justify the extra burden it would impose on them.

Pollution

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether, pursuant to his written reply to the hon. Member for Falkirk, West on 24 October 1985, Official Report, column 230, he will now publish the results of the toxicological assessment and the membership of the expert committees and other individual experts consulted on these matters.

Mr. John MacKay: The expert committees concerned have not yet completed their work. I shall send the hon. Member a list of the members of these committees, and am placing a copy of the list in the Library.

Local Authorities (Environmental Duties)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) whether he will make available additional funding to local authorities to enable them to carry out the adequate sampling and testing of milk;

(2) whether he will ascertain from the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities whether Scottish local authorities require additional finance to carry out their environmental duties.

Mr. Ancram: Provision has been made for local authority current expenditure for 1987-88 at 3·75 per cent. over budgets for the present year, and guidelines have been increased by an average of 9·2 per cent. over their previous level. Local authorities should therefore have adequate resources to carry out all their duties. If the hon. Member has a particular problem in mind he may care to write to me.

Housing Support Grant

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will express the housing support grant awarded to Dundee district council at constant prices in each year since 1980.

Mr. Ancram: The information is given in the table below:

Housing support grant paid

1980-81	8,602,017	11,704,380

Education (Expenditure)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the total expenditure of Tayside region on education at constant prices in each year since 1982.

Mr. John MacKay: The total gross expenditure of Tayside region on education in each year since 1981-82, expressed in constant prices, is as follows:

Year	Expenditure[1] £ million
1981-82	105·387
1982-83	104·842
1983-84	106·167
1984-85	106·530

Information on 1985-86 actual expenditure is not yet available.

Tayside Regional Council (Talks)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his discussions with the convenor of Tayside regional council, Mr. John McAllion, during his visit to Dundee and Tayside on 17 October.

Mr. Rifkind: I had a most useful meeting with Convenor McAllion during my visit to Tayside regional council on 17 October. Our discussion ranged over a number of items of local and national interest including textile imports, North sea oil, the region's capital expenditure plans and the Dundee waterfront project.

Hip Replacement

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average waiting time for a hip replacement operation for the elderly in Dundee, Tayside health board and Scotland overall; and what were the corresponding figures two years previously.

Mr. John MacKay: The latest information centrally available on patients admitted, treated and discharged relates to 1984. The industrial action in 1982 make 1981 figures the most appropriate comparison.

Mean waiting times (in days) for total hip replacements

Health Council (Dundee)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what study he has made of the annual report of Dundee local health council, with particular reference to the renal unit at Dundee royal infirmary, orthopaedic waiting lists and the knock-on effect of geriatric bed provision; and if he will provide Tayside health board with additional funds to assist with these problems.

Mr. John MacKay: The matters raised in the annual report of the Dundee local health council are primarily the responsibility of Tayside health board. The board is the second best funded in Scotland in relation to the needs of its area, and it would be unfair to other boards to increase the proportion of available resources allocated to Tayside.

Rents

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about alleged over-charging by landlords for rooms rented by young persons; and if he will discuss this matter with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities as soon as possible.

Mr. Michael Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no representations specifically about alleged overcharging by landlords for rooms rented by young persons. Some representations have, however, been received from local authorities and other bodies about the alleged excessive levels of rent charged by some private sector landlards for poor quality accommodation. If the convention has relevant evidence on any aspect of these matters, my right hon. and learned Friend is prepared to consider it at any time.

Rent Officers

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will now bring in legislation for the appointment of rent officers in Scotland whose duties would be similar to those operating in England at present.

Mr. Ancram: It is not evident that such legislation is required since for all practical purposes the duties of a rent officer in Scotland and in England and Wales are identical, that is, to determine and register fair rents.

Urban Aid

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of urban aid projects reaching the expiry of their funding during the current financial year 1986-87; and if he will permit, without ratecapping penalties, the inclusion of selected projects within the mainstream expenditure of local authorities.

Mr. Ancram: The funding of about 180 projects assisted under the urban programme expires during 1986-87. Decisions on the future of these projects are for local authorities to take within the resources available to them.

Rates

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the average unrebated domestic rate bill paid in each year since 1966 by householders in Scotland.

Mr. Ancram: Estimated average domestic rate bills for Scotland (including water rates) are shown in the table below:

NATIONAL FINANCE

European Monetary System

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will in future seek to require the EEC Commission to make estimates of the effects of EMS realignments on EEC budget costs and an own resources revenue; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke I agree that the Commission should be asked to make such estimates, even though they must be very uncertain.

EEC (Payments)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what have been the United Kingdom's total net payments to the EEC in each year from 1983.

Mr. Brooke The information required is contained in table 3 of the statement on the 1986 Community budget (Cmnd 9907) published in early October. A copy is available in the House of Commons Library.

EEC (Expenditure)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the principle that the maximum level of EEC expenditure will be determined at the beginning of the budgetary year is subject to any qualifications about exceptional circumstances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke I refer the hon. Member to the Council's conclusions on budgetary discipline of December 1984, a copy of which is available in the Library. Article 2 of the conclusions includes provision for the Council to take account of exceptional circumstances when calculating the financial guideline for agriculture.

EEC Budget

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the correction formula for United Kingdom budgetary contribution to the EEC, agreed at Fontainebleau, will continue unchanged if the value added tax ceiling is raised to 1·6 per cent.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke This question is hypothetical. Disregarding that, however, neither the VAT ceiling nor the correction formula for the United Kingdom can be changed without the consent of the Governments and Parliaments of all member states, including the United Kingdom.

Privatisation

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, which financial institution advised Her Majesty's Government about the level of the offer price for shares in British Telecom and the Trustee Savings Bank, respectively; and which financial institutions are advising Her Majesty's Government about the level of the offer price for shares in British Gas.

Mr. Norman Lamont The Government's advisers on the British Telecom offer for sale were Kleinwort Benson Ltd. and Hoare Govett Ltd. Advice about share pricing was also provided by Philips and Drew. N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd. and Cazenove and Co. are acting as the Government's advisers on the forthcoming Offer for Sale of shares in British Gas. The arrangements for the TSB flotation were entirely a matter for the TSB and its own financial advisers.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Royal Ulster Constabulary

13. Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether Mr. Colin Sampson has yet completed his inquiry into matters connected with the Royal Ulster Constabulary; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: I understand that the first part of Mr. Sampson's report was submitted to the Chief Constable of the RUC yesterday. The Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland also received a copy. I understand that this part of the report covers the incident on 24 November 1982 in which Mr. Michael Tighe was shot dead. I also understand that Mr. Sampson hopes to submit as soon as possible a second part which will address the associated issues connected with all the cases under investigation. As is the usual practice with police reports covering criminal investigations, it will not be published. On the basis of Mr. Sampson's report, along with any comments from the Chief Constable, the Department of Public Prosecutions (Northern Ireland) will decide, in consultation with my right hon. Friend the Attorney-General, what directions to give as to criminal proceedings.

An additional section of Mr. Sampson's report will deal with matters concerning the management of the RUC. I propose to make a statement to the House on these aspects at the earliest opportunity. It will, however, be understood that I have no role in the conduct of criminal proceedings, nor would it be appropriate for any comments to be made upon the individual investigations involved until all such proceedings are completed.

15. Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to whether the inquiry by Mr. Colin Sampson into allegations against the Royal Ulster Constabulary has yet been completed.

16. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the final version of the report into the Royal Ulster Constabulary being conducted by the chief constable of West Yorkshire to be available.

Mr. Tom King: I understand that the first volume of Mr. Sampson's report was submitted to the Chief Constable of the RUC yesterday. The Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland also received a copy.

Divis Flats

12. Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will make a decision on the recommendations of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive for the demolition of the Divis flats; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: On 13 October I announced that I had accepted the recommendation of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that its future strategy for dealing with the problems of Divis flats should be one of phased demolition of the remaining Sectra blocks subject to periodic review.

Small Businesses

14. Mr. Bellingham asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are currently being taken to encourage small businesses in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Viggers: Support for the establishement and growth of small businesses in Northern Ireland is largely channelled through the Local Enterprise Development

Unit, funded by Government. The unit's resources are being strengthened to intensify efforts on stimulating the growth of existing small businesses. Among other Government measures, the enterprise allowance scheme and training facilities also encourage people to set up and develop small businesses.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

17. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the operation on the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Mr. Tom King: I refer my hon. Friend to a reply I gave earlier to a question by the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Latham).

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how far the Anglo-Irish Agreement has met the objectives originally set for it and what empirical methods are used to evaluate the progress of the agreement;

(2) if he will make a statement on progress achieved by the Anglo-Irish Conference;

(3) what improvements the closer co-operation between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of the Republic of Ireland, since the signing of the Anglo-Irish Agreement, has produced in the situation in Northern Ireland, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 21 October 1986]: We have made good progress since the Anglo-Irish Agreement came into force. We have laid the basis for improved cross-border security co-ordination in the Conference, and the Conference has reassured nationalists that their interests will be taken into account when the Government make decisions. Unionists should also draw reassurance from the renewed commitment in the agreement by both Governments to the principle of consent.

The Government evaluate all their policies, including the Anglo-Irish Agreement, to see whether they have met their objectives. But we have always recognised that the problems which the agreement addresses will not be solved quickly or easily. I am confident that when a final assessment can be made of the agreement its effect will be seen to have been positive.

Terrorism

Mr. Maginnis asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Robert Bennett in South Tyrone on 7 September 1984; and if he will give details;

(2) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Malcolm Cullen in South Tyrone on 7 September 1984; and if he will give details;

(3) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Melvin Simpson in South Tyrone on 8 October 1984; and if he will give details;

(4) if any anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have caused the death of Fred Jackson in South Tyrone on 19 October 1984; and if he will give details;

(5) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Peter W. Gallimore in Fermanagh on 19 October 1984; and if he will give details;

(6) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Jimmy Graham in Fermanagh on 1 February 1985; and if he will give details;

(7) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Hugh McCormac in Fermanagh on 3 March 1985; and if he will give details;

(8) if anyone has been made amendable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Robert Gilliland in Fermanagh on 21 June 1985; and if he will give details;

(9) what information he has as to whether anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Seamus McAvoy, a constituent of South Tyrone, shot in the Irish Republic on 20 August 1985; and as to details;

(10) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of George Gilliland in South Tyrone on 7 December 1985; and if he will give details;

(11) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of William J. Clements in South Tyrone on 7 December 1985; and if he will give details;

(12) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of John Early in Fermanagh on 3 February; and if he will give details;

(13) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Derek Breen in Fermanagh on 11 February; and if he will give details;

(14) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of John McCabe in Fermanagh on 11 February; and if he will give details;

(15) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of David Wilson in South Tyrone on 17 May; and if he will give details.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Reyes Syndrome

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what study his Department has made of the relative incidence of Reyes syndrome in Northern Ireland compared with England and Wales.

Mr. Needham: None. Work on the factors which may be responsible for the varying incidence of Reyes syndrome in different parts of the British Isles is being undertaken by the British paediatric surveillance unit. Provisional figures for the period 1 August 1985 to 31 July 1986 show that the incidence in Northern Ireland has fallen to the same level as in Great Britain.

Employment (Equal Opportunities)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what response he has had to the consultative paper "Equal Opportunity in Employment in Northern Ireland: Future Strategy Options", and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Viggers: Since the consultative paper was issued as recently as mid-September it is too early to expect considered and formal responses and indeed none have been submitted so far. Interested parties have until 31 March 1987 to submit their views and it would not be appropriate to make a statement until those are received and considered.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (1) (a) passengers and (b) visitors from (i) India (ii) Pakistan (iii) Bangladesh (iv) Nigeria and (v) Ghana arrived in the United Kingdom in each month since January 1985;

(2) how many (a) passengers and (b) visitors in total have arrived in the United Kingdom since January.

Mr. Waddington: The tables give, for citizens of the five countries requested, the latest available monthly figures of (a) total passengers and (b) visitors admitted to the United Kingdom. In the first five months of this year a total of 2·45 million passengers, excluding European Community nationals, were admitted, of whom 1·76 million were visitors. In addition, there were just over 10 million admissions of British citizens and other European Community nationals.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passengers from (a) India, (b)

Pakistan, (c) Bangladesh, (d) Ghana and (e) Nigeria were granted temporary admission in (i) 1985, (ii) the first quarter of the current year, (iii) the second quarter and (iv) up to the latest available date.

Mr. Waddington: The statistics covering the number of passengers granted temporary admission are not subdivided by nationality.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many passengers in total have been granted temporary admission in each quarter of the current year;

(2) how many passengers refused entry to the United Kingdom were (a) detained, (b) given temporary admission and (c) given temporary admission to hotels in each quarter since January.

Mr. Waddington: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passengers from (a) India, (b) Pakistan, (c) Bangladesh, (d) Ghana and (e) Nigeria failed to leave on the due date following a grant of temporary admission in (i) 1985, (ii) the first quarter of the current year, (iii) the second quarter of the current year, and up to the latest available date.

Mr. Waddington: Figures for the number of passengers who failed to leave on the date due following a grant of temporary admission are not maintained centrally by nationality. Available port records are as follows:

	Heathrow (Terminal 3)		Heathrow (Terminal 4)		Gatwick
	1985	1986	1985	1986	1985	1986
India	69	117	—	26	3	1
Pakistan	21	41	—	4	—	2
Bangladesh	100	172	—	7	3	2
Ghana	29	41	—	5	5	4
Nigeria	8	18	—	—	3	4

Notes: Figures for 1986 at Gatwick and terminal 3 are from 1 January to 19 October 1986. The figures for terminal 4 are from 12 April, when the terminal opened, to 19 October 1986.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration officers are now in post at (a) terminal 3 and (b) terminal 4 at Heathrow; and what are the grades and salaries of these officers.

Mr. Waddington: The information, on 30 September 1986, is as follows:

Grade	Numbers		Basic salary scales
	Terminal 3	Terminal 4	Minimum £	Maximum £
Assistant Chief Inspector	1	1	14,318	19,465
Inspector	4	3	12,979	15,182
Chief Immigration Officer	35	16	10,433	12,418
Immigration Officer	228	100	5,605	10,188

In addition, inspectors, chief immigration officers and immigration officers receive London weighting, premium pay for weekend working, overtime and a shift disturbance allowance which ranges from 12½ per cent. to 16½ of basic pay.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost per day of holding in detention a passenger refused entry to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Hammersmith (Mr. Soley) on 22 July 1986, at columns 147–48.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations have been made by right hon. and hon. Members to Ministers in his Department about (a) port refusals and (b) other immigration matters in each month since May.

Mr. Waddington: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the total number of those, respectively, from the Indian subcontinent, Nigeria and Ghana who absconded during 1984, 1985 and during the first six months of 1986 having been given temporary admission, being refused entry into the United Kingdom as visitors; and what is the percentage in each of these three years of absconders amongst those granted temporary admission.

Mr. Waddington: The information is not available in the form requested. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today to a question from the hon. Member for Battersea (Mr. Dubs).

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors to the United Kingdom who arrived on 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17 October were obliged to wait for more than six hours before being examined by the Immigration Service; and how many who arrived on the corresponding dates in October 1985 were so obliged.

Mr. Waddington [pursuant to his reply, 21 October 1986]: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many remand prisoners are currently being held in police cells; how many there were in each of the past 12 weeks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The number of prisoners held in police cells last Friday[1] (17 October) and on the 12 previous Fridays were as follows. Save where indicated, all the prisoners were held in the south-east; the majority would have been untried.

17 October	97
10 October	96
3 October	[2]188
26 September	105

12 September	84
5 September	61

1 August	204
25 July	214

[1] Figures relate to Thursday night-Friday morning.
[2] Including 91 held in the north-west because of disturbances at Risley remand centre.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current nightly cost of keeping a remand prisoner in a police cell; and how this compares with each of the past five years.

Mr. Mellor: The average cost per prisoner-night of prisoners held in Metropolitan police cells during the financial year ended 31 March 1986, the most recent period for which information is readily available, is estimated at approximately £170. The approximate figure for previous years is as follows:

1984-85	200
1983-84	150
1982-83	100

No figures have been calculated for 1981-82, during much of which police cells were rarely used. The cost represents actual expenditure by the police in staff, accommodation and services, and is determined by various factors, in particular, the number of prisoners and the number of locations at which they are held.

The cost of prisoners held by other police forces vary considerably according to circumstances. Comprehensive figures could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were remanded in custody in police cells as of (a) 31 July, (b) 31 August and (c) 30 September; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The number of persons remanded in custody in police cells on the dates requested was as follows:

	Males	Young offenders (aged 17 to 21)	Females	Total
31 July 1986	124	18	62	204
31 August 1986	37	19	35	91
30 September 1986	53	23	55	131

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the remanding in custody of women.

Mr. Mellor: I have received a number of representations regarding the remanding in custody of women, including reports from the Social Services Committee and the Howard League, and correspondence from Members of Parliament and the TUC.

Visas

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for visas had been received at each post in India, Bangladesh and Pakistan by the latest available date; and how many of these had been (a) granted and (b) refused.

Mr. Waddington: On 6 October my right hon. Friend announced the introduction of a visa requirement for citizens of Bangladesh, India and Pakistan. Information on the numbers of entry clearance applications other than for settlement received and decided at posts in the Indian subcontinent in the period 6 to 17 October is given in the following table. Information on such entry clearance applications is collected regularly only for calendar months.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the length of time spent by persons in pre-trial custody.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) on 23 July 1986, at column 241.

Ethnic Minorities (Prisoners)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the treatment of persons from the ethnic minorities in prison.

Mr. Mellor: The Department receives many communications from and on behalf of prisoners relating to aspects of their treatment, and some of these refer to matters of particular concern to the ethnic minorities, for example diet and religious facilities. It would not be practicable to attempt to list such representations separately. We have, in addition, recently received the report of the NACRO race issues advisory committee on black people in the criminal justice system and we are studying its conclusions and recommendations with care.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons who were members of the ethnic minorities were refused parole in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not readily available.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) non-white and (b) white women were treated for mental illness while remanded in custody in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985;

(2) how many (a) non-white and (b) white women were treated for mental illness while serving a prison sentence in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985;

(4) how many (a) non-white and (b) white people were treated for mental illness while serving a prison sentence in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985;

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not statistically recorded.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the transfer of prisoners from the ethnic minorities to mental institutions.

Mr. Mellor: None.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) non-white and (b) white people were sent to a mental institution on conviction of an offence in the years from 1980 to 1985.

Mr. Mellor: The number of hospital orders made by courts following conviction of an offence is given in the table. No information is available as to the ethnic origin of the persons concerned.

Year	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
Number of hospital orders following conviction of an offender	721	716	699	717	778	762

Prisoners (Psychiatric Care)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the psychiatric care of female prisoners.

Mr. Mellor: Various individuals and organisations have expressed views on Holloway prison's C1 unit and the Social Services Committee report on the Prison Medical Service has made recommendations about various aspects of the psychiatric care of all prisoners, male and female.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police officers transferred from the Metropolitan police to other forces in each of the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985;

(2) how many police officers transferred to the Metropolitan police from other police forces in England and Wales in the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the information on transfers to the Metropolitan police from other forces in England and Wales is not immediately available. But transfers of police officers to and from the Metropolitan police involving other police forces, including Scottish forces and the Royal Ulster Constabulary, for the years 1980 to 1985 are as follows:

Year	Transfers to the Metropolitan police	Transfers from the Metropolitan police
1980	83	78
1981	73	38
1982	107	48
1983	56	57
1984	44	85
1985	25	113

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers in the Metropolitan police force of the rank (a) inspector, (b) sergeant and (c) constable resigned from the Metropolitan police in the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information is not readily available in the form requested. I shall publish it in the Official Report as soon as possible.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers in the Metropolitan police force retired after (a) 25 years' service, (b) 30 years' service and (c) in excess of 30 years' service in each of the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that, though he has set a limit on total weekly mileage, there are at present no limits on mileage for specific types of vehicle or for shifts.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in respect of the total strength of the Metropolitan police force; and what steps he proposes to take in respect of those representations.

Mr. Hurd: I have discussed Metropolitan police manpower with the Commissioner on a number of occasions, and I have received representations from right hon. and hon. Members and others. Following a review to assess the manpower needs of the force, I announced on 20 May that it was to receive increases of up to 1,200 in the police establishment and 600 in the civil staff ceiling over the next four years. As the first stage of this programme I have approved increases of 300 in the police establishment and 107 in the civil staff ceiling for 1986-87, in addition to the increase of 50 in the establishment specifically for drugs work which I approved last October, and the increase of 43 in the ceiling approved by my predecessor last year.

The Metropolitan police are now recruiting to fill the gap of about 600 between present strength and the increased establishment which I have authorised.

Prisoners (Assaults)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) non-white and (b) white people were assaulted in prison in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Mellor: Information on offences against prison discipline of gross personal violence and of assault punished in prison department establishments is given annually in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales," (tables 9 (g), (h) and (i) of the latest issue, for 1985, Cmnd. 9903) but no analysis by ethnic origin of the victim is available.

Prisons (Food Poisoning)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many outbreaks of food poisoning there were in British prisons in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Mellor: There have been no serious outbreaks of food poisoning in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales in the last six years.

Penal establishments in Scotland are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Prisons (Kitchens and Food)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what representations he has received regarding the conditions in prison kitchens;

(2) what representations he has received regarding the quality of prison food.

Mr. Mellor: Since 1 April this year 149 petitions and 19 letters from MPs have been received on the subject of food, together with a number of letters from the general public. Sixty-three petitions and two letters from MPs included reference to quality and eight petitions reference to prison kitchens.

Prison Doctors

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many doctors specialising in mental illness were employed by the prison service in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985 and at the latest date.

Mr. Mellor: About 40 per cent. of currently serving full-time medical officers have a psychiatric qualification. Corresponding information about part-time medical officers and about full-time medical officers employed in the past is not readily accessible and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many doctors from the ethnic minorities were employed by the prison service in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985 and at latest date.

Mr. Mellor: Of 91 doctors currently employed as prison medical officers on a full-time basis, 31 are from ethnic minorities. Corresponding information about part-time medical officers and about full-time medical officers employed in the past is not readily accessible and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prisons (Fires)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fires were reported in British prisons in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Mellor: The number of fires in England and Wales reported to headquarters in each of the years in question was as follows:

	Number
1980	226
1981	235
1982	260

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not statistically recorded.

Prison Medical Facilities

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the standard of prison medical facilities.

Mr. Mellor: Representations relating to specific aspects of prison medical facilities are received from time to time from hon. Members and other interested individuals and organisations. We have also received the third report of the Social Services Committee (published on 25 June 1986) which contains 58 recommendations based on a wide-ranging inquiry into the Prison Medical Service.

Prisoners (Racial Attacks)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding racial attacks on prisoners.

Mr. Mellor: From time to time complaints of assault are made by or on behalf of prisoners in which it is alleged there was a racial element and these are investigated, but no central record is kept. If the hon. Member has a particular case or cases in mind, he may wish to write.

Prison Discipline (Report)

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce his detailed response to the recommendations in the "Report of the Committee on the Prison Disciplinary System", Cmnd 9641.

Mr. Hurd: The Government's proposals are published today in the White Paper, "Prison Disciplinary System in England and Wales", (Cmnd. 9920).

Women Prisoners (Pregnancy)

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many women detained in Her Majesty's prison, Holloway experienced complications necessitating transfer to a general hospital during pregnancy in each month of the current year;

(2) how many women detained in Her Majesty's prison, Holloway experienced pregnancy which ended in the death of the foetus before full term during each month of the current year;

(3) how many women in custody in England experienced pregnancy which ended in the death of the foetus before full term during each month of the current year;

TRANSPORT

British Rail

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Transport what subjects were discussed when he last met the chairman of British Rail.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend discussed a wide range of matters of current interest with the chairman.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress on the proposals to improve the passenger rail service on the East coast route.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend inspected the East cost main line electrification work on 15 October. Work is slightly ahead of programme and well within budget. The first electric services are due to operate between Hitchin and Huntingdon on 3 November — a full six months ahead of programme. Contracts have been let for some two thirds of the investment, including the new high speed Electra locomotives. Full electric services between London and Leeds are due to start in October 1989 (although trial runs could start as soon as summer 1988) and to Edinburgh in May 1991.

M25 (Completion)

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the completion of the remaining section of the M25 London orbital motorway between the A1 and A41.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The section from west of the A41 to Bricket Wood opened on 17 October. The final section, up to the A1, will be opened on 29 October.

Bus Services

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Transport what changes in Sunday bus services he now expects as a result of service tendering pursuant to the Transport Act 1985.

Mr. David Mitchell: I understand that the level of Sunday bus services has been broadly maintained, although there are some variations (including improvements) from one part of the country to the other. There have been reductions on some of the least used services where subsidy represented particularly poor value for ratepayers' money, and gave particularly little benefit to travellers; it is one of the advantages of the Transport Act 1985 that it has enabled many local authorities to examine more closely the allocation of bus service subsidies, and to secure maximum value for money.

North Devon Link Road

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to advertise and let contracts for stage 2A and 2B of the north Devon link road together with the Barnstaple by-pass and Barnstaple relief road.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We expect to invite tenders for stage 2A later this year and to let a contract early in 1987.

Progress on stage 2B is subject to completion of the remaining statutory procedures necessitated by the modifications agreed to the orders. I will inform my hon. friend as soon as a timetable can be set.

We expect to invite tenders for Barnstaple by-pass next spring, and to let a contract in the summer.

The Barnstaple relief road is a responsibility of the Devon county council.

THE ARTS

Tate Gallery of the North

Mr. Parry asked the Minister for the Arts what is the anticipated date of the opening of the Tate Gallery of the North.

Mr. Luce: I understand that the trustees of the Tate Gallery plan to open the Tate in the North in the early summer of 1988.

Museums and Galleries (Merseyside)

Mr. Parry asked the Minister for the Arts what is the estimate of the budget of national museums and galleries on Merseyside in the financial years 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Luce: The grant-in-aid for the national museums and galleries on Merseyside is £8·745 million for 1986-87. I expect this to be broadly maintained in real terms for the next two years.

Mr. Parry asked the Minister for the Arts (1) if there are any plans to appoint a historian to the board of trustees of the Merseyside Museum of Labour History; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list the names and occupations of members of the board of trustees of the Merseyside Museum of Labour History.

Mr. Luce: The Merseyside Museum of Labour History is the responsibility of the board of trustees of the national museums and galleries on Merseyside. I listed the present members of the board, and their occupations, in my reply of 21 October to the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing). I have no plans at present to make any further appointments to the board.

Mr. Parry asked the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received concerning the future of the present siting of the Merseyside Museum of Labour History.

Mr. Luce: The siting of the Merseyside Museum of Labour History is a matter for the trustees of the national museums and galleries on Merseyside. I understand that the trustees are to review certain accommodation questions shortly. I have received no direct representations on the subject, but my hon. Friend the Member for Wirral, West (Mr. Hunt) has drawn to my attention a letter from the Merseyside divisional organiser of the Transport and General Workers Union.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Council of Agriculture Ministers

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest meeting of the Council of Agriculture Ministers.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the press notice issued by my Department on 16 October recording the outcome of the Agriculture Council on 13-14 October, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Animals (Exports)

Mr. Madden asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what representations he has received, from the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and others, about the suffering of animals subject to the Export of Animals Protection Order 1981; if he plans further action to protect live animals, exported from the United Kingdom under licence, from suffering; what action he is taking, within the European Economic Community, to ensure member states enforce European Economic Community directives concerning safeguards against animal suffering; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many United Kingdom exporters of live animals have been fined for breaches of licence conditions, issued by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food under the Export of Animals Protection Order 1981, since 1981 to date; what fines have been imposed in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department is not aware that any exporters have been fined under the Export of Animals (Protection) Order 1981. Over the years we have received many representations about the export of live food animals, and Compassion in World Farming has recently expressed concern about the impact of protests by French farmers on the welfare of exported British sheep. We have obtained assurances at the highest level from the French authorities that they would take steps to protect future trade, and are continuing to make vigorous representations to them.

The Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has also submitted reports that sheep destined for France have been sent on to Spain. We do not license exports to that country because it has not implemented Community safeguards on animal welfare. We have contacted the French and Spanish authorities to discuss these reports and ask for their future co-operation. We are also investigating whether breaches of the 1981 order have occurred and have demanded more extensive information before future export licences for sheep to France are issued.

DEFENCE

Royal Ordnance Factories

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what effect the sale of Royal Ordnance factory, Leeds will have on his policy of competitive tendering as it relates to battle tanks;

(2) what will be the effect of the sale of Royal Ordnance factories on the competitive tendering policy with regard to main battle tanks.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence indicated in the House on 24 July, full national competition for main battle tanks is not a practical long-term aim when the likely value of business cannot justify or sustain competitive industrial capacities required. The change of ownership at Leeds and the new investment should however in themselves ensure greater efficiency in satisfying our orders as well as enabling the factory to offer even more effective performance against the foreign competition and to participate more powerfully in collaborative ventures. Competition at the important sub-contractor level will of course continue. The prospective sale of the remaining Royal Ordnance factories should have no effect upon competitive tender opportunities in the main battle tank field.

RAF Wittering

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the number of empty Royal Air Force houses at RAF Wittering over the past five years on a yearly basis.

Mr. Freeman: The number of empty houses otherwise available for RAF use over the past five years at RAF Wittering were as follows:

July	Empty houses
1982	166
1983	281
1984	238
1985	125
1986	122

Of these quarters, 26 are held for allocation to RAF personnel. The USAF has asked to make use of 41 and is considering its possible need for the remainder.

In addition, 253 houses on the base are already earmarked for use by United States forces rather than the RAF, and about 50 per cent. of these are at present unoccupied awaiting modernisation.

NATO

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation meeting at Gleneagles and its significance for follow-up strategy following the Reykjavik talks.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made earlier today.

Royal Ordnance Factories plc.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the prospectus for the sale of Royal Ordnance Factories plc.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. As it has been decided not to proceed with plans for a public offer of shares in Royal Ordnance plc no offer for sale document known as a prospectus will be published. It is now our intention to sell Royal Ordnance privately and to this end a detailed information memorandum has been prepared. This document is not a prospectus and it would not be appropriate to make it generally available. Recipients are obliged to enter a confidentiality agreement.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the latest situation regarding the sale of Royal Ordnance Factories plc.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In accordance with plans announced to the House of Commons by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 24 July 1986 —column 618—the tank building factory at Leeds has been sold to Vickers plc; and we are now seeking bids for Royal Ordnance plc as a whole on the basis of an information memorandum.

US Base (Holy Loch)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the terms of the agreement between the United Kingdom and the United States Government in relation to the United States base at Holy Loch.

Mr. Stanley: Use of the base at the Holy Loch is covered by confidential agreements between the United Kingdom and United States Governments.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions have taken place between his Department and the United States Department of Defence about the future of the Holy Loch base; what has been the outcome of the discussions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: Discussions of this kind are confidential. The United States Defence Secretary stated on 22 October that there was no truth whatever in recent stories about United States intentions to withdraw from the Holy Loch.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

HMS Glamorgan

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning the sale of HMS Glamorgan to the Chilean navy; what his response was; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a number of representations from right hon. and hon. Members and from the public concerning this sale. We take scrupulous care not to approve the supply of defence items which in our judgment are likely to be used for internal repression. A naval destroyer does not come into this category.

Chile

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Chile respecting the violation of human rights in that country following the reimposition of a state of siege on 7 September and the ensuing loss of life.

Mr. Eggar: EC Foreign Ministers issued a statement on 16 September calling for the lifting of the state of siege and the release of those detained, deploring all violence, and expressing concern at recent loss of life. My right hon. and learned Friend reiterated these concerns in his EC Presidency address to the United Nations General Assembly on 24 September, and at his bilateral meeting with the Chilean Foreign Minister on 25 September.

Gibraltar

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek to make an official visit to the dependent territory of Gibraltar, and have discussions with the Chief Minister and other Gibraltar Government elected representatives on the future of the territory.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to visit Gibraltar in the near future, but he naturally consults the Chief Minister and his colleagues at regular intervals.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the removal of the ceremonial frontier guard from the border post in the dependent territory of Gibraltar.

Mr. Eggar: The guard was withdrawn on 31 July. It no longer seems appropriate to have a guard of this nature at a frontier between two countries who are European Community partners and North Atlantic Treaty Organisation allies. The Spanish Government have not yet withdrawn their guard. We will continue to press them to do so.

GCHQ

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the shortage of radio operators at Government communications headquarters, Cheltenham.

Mr. Renton: There is no such shortage. Recruitment continues to be successful and it is expected on present trends that the planned strength of radio officers at GCHQ will be maintained up to and beyond the end of the decade.

Visas

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what he estimates to be (a) the average and (b) the maximum distances which visa applicants from the Indian state of Gujerat will have to travel in order to attend at the nearest British consulate.

Mr. Eggar: The maximum distance to the deputy high commission in Bombay from any part of the state of Gujerat is approximately 875 kms. The average distance travelled by visa applicants is not known and could be calculated only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what delay he anticipates will be incurred by people from the Indian state of Gujerat seeking to visit relatives in the United Kingdom as a result of the introduction of a visa system.

Mr. Eggar: Procedures for the issue of entry clearance have been streamlined and additional entry clearance officers have been sent to Bombay. It is hoped that any delay will normally be well within the period which most people spend planning international travel. Intending applicants are advised to apply as far in advance as possible.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs wha he estimates will be the cost to Her Majesty's Government of installing additional visa officers or other immigration personnel in India, including their cost of passage and accommodation.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Newham, South (Mr. Spearing) on 21 October. The recurrent costs, which include cost of passage and accommodation, of installing additional visa officers or other immigration personnel in India are estimated to be £3·1 million in 1987-88.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many new visa officers or other immigration officials he anticipates will have to be sent to India in order to deal with visa applications in that country.

Mr. Eggar: Twelve additional entry clearance officers are being sent to India. They will be joined by relief entry clearance officers, as necessary, during the seasonal peaks.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visa officers or other immigration officials he intends to station in the Indian state of Gujerat.

Mr. Eggar: None. The nearest entry clearance issuing post will be the British deputy high commission at Bombay.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visitors are estimated to have come to the United Kingdom from the Indian state of Gujerat during the last year for which records are available.

Mr. Eggar: The information is not available as statistics are maintained by country of origin only.

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report in tabular form the names of all those countries which require British citizens to provide an entry visa for the purpose of making a visit.

Mr. Eggar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton (Mr. Kaufman) on 21 October.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many additional staff, dealing with visa applications, were at each post in India, Bangladesh and Pakistan on 14 October.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton (Mr. Kaufman) on 21 October. Of the three additional staff concerned, two were in Karachi and one in Dhaka.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications for visas have been received in Colombo since the scheme was introduced; and how many have been (a) granted and (b) refused and how many appeals against refusal have been (i) lodged, (ii) granted and (iii) turned down.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is given in the following table:

31 May 1985—16 October 1986

	Visa applications
Received	13,698
Granted	12,173
Refused	1,130
	Appeals
Lodged	458
Withdrawn	25
Allowed	36
Dismissed	71

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the visa requirements of individual Commonwealth countries as they affect the citizens of other countries within the Commonwealth.

Mr. Eggar: I regret the information requested is not held by this Department and can be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state the average amount of time it will take for applications for visitors' visas to be finalised in India, Bangladesh and Pakistan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The waiting time from first application to decision varies from case to case. But, depending on the numbers applying, visit applications are normally finalised on the same day that they are received, unless further inquiries need to be made.

Underground Nuclear Tests

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what account his Department takes, in dealing with problems of verification of underground nuclear tests, of the agreement of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to on-site monitoring.

Mr. Renton: As they stand at present, the qualified nature of such offers would not in our view provide adequate levels of verification for a comprehensive test ban treaty. In any case, a range of technical problems would still need resolution. We welcome signs from the Reykjavik meeting between President Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev that the Soviet Union is prepared seriously to address verification issues, in the context of ratification of the threshold test ban treaty and peaceful nuclear explosion treaty. But the questions raised by verification of a CTBT will be of a different order.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what priority he gives to the establishment of negative security assurances to non-nuclear weapon states, as a means of preventing the spread of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Renton: The United Kingdom and all other nuclear weapon states have given unilateral assurances to non-nuclear weapon states, but we continue to attach the highest importance to the non-proliferation treaty as the main defence against the spread of nuclear weapons.

Departure Taxation

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report the names of those commonwealth countries which levy a departure tax on departing British citizens together with the amount of the tax in each case expressed in pound sterling at the current rate of exchange.

Mr. Eggar: According to the latest available information, airport taxes are levied by the following Commonwealth countries on departing passengers of all nationalities:

Note: Taxes are normally paid in local currency upon departure. In many countries diplomats, transit passengers and infants are exempt. Taxes for children vary. (A)—Not applicable to transit passengers and infants under 2 years. (B)—Not applicable to transit passengers.

Turks and Caicos Islands

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in the Turks and Caicos Islands.

Mr. Eggar: There is little to add to the statement that I made to the House on 25 July. The constitutional commission referred to in that statement was duly appointed on 15 September under Sir Roy Marshall a former vice-chancellor of Hull univerisity. The commission will assemble in the Turks and Caicos Islands on 5 November and is expected to conclude its review by the end of the year.

On 24 September, the Governor of the Turks and Caicos Islands acting on the instructions of the Secretary of State appointed a commission of inquiry to investigate allegations about irregularities in the transfer of Crown land in 1983. The commissioner, Mr. Louis Blom-Cooper, QC, has already begun his investigations.

South Africa

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the criteria which Her Majesty's Government will require to be satisfied for Her Majesty's Government to recognise Bophuthatswana.

Mrs. Chalker: The normal criteria which the Government apply for recognition of a state are that it should have, and seem likely to continue to have, a clearly defined territory with a population, a Government who are able of themselves to exercise effective control of that territory, and independence in their external relations. Other factors, including some United Nations resolutions, may also be relevant.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all visits by his officials to Transkei, Venda and Ciskei setting out the dates and purpose.

Mrs. Chalker: We have no official contacts. There have been occasional visits by officials for consular purposes. A comprehensive list is not available.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy regarding attitude and contact towards (a) Transkei, Venda, Bophuthatswana and Ciskei and (b) the homelands in South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: The United Kingdom does not recognise Transkei, Venda, Bophuthatswana or Ciskei as independent states; there are therefore no official contacts with them. The so-called homelands are an integral part of the Republic of South Africa and are treated as such.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests have been received from Bophuthatswana for visits or discussions by his officials; and what response has been given.

Mrs. Chalker: We eschew official contacts with Bophuthatswana.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when was the last time any of his officials visited Bophuthatswana; and if he will set out a schedule of contact his officials have had with Bophuthatswana since March 1983.

Mrs. Chalker: We have no official contacts. There have been occasional visits by officials for consular purposes. A comprehensive list is not available.

Reykjavik Summit

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the final proposal on intermediate nuclear forces in Europe which was provisionally agreed between the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics at the Reykjavik summit; and if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards a separate agreement on intermediate nuclear forces which would involve the removal of all SS20, cruise and Pershing II missiles from Europe.

Mr. Renton: At the Reykjavik meeting between President Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev a global ceiling of 100 LRINF warheads was provisionally agreed. All the Soviet systems would be deployed in Asia and the United States systems in the United States. We welcome any equal global limit on LRINF.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Natural and Herbal Medicines

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will review the structure of the committees advising him in the practice of natural and herbal medicines; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: There are a number of committees that advise my right hon. Friend on the provision of medical and pharmaceutical services.

Doctors may prescribe any drugs including natural and herbal medicines (for example, senna tablets) which they feel are suitable for individual patients. These medicines are available at National Health Service expense unless they are included in Schedule 3A to the National Health Service (General Medical and Pharmaceutical Services) Regulations 1974.

Reyes Syndrome

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list the over the counter medicinal products sold for babies and children which contain aspirin or aspirin derivatives; and what advice has he received regarding the continued sale of these products;

(2) how significant was the risk factor study regarding Reyes syndrome in the decision of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on the use of children's aspirin; who paid for the study; what was the nature of his

Department's involvement; and in what way he intends that his Department should support continuation of the study or work on its implications;

(3) whether the Committee on Safety of Medicines received any representations or communications from the aspirin manufacturers during the period in 1985 when it was considering the relationship between the use of aspirin and Reyes syndrome;

(4) precisely when the Committee on Safety of Medicines first received evidence from the United States that the number of reports of Reyes syndrome had fallen in line with the fall in the use of aspirin; what was the source of the information; who sent it; and what was the response of the Committee.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the right hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what references to aspirin are made in Health Education Council literature and what changes have been made following the recommendation that aspirin should not be given to children.

Mrs. Currie: The recommendation that aspirin should not be given to children was announced by my right hon. Friend the Member for Brentford and Isleworth (Mr. Hayhoe) in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 10 June 1986 at columns 145-46. The current edition of the Health Education Council booklet, "Minor Illness — How to treat it at home", which refers to the use of soluble aspirin in the treatment of sore throats, colds and sunburn, has been withdrawn so that a clear statement can be included warning of the dangers of giving aspirin to children.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many (a) young persons and (b) adults are known to have suffered from Reyes syndrome.

Mrs. Currie: I regret I cannot give the right hon. Member all the information he seeks. A joint study of Reyes syndrome in children commenced in 1981 and is conducted by the British Paediatric Association and the Public Health Laboratory Service Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre. The available figures are given in the the table.

Lithotripsy

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current state of the descriptive study being carried out at St. Thomas's hospital, London, to compare lithotripsy with alternatives; when the study began and when it is due to end and at what estimated cost; and what other studies are known to the Department into extra-corporeal shock-wave lithotripsy (ESWL).

Mrs. Currie: The collection of data for this study is expected to be completed by the end of 1986. Preliminary results are expected in the spring of 1987. The study was approved for three years from April 1985 at an estimated cost of £70,000. The Department is not aware of any similar research studies in the National Health Service.

"Breaking the Sound Barrier"

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action his Department has taken in the light of the "Breaking the Sound Barrier" campaign of the Royal National Institute for the Deaf, Age Concern England and the British Association for the Hard of Hearing; if there is any further action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The Department has been closely associated with the campaign since the planning stage. Ministers continue to give support by letter, in speeches and by attending meetings. We are in process of consulting professional and other bodies about cutting waiting times for National Health Service hearing aids and actively pursuing the possibility of linking the promotion of induction loop systems with the Sympathetic Hearing Scheme to which the Department has already given considerable financial support.

Deaf People

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many pre-lingual deaf people there are in Britain.

Mr. Major: I regret that statistics are not collected in this form and the registers kept by local authorities in England are not truly representative. However, it appears to be generally estimated that the prevalence of pre-lingual deafness is around one per thousand of live births.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many health service units provide specifically for the mental health of profoundly deaf people; where they are located; what is their size in terms of both professional staff and patients treated; what provision there is in regions which do not have such a unit; and how much supra-regional funding is provided.

Mr. Major: Two units within the National Health Service are known to provide specialist psychiatric services for people who are deaf. These are located at the Springfield hospital, in Wandsworth, and at the Whittingham hospital in Preston. The numbers of patients treated in 1985-86 were:

	In-patient/discharges and deaths	Out-patient attendances
Springfield hospital	27	187
Whittingham hospital	56	183

Information is not held centrally on the numbers of staff appointed directly to these units.

In addition, building is scheduled to start on a major new psychiatric unit at the Queen Elizabeth hospital, Birmingham, early in 1990. The unit will include specialist facilities for patients throughout the west midlands region with particular needs, including deaf people with psychiatric disorders. The building is scheduled for completion in 1993.

Supra-regional funds are not at present provided for this service, though North Western and South West Thames regional health authorities have recently applied for their services to be supra-regionally designated. These applications are currently under consideration by the Supra Regional Services Advisory Group.

The principle of supra-regional services is to make available a highly-specialised facility to patients from regions which do not contain such a facility themselves.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the nature and extent of provision for the mental health needs of deaf people including the extent of domiciliary provision, the number of hostels, and the number of professional people in the National Health Service who are able to communicate fluently with the pre-lingually deaf people.

Mr. Major: The mental health needs of the majority of deaf people can be met within the general mental health services. Domiciliary provision and hostels form part of these general services, and are available to deaf people. However, information is not collected centrally about the extent of such domiciliary services or hostel provision, or about the number of professional people working in the National Health Service who are able to communicate fluently with pre-lingually deaf people.

A small proportion of deaf people have a profound hearing handicap or are pre-lingually deaf, and require special communication skills from those who work with them. Such skills are available in the two specialist psychiatric units at Whittingham hospital, Preston, and Springfield hospital, London.

Psychiatric Beds

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many psychiatric in-patient beds there are in Britain per 100,000 people; and what are the corresponding figures for psychiatric beds, where there are staff able to communicate, per 100,000 pre-lingually deaf people.

Mr. Major: In 1985, the latest year for which figures are available centrally, the average daily number of available beds in mental illness specialities per 100,000 population in England was 161. Information for the rest of Great Britain is a matter for the my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales. Information is not held centrally on the corresponding figures for psychiatric beds where the staff are able to communicate with pre-lingually deaf patients.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give the latest figures for the percentage of in-patient cases that have to wait for longer than one year in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the west midlands region, (c) the four Thames regions, (d) the North Staffordshire district health authority and (e) the district health authorities with the highest and lowest percentage figures in the west midlands region;

(2) if he will give the latest figures for the percentage of urgent in-patient cases that have to wait for longer than one month in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the west midlands region, (c) the four Thames regions, (d) the North Staffordshire district health authority and (e) the district health authorities with the highest and lowest percentage figures in the west midlands region.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the right hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much additional money will be allocated to the hospital service specifically for the purpose of cutting waiting lists; and what representations he has received from health authority managers regarding the amount that would be required for a significant improvement.

Mr. Newton: Health authorities have been asked to report by the end of this month on how the position on waiting lists and times can be improved. The Government consider that there is much scope for improving services to patients and reducing waiting times by management action to bring about better use of resources.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will publish a list of district health authorities in rank order according to the percentage figure of in-patients who have to wait for over a year for treatment;

(2) if he will publish a list of district health authorities in rank order according to the percentage of urgent in-patient cases who have to wait for over a month.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the right hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Irradiated Food

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will make publicly available all the documentary comments on the report on the "Safety and Wholesomeness of Irradiated Foods" by the advisory committee on irradiated and novel foods which have been submitted to date to his Department for consideration; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many comments he has had from (a) individuals and (b) organisations on the report on the "Safety and Wholesomeness of Irradiated Foods" by the advisory committee on irradiated and novel foods published on 10 April; if he will list the organisations concerned; and if he will state what proportion of the comments were broadly in favour or against the report's recommendations;

(3) if he is now in a position to announce his conclusions on the findings contained in the report on the "Safety and Wholesomeness of Irradiated Foods" by the advisory committee on irradiated and novel foods; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Around 4,600 individuals and 117 organisations have commented. A summary of comments will be given to the advisory committee on irradiated and novel foods in December. Health and Agriculture Ministers will consider the report in the light of any further advice from the committee.

We do not intend, following standard practice, to publish all the thousands of comments received on the report, most of which raise similar points in similar terms. When making our views known, we will, however, also make available a summary of the main issues raised.

The majority of letters from individuals voice concern as to the safety of the process. Organisations offer varied views according to interest and scientific background. Common to all is the desire for effective and enforceable controls of the process and that irradiated food should be clearly labelled. Several point out the dangers of active organisms in food and their risks to health which might be diminished following irradiation.

Primary Health Care (Hampstead)

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the expenditure on primary health care in the Hampstead district health authority in the last three years; and what was the average for English district health authorities.

Mr. Newton: Following are the figures requested:

Expenditure on primary health care[1]

	1983-84		1984-85		1985-86[2]
	Total £ million	Per head of population £	Total £ million	Per head of population £	Total £ million	Per head of population £
Hampstead Health Authority	9·8	93	10·7	101	11·2	105
Average for district health authorities in England		76		83		88

[1] Current expenditure on community health services plus net expenditure on family practitioner services. The latter expenditure cannot strictly be attributed to particular districts but has been included (pro rata to population) from the annual accounts of the family practitioner committees which account for it.
[2] Provisional figures.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of people in Dundee currently awaiting an appeal to a supplementary benefit tribunal; and what was the corresponding figure two years ago.

Mr. Lyell: Departmental figures are not available for areas smaller than a social security region. I suggest that the hon. Member writes to the president of social security appeal tribunals who, I understand, will be able to provide information on the number of appeals currently awaiting a hearing.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current waiting time for the result of an adjudication from a supplementary benefits tribunal in (a) Dundee and (b) Scotland as a whole; and what action he proposes to take to reduce these waiting times.

Mr. Lyell: The latest available statistics, which relate to the quarter ended 31 December 1985, show that the average length of time from lodgement of an appeal to tribunal hearing in supplementary benefit cases is 11·6 weeks in Scotland. Equivalents are not available for localities smaller than a social security region. We are concerned at the time taken to process appeals and a study has been commissioned to examine procedures. We are aware that the president of social security appeal tribunals is similarly concerned and is also examining procedures with a view to reducing waiting times.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons were classed as long-term unemployed for the purpose of receiving supplementary benefit 12 months ago, six months ago and at the latest available date; and if he will distinguish those persons receiving the long-term rate of supplementary benefit in each case.

Mr. Lyell: The number of supplementary benefit claimants unemployed for more than one year was 1,032,800 on 14 November 1985 and 1,027,700 on 8 May 1986.

The long-term scale rate is not normally payable to a claimant who is unemployed and subject to the condition of availability for work but at December 1984 there were 25,000 long-term unemployed claimants who were receiving the long-term scale rate either because they had a partner over 60 or because they were not required to be available for supplementary benefit purposes but had chosen none the less to claim as unemployed.

The dates given are the latest at which the information requested is available.

Rents

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how much has been paid by his Department for rented accommodation for young persons in Scotland in the years 1984, 1985 and the latest available figures for 1986;

(2) what guidelines are issued to his Department's officials in Scotland in relation to the payment of rent to landlords for rooms tenanted by young persons;

(3) what checks are carried out by his Department's officials in Scotland when paying rent on behalf of young persons regarding the standard of declaration, the amount and condition of the furnishings and the availability of bathroom and toilet facilities; and whether regular checks are made on the properties for which rent is being paid;

(4) if he will conduct an investigation into allegations of overcharging by landlords for rooms tenanted by young unemployed persons whose rent is paid by his Department's offices in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: No information is available centrally on the amount of housing benefit paid to young people in Scotland for rented accommodation.

Help with rent is provided through the housing benefit scheme which is administered by local authorities. Authorities can restrict the amount of rent eligible for benefit in certain circumstances if they consider that the rent is unreasonably high.

Advice to local authorities on the use of their power to restrict benefit on unreasonably high rents is included in a guidance manual on housing benefits administration issued by the Department (a copy is in the Library), but it is for the responsible authority to decide what checks should be carried out to enable it to decide whether a restriction should be applied. We plan to strengthen local authorities' powers to prevent abuse of the revised housing benefit scheme from April 1988.

We have no plans to conduct an investigation into allegations of overcharging by landlords in Scotland for rooms tenanted by young people in receipt of housing benefit, but I hope that any specific evidence of abuse will be passed to the relevant local authority.

Methylene Chloride

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the permitted level of methylene chloride in decaffeinated coffee; if his Department has studied United States Food and Drug Administration surveys of the potentially harmful effects of methylene chloride in hairsprays; and if he will make a statement on the levels of methylene chloride permitted.

Mrs. Currie: We are advised that methylene chloride is a solvent with many uses, which includes the decaffeination of coffee. Any residue in the final coffee product must not exceed five parts per million.

The only recent research from the United States of America of which we are aware tested for carcinogenic effects on animals and was concerned with the effects of inhalation of methylene chloride in general, rather than hairsprays in particular. Whilst carcinogenic effects were indicated in animals exposed, the doses involves were vastly in excess of any which could be received from using a hairspray. Earlier studies of workers showed no adverse effects from methylene chloride.

We are awaiting further advice on the safety in use of methylene chloride in the light of these recent studies. There are at present no statutory limits on the amount of methylene chloride which hairsprays may contain. In the light of the independent advice received, it will be for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to consider any action which may be required.

Diabetics

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will arrange for plastic sugar level testing strips and plastic syringes to be available to diabetics on prescription; what representations he has received on this issue; what are the estimated net costs of making such items available on prescription; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Blood glucose testing strips and plastic syringes are already available to diabetics through the hospital service where clinically necessary. We have received many representations from hon. Members and others requesting that they be prescribed by general practitioners. In round terms, this would cost the family practitoner services about £15 million to £20 million a year. At present the necessary resources are not available, and in any event it would be necessary to consider priorities, bearing in mind the many other desirable developments to which any additional resources may be devoted.

Departmental Staffing and Claims

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will state the number of staff employed in his Department's local office in (a) August 1979 and (b) August 1986 in the Greater London area;

(2) if he will state the number of benefit claims in action, live load, in (a) August 1979 and (b) August 1986 in the Greater London area.

Mr. Lyell: Comprehensive figures are not available on the number of staff employed in the Department's offices within the Greater London area before April 1983. Some offices within the Greater London area deal with areas outside the Greater London area as the boundaries are not coterminous.

Information that is available is as follows:

	August 1979	August 1983	August 1986
Number of staff employed in the Greater London area	n.a.	9,402	9,942
Number of people receiving supplementary benefit[1]	446,589	658,564	775,227

[1] Based on a 100 per cent. count of cases in action in August.
n.a. = not available.

Direct comparisons between the number of staff and claims are misleading as workloads vary considerably by type and duration of claim and the action that has to be taken. All these factors vary over time as a result of legislative, policy and procedural changes. Examples of such changes are the introduction of housing benefit and postal claim forms.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state the number of benefit claims awaiting processing, backlog, in (a) August 1979 and (b) August 1986 in the Greater London area.

Mr. Lyell: Figures for the number of claims awaiting action in local offices are not available for the period before 1983. On 30 August 1983, 21,691 claims for supplementary benefit were awaiting action in local offices serving the Greater London area. The comparable figure for 26 August this year was 38,712.

Training Programmes

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if attendance on or completion of a course relating to the Government's restart programme or the proposed six-month training programme for the long-term unemployed under 25 years will affect entitlement to supplementary benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Geriatric Care

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many beds were available for geriatric care in the (a) public and (b) private sector in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985;

(2) how many geriatric patients were treated in (a) public and (b) private sector hospitals in each of the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mrs. Currie: Information is not collected centrally in precisely the form requested. I shall let the hon. Member have the available information as soon as possible.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received regarding the number of beds available for geriatric care in British hospitals.

Mrs. Currie: There have been no recent formal representations from organised bodies about the number of beds available in geriatric units. We are in close consultation with regional health authorities concerning services for geriatric patients in their regions.

Mental Illness

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how much money was made available by the Government for local authorities to provide for those suffering from mental illness in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985;

(2) how much money was spent by each local authority in providing care for those suffering from mental illness in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985 specifying the sum spent authority by authority.

Mrs. Currie: The Government do not allocate money to local authorities specifically for expenditure on services for mentally ill people. General support for expenditure is provided through the rate support grant system and it is for local authorities to determine levels of spending on specific services in the light of local circumstances and priorities within the overall framework of relevant Government policies and plans.

Some information about annual expenditure by individual local authorities on services for mentally ill people and figures on the numbers of places made available in day centres and residential accommodation by local authorities are published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy each year in "Personal Social Services Statistics: Actuals", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients were readmitted to mental institutions within (a) 0 to one month, (b) one to three months, (c) three to six months, (d) six to 12 months, (e) one to two years and (f) two to three years of their original release in each of the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks as it is not available centrally. The hon. Member might like to write to the chairman of the regional health authority for the geographical area of his interest for further information.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received regarding female psychiatric patients.

Mrs. Currie: We are not aware of any such recent representations. We are in close consultation with the regional health authorities concerning provision of psychiatric services for women and men in their regions.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received regarding the standard of community care for those released from mental institutions.

Mrs. Currie: We continue to receive a large number of representations about community care for mentally disordered people reflecting a very natural concern, which my right hon. Friend shares, that community care services should be comprehensive, flexible, accessible and acceptable. These concerns were well illustrated in the second report from the Social Services Committee published in January 1985, and in the Government response to that report. We pursue these concerns in the context of ministerial reviews with chairmen of regional health authorities and in other ways.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women were admitted to mental institutions in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mrs. Currie: The table shows the numbers of admissions of women to National Health Service mental illness and mental handicap hospitals and units in England. Some women may have been admitted more than once during a year.

Admissions of women to mental illness and mental handicap hospitals and units in England

Year	Mental illness	Mental handicap

1984	111,936	15,712
1985	116,429	17,281

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much money was spent on mental institutions in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mrs. Currie: Costing returns submitted by health authorities in England show their total current expenditure on hospitals categorised as mental illness and mental handicap as:

Year	Mental illness £ million	Mental handicap £ million
1979-80	486·8	261·8
1980-81	625·0	339·2

1983-84	748·4	418·2
1984-85	788·8	440·7

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients were accommodated in mental institutions in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is given in the table:

Resident Patients at 31 December in National Health Service mental illness and mental handicap hospitals and units in England

Radiotherapy

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidance he has provided to regional health authorities about the minimum numbers of new patients requiring radiotherapy treatment which should be the basis of an area radiotherapy unit; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 21 October 1986]: Guidance on the organisation of radiotherapy services for the treatment of cancer is contained in HC(78)32, a copy of which is in the Library. Further guidance is contained in a report an acute services for cancer by an expert working group of the standing sub-committee on cancer of the Department's standing medical advisory committee. This was sent to health authorities under cover of HN(84)23, a copy of which is also in the Library.

Both the guidance and the report on acute services for cancer draw attention to the variety of factors that health authorities will need to take into account. They envisage that over 3,000 new cancer cases, a substantial proportion of whom will require radiotherapy, will arise annually from a population of one million, and that normally a population of one million is considered to be the smallest to produce a sufficient caseload for a clinically and economically viable ratiotherapy centre.

WALES

Rates

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the average unrebated domestic rate bill paid in each year since 1966 by householders in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is given in the following table:

[1] Figures for the period 1966–67 to 1973–74 are not compatible with those for 1974–75 and later years. This is due to changes in local authority responsibilities in 1974, in particular the transfer of water and sewerage services from local authorities to water authorities.

Rate Support Grant

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the amount of rate support grant paid to each local authority in Wales in each of the years from 1978-79 to 1986-87 expressed in constant 1986-87 prices.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Figures for each of the years from 1981-82 to 1986-87 are given in the table below. Prior to 1981-82 rate support grant arrangements were different and comparable figures for individual authorities are not available. Rate support grant consists of a block grant paid to all local authorities and a domestic rate relief grant which is paid to district authorities as a flat rate subsidy to reduce the level of rates including the county precept, paid by domestic ratepayers. The block grant figures for 1986-87 are the amounts that would be paid by scaling all authorities' block grant claims to the total available. Block grant entitlements will be revised by the forthcoming Welsh rate support grant supplementary reports for 1984-85, 1985-86 and 1986-87. All figures are expressed in real terms at 1986-87 prices using the GDP (market prices) deflator.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Higher Education

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out in tabular form the amount of money from public funds allocated to (a) the universities and (b) public sector institutions of higher education in each year from 1970 to the latest available date; and what this represents in terms of public expenditure per student in each case.

Mr. Walden: The following table shows the readily available information in respect of (a) central Government funding, plus home fee income, for the universities, and (b) estimated central and local government expenditure on public sector higher education net of income, except fees.

£ million cash Financial Years

Capital and current	Outturn
	1979–80	1980–81	1981–82	1982–83	1983–84	1984–85

Open University (UK)	42	52	55	56	57	60
Public Sector higher education (England)	652	796	881	925	965	998

The following table gives the average cost per student based on net institutional expenditure. Broadly speaking, this consists of the above expenditure less capital, and central administration costs.

Further Education Unit

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what role the further education unit will play in relation to the new National Council for Vocational Qualifications.

Mrs. Rumbold: My Department is currently undertaking a review of the future of the further education unit, in the light of changes over recent years in the context of its work. One such change is the establishment of the National Council for Vocational Qualifications. The Department's consultative document raises, as one possible option, a merger between the unit and the council. Irrespective of the outcome of that review, I am sure that the unit will have a considerable contribution to make to the research and development effort needed to support the council's activities the council has already commissioned some work from the unit.

Willesden College of Technology

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action has been taken to improve matters which were the subject of criticism by Her Majesty's inspectors reporting on their inspection of Willesden college of technology in November 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: In line with usual practice the Department has written to the local education authority and expects to hear by 21 November, 1986 what action it and the college governors are proposing to take in response to the report's findings on aspects of part-time FE professional courses in construction and engineering.

Mathematics and Science Teachers

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action is being taken to alleviate the shortage of qualified teachers in the subjects of mathematics and physics.

Mrs. Rumbold: Various measures to improve the numbers and quality of mathematics and physics teachers were set out in the consultative document "Action on Teacher Supply in Mathematics, Physics and Technology'. Since that document was published we have announced a new in-service teacher training grants scheme for 1987-88 which accords priority funding to mathematics and physics. Funds have been set aside to support specially-designed training courses in local authority higher education. From this autumn bursaries will be payable to postgraduate students training to teach mathematics and physics.

GCSE

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what Government funding is available to provide the necessary facilities for the new GCSE courses and examinations within the county of Avon.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government have directed substantial resources to ensure the smooth introduction of the GCSE, in addition to local education authorities' own plans. In support of expenditure for books and equipment in schools in Avon we have made available £251,200 through education support grants this year. A further £178,200 will be supported through ESG in 1987-88. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment in conjunction with the Manpower Services Commission has made a grant of £81,400 available to Avon for the provision of scientific and technological equipment in schools.

For the introductory GCSE in-service training programme, expenditure up to £132,260 has been supported in Avon. Under the new arrangements for in-service training in 1987-88, expenditure of £276,000 has been set aside to support the continuing training of teachers of the GCSE in schools and further education in Avon.

WALES

Mental Health Services (Gwynedd)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has received the Health Advisory Service's report on services for mentally ill people in Gwynedd; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Yes. I fully recognise that the HAS report on services for mentally ill people in Gwynedd identifies many real problems and deficiencies which must be tackled. I am aware that both the Gwynedd district health authority and the county council's social services department accept the thrust of the report and the need for urgent action. They have already produced a consultative document setting out their strategy for adult mental health services in Gwynedd. I commend them for the promptness of their response. The development of locally based mental illness services is a complex process requiring the close co-operation of a number of authorities, including the county council, voluntary bodies and professionals from a number of disciplines.

I have decided in view of the relevance of the issues raised for the whole of Wales that a consultation paper should be prepared setting out the ways in which services for those who are suffering from mental illness can be further developed and improved. With regard to the response which is required locally, the Gwynedd and Clwyd district health authorities and the social services departments of the representative county councils have formed a joint planning team to plan the development of mental illness services in North Wales and this group will consider amongst other things the future of Gwynedd residents at North Wales hospital, Denbigh. Arrangements for these patients are the subject of major criticism in the report and a specific area in which HAS considers that my Department has a role to play. Officials of my Department will be in touch with the authorities in north Wales to review the plans and arrangements that they have already set in hand as well as to consider any further action that may be required.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Trade Statistics

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the average annual rate of increase in the EEC share of United Kingdom exports and imports on manufactures between 1972 and 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: The average annual rate of increase in the proportion of United Kingdom exports of manufactures going to the European Community between 1972 and 1985 was 0·7 per cent. For imports, the figure was 0·9 per cent.

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of the United Kingdom market for manufacturers was taken by (a) the EEC six and (b) the EEC ten in 1975 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Alan Clark: Estimated proportions are given in the table:

Share of United Kingdom Demand[1] (per cent.)

Imports from:	1975	1985
EC 6[2]	8	15
EC 10[3]	10	17

[2] EC 6 comprises France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg.

[3] EC 10 comprises the EC 6 countries, plus Greece, Denmark, the Irish Republic and the United Kingdom.

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the United Kingdom's share of EEC ten imports of manufactures in each year since 1980.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is:

United Kingdom share of European Community[1] imports of manufactures[2]

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to what extent the UK/EEC balance of trade in manufactured goods has been offset by United Kingdom exports of fuels to the EEC.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Bermingham asked the Attorney-General what steps he proposes to take to encourage recruitment to the ranks of the Crown prosecution service of (a) legally qualified staff and (b) non-legally qualified staff.

The Attorney-General: So far as legally qualified staff are concerned, the recruitment position in the Crown prosecution service nationally but excluding London is particularly encouraging and 82 per cent. of posts for legally qualified staff are filled. The position in London is gradually improving. Recruitment will continue to be organised by means of monthly competition advertised prominently in the legal sections of the national press and in legal journals. Considerable success was achieved in raising awareness of the Crown prosecution service as a consequence of the media launch to coincide with the official start date of 1 October. This seems to have been reflected in the number of candidates applying for legal posts in the current competition round. A total of 92 applications were received which represented an increase on previous rounds.

The position with regard to recruitment of non-legally qualified staff is that staff will continue to be engaged locally, as necessary, in respect of clerical grades. Recruitment levels for these grades are satisfactory and no special measures are necessary. Recruitment of executive officers, organised centrally by the Civil Service Commission, has produced a total of 162 staff since April 1986 out of a bid of 197. The remaining vacancies are expected to be filled within the next month.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Attorney-General whether he proposes to reconsider the salary structure of the Crown prosecution service; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The salary structure of the Crown prosecution service is, with one exception, linked to that for the remainder of Civil Service. The exception is the grade of Crown prosecutor — the most junior grade for legally qualified staff. The salary structure for this grade has already been substantially improved from the original proposals and has also been subject to a general increase of approximately 6 per cent. as a consequence of the increase in the pay of Civil Servants operative from 1 April 1986.

The position is always under general review to ensure that the CPS is able to recruit and retain sufficient staff of requisite calibre but in the light of my previous reply today to the hon. Member I see no need for any special review of the salary structure at this stage.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Attorney-General for what period of time he proposes that the temporary secondment from the Crown prosecution service in shire and metropolitan areas to London shall continue

The Attorney-General: The temporary secondment of prosecuting staff to London and other areas will continue to be necessary for some considerable time and it is not possible to estimate when it will end. The need for such secondment into these areas will be reviewed each month taking account of the current or anticipated levels of staffing and will be reduced as quickly as possible.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Attorney-General what is the average monthly cost of the policy of secondment of Crown prosecution staff from the shire and metropolitan areas to London, including the cost of additional agents in the shire and metropolitan areas.

The Attorney-General: The average monthly cost of the policy of secondment of Crown prosecution lawyers from the metropolitan areas to London was approximately £17,000 for the six-month period to 30 September 1986. This figure includes an estimate of £9,000 for the cost of additional agents. Agents would have been employed in London in the absence of seconded lawyers and the £9,000 does not represent net additional expenditure. A small number of non-legally qualified staff were also seconded for a short time. Some prosecuting solicitors' department staff from shire counties worked for short periods in London prior to 30 September but they were not Crown prosecution staff at that time because the Crown prosecution service was fully established only on 1 October 1986.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Attorney-General whether he has received any representations in respect of the differences between the pay structure of those who transferred as senior crown prosecutors and that of persons appointed senior crown prosecutors after transfer by way of the promotion boards; and what steps he proposes to take.

The Attorney-General: I understand a number of representations have been received by the Director of Public Prosecutions and his officials. The point has also been made by several staff in conversation with my right hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General who is presently undertaking a series of visits to CPS areas. Careful consideration is being given to this issue and a discussion paper proposing possible approaches to pay differences has been circulated to chief crown prosecutors and trades unions for urgent comment. It is proposed to review the response to the paper shortly and to implement any necessary action immediately thereafter.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Attorney-General whether it is proposed that members of the Crown prosecution service shall be entitled to see the assessments made of them by their seniors when applying for consideration by the promotion boards; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Crown prosecution service has recently implemented an agreement with the trades unions in respect of promotion boards. The agreement covers an interim period and includes the requirement for an application form to be completed by line managers to assess suitability for promotion to the next higher grade. The form devised for this purpose is not subject to any agreement which would entitle a member of staff to see the assessments made although line managers are encouraged to inform staff of the general tenor of their comments. It is proposed to introduce a staff appraisal report form for all staff, including the large number who have transferred from prosecuting solicitors departments of local authorities, and this will replace the application form with effect from 1 April 1987. In accordance with Civil Service procedures this form is designed to enable all staff to see the assessment of their performance and if desired, to be informed orally or in writing of promotability markings (but not detailed assessments).

Juvenile Courts

Mr. Bermingham asked the Attorney-General whether there are any proposals to create special juvenile court teams within each of the (a) London areas, (b) shire counties and (c) metropolitan areas; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: In the Inner London Crown prosecution service area a branch has been established whose principal function is to man the juvenile courts within that area. Elsewhere in England and Wales lawyers have been designated to co-ordinate administrative arrangements for juvenile case work and to take particular responsibility for ensuring that proper standards are applied. On designation those lawyers receive special training to assist them in the discharge of their duties.

PRIME MINISTER

British Nuclear Fuels plc

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her reply to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy of 21 May, Official Report, column 179, if she will state to which Government Minister British Nuclear Fuels Limited is responsible for the operation of its reactors at Calder Hall and Chapel Cross for the production of nuclear material for defence purposes.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to my previous answer. The operation of these reactors is a matter for British Nuclear Fuels. I also refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad) on 3 June at column 466.

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out, by main expenditure heads, details of the 1986 EEC budget (a) as agreed by the Council in December 1985, (b) as approved by the Assembly and Commission and (c) as agreed after the judgment of the European Court; and if he will give similar details for the proposed 1986 supplementary budget and the draft 1987 budget.

Mr. Brooke: The information requested is in the table.

EEC Agricultural Policy

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanism exists to ensure that common agricultural policy expenditure take a decreasing proportion of the EEC budget; if this principle holds good even if there are exceptional circumstances such as changes in the dollar/European currency unit rate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Expenditure under the guarantee section of the European agricultural guarantee and guidance fund in the EC budget is constrained by the financial guideline. The methodology for calculating the guideline was set out in the meaures adopted by the Council of Ministers on 4 December 1984 to guarantee the effective implementation of the conclusions of the European Council on budgetary discipline. The financial guideline limits the increase in agricultural market support expenditure to no more than the rate of growth of the own resources base. The measures adopted by the Council make specific provision that account has to be taken of exceptional circumstances.

The ECOFIN Council on 7 July, reported in Hansard at column 195, agreed that the limit on agricultural spending in 1986 could be increased by the "amounts which can be justified mainly by the exceptional circumstances of the abnormally large depreciation of the dollar".

The United Kingdom Government have consistently argued for adherence to the financial guideline and will continue to do so in the future.

EMPLOYMENT

Coventry Climax

Mr. Park asked the Paymaster General what steps he proposes to take to alleviate the social consequences of Coventry Climax going into receivership.

Mr. Lee: I understand that the receiver hopes to sell the company as a going concern. All the facilities of the Manpower Services Commission will be available to help anyone who is made redundant find a new job or retraining.

Engineering Apprentices

Mr. Janner asked the Paymaster General how many engineering apprentices were taken on and made redundant, respectively, in each of the last 20 years for which records are available.

Mr. Trippier: The information is not available in the detail requested. There is no central record of all engineering apprentices, many of whom are employed outside the engineering industry.

However, the engineering industry training board has maintained a record of those trainees registering the basic craft and technician training. This record covers firms within scope of the board. Figures for the years 1966-67 to 1985-86 are given at table 1. In addition, since 1977, the board has maintained a record of those trainees employed by companies in other industries who choose to register their trainees with the board. This record, given at table 2, does not claim to include all engineering craft and technician trainees in industries other than engineering.

Formal records are not maintained of engineering apprentices who have been made redundant. However, since 1980 the engineering industry training board has kept a record of the number of redundant trainees who have come to its attention. This is given at table 3.

ENERGY

Oil and Gas Licensing

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether the system of licensing oil and gas exploration operates at a net cost to public funds; and if he will give the most recently available figures.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: There is no net cost to public funds. Estimated costs of administration of the licensing system were of the order of £3·9 million in 1985-86. These costs were far exceeded by licence proceeds, principally royalty, which alone amounted to about £2 billion in 1985-86.

Sellafield

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy what change there has been in the number of visitors to British Nuclear Fuels' Sellafield nuclear site since May.

Mr. Goodlad: From May to September inclusive there were nearly 41,000 visitors to Sellafield. In the same period last year there were some 17,000 visitors.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy if British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. has asked Her Majesty's Government's permission to include public information material on its military rôle in the exhibition centre at Sellafield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 25 July at column 601.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his reply of 4 June, Official Report, columns 594-95, to the hon. Member for Penrith and the Border (Mr. Maclean), if he will set out the economic and organisational effects on the reprocessing of Magnox nuclear fuel of the United Kingdom-Euratom safeguards arrangements for Sellafield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy stated in his reply to the hon. Member for Penrith and the Border (Mr. Maclean) of 4 June 1986 at column 594-95, the introduction of separate civil and non-civil Magnox fuel reprocessing operations will in future involve sequential rather than simultaneous procedures. British Nuclear Fuels plc will incur modest additional costs rendering escort and other assistance to Euratom inspectors.

Nuclear Reactors

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Meironnydd Nant Conwy, 25 July, Official Report, column 602, he will set out the purposes for which the nuclear material withdrawn from safeguards was put; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The material in question was withdrawn from safeguards for defence purposes.

Fluidised Bed Combustion

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy if any overseas commercial scale orders or developments are known to his Department embodying the use of pressurised fluidised bed combustion based upon research carried out in the United Kingdom.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department is not aware of any overseas commercial scale pressurised fluidised bed plants under construction or ordered based on research carried out in the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom holds a prominent position in the development of this technology in which there is considerable international interest. Work continues in this country particularly at Grimethorpe where further work is being supported by British Coal and the Central Electricity Generating Board.

Coal Production

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the latest level of coal production from collieries; and what output per man shift this represents.

Mr. David Hunt: Provisional figures for the week ending 4 October 1986 show a deep-mined output level of over 1·883 mt at an average output per manshift of 3·43 tonnes.

British Gas (Staffing)

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy what were the staffing levels of British Gas during each of the last five years; and what levels of staffing are forecast for each of the years to 1991-92.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: Information covering previous years is published in the British Gas Corporation's annual report and accounts for 1985-86 a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Employment levels for future years are a matter for British Gas plc.

Acid Rain

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy what steps will be taken to ensure that new coal-fired power stations will embody technological developments designed to reduce or eliminate acid rain.

Mr. Goodlad: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment recently announced, any future coal-fired power station will be required to be fitted with flue gas desulphurisation equipment to the requirements of the national industrial air pollution inspectorates. Discussions are now taking place between the industrial air pollution inspectorate and the CEGB about the necessary requirements for any future coal-fired power station in England and Wales.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Namibia

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent it is Her Majesty's Government's policy that Namibia should be included in and affected by measures by the United Kingdom directed against the Republic of South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: Namibia is a separate issue and we would not necessarily apply against the territory of Namibia measures taken against the Republic of South Africa.

China

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to China.

Mr. Renton: From 12 to 18 October my right hon. and learned Friend accompanied the Queen on the first state visit to China by a ruling British monarch. It was a great success, with a magnificent welcome from the Chinese leadership and people. As Her Majesty made clear, the visit has set the seal on the warm friendship between our two countries and will provide a foundation for the building of even closer contacts.

My right hon. and learned Friend also had useful discussions with Chinese leaders on bilateral and international issues of mutual interest.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the question of the proposed Daya bay nuclear plant was discussed at his recent visit to China; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: During his recent visit to China my right hon. and learned Friend discussed the proposed nuclear power plant at Daya bay with senior Chinese officials. They assured him that the Chinese Government are fully alive to the concerns of the Hong Kong people about safety aspects of the project. We shall remain in touch with the Chinese authorities on the subject, on our own behalf and on behalf of Hong Kong.

Gurkha Service men

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he discussed the dismissal of the Gurkha service men on his recent visit to Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend did not discuss this matter during his recent visit to Hong Kong. I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence on 21 October.

Diplomatic Bags

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many specific occasions he has ordered the scanning of diplomatic bags; on what dates such an order was given and such scanning carried out; and on the bags of which mission and with what results.

Mr. Eggar: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to comment on sensitive matters such as this which directly concern national security.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will hold an inquiry into the effects of the Government's stated readiness to scan any diplomatic bag on a specific occasion where the grounds for suspicion are sufficiently strong and into whether the knowledge that he is prepared to do so has acted as a deterrrent to abuse; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We keep application of the policy set out in the White Paper on Diplomatic Immunities and Privileges (Cmnd. 9497) under frequent review.

Visas

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will name the persons responsible for considering appeals against refusal of a visa by nationals of India, Pakistan and Bangladesh; and if these persons were in post on 15 October;

(2) if he will name, for each country concerned, the persons responsible for considering appeals against refusal of a visa to visit the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: There are no persons responsible for considering appeals against refusal of a visa in the countries concerned.

However, an entry clearance officer, in consultation at larger posts with his senior officer, reconsiders his decision in the light of the grounds of appeal put forward. If the entry clearance officer maintains his decision he prepares an explanatory statement which is forwarded to the independent appellate authorities in this country. Officers competent to undertake this role were in all entry clearance posts on 15 October.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidance given by his Department on the procedure for appeals against refusal of a visa to visit the United Kingdom; and in how many languages such guidance is available

Mr. Eggar: Yes. The guidance is available only in English, as has been the case since the coming into force of the Immigration Appeals Act 1969 in all entry clearance issuing posts. Where a refusal is handed to the applicant, the guidance is, where necessary, explained by the interpreter.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth affairs if he will give a breakdown by British missions in each of the five visa countries of the numbers and categories of additional staff employed to deal with visa applications; and what is the total cost involved to date.

Mr. Eggar: The total planned reinforcement of visa sections in the five countries is in the following table:

Actual current costs are not yet available but it is estimated that start-up costs of £4.8 million will be incurred in the current financial year, with annual recurrent costs of £14 million (at current prices) thereafter.

President Kurt Waldheim

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations (a) he has made and (b) he proposes to make to the Austrian Government following President Waldheim's installation as commander-in-chief of the Austrian armed forces in the light of the provisions of article 12 of the Austrian state treaty of 15 May 1955 in relation to membership of Nazi organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: None.

NATO (Visits)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will list in the Official Report those groups which visited the Northern Atlantic Treaty Organisation headquarters from the United Kingdom in 1985 and in 1986 to the nearest convenient date; what groups propose to visit for the rest of the current year; what was the cost of each visit; and upon whom the cost fell.

Mr. Renton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible, and place copies in the Library.

DEFENCE

Portsmouth Harbour (Dredging)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of the special dredging of Portsmouth harbour to allow the USS Iowa to enter the harbour after Exercise Northern Wedding.

Mr. Stanley: No special dredging was carried out for the visit of the USS Iowa. A continual programme of maintenance dredging is carried out throughout the year to maintain the depths shown in Admiralty chart 2629. The recent dredging was part of this programme.

COD Donnington

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Defence what method and period of consultation is planned with interested parties on the plans for contractorisation at COD Donnington after the feasibility study is completed.

Mr. Freeman: In accordance with our normal procedure the Department's proposals would be set out in a consultative document as a basis for discussion with the departmental trade union sides. In the first instance they will be asked to comment within 28 days.

Plutonium and Tritium

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has held, or has any intention of holding, discussions with the chairman of British Nuclear Fuels plc on the provision of (a) plutonium and (b) tritium, to his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Defence Ministers have not held any discussions with the chairman of British Nuclear Fuels plc concerning the provision of plutonium or tritium, and have no plans to do so.

Defence-related Work (Scotland)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are employed in places in Scotland at which work related to the strategic nuclear deterrent is carried out.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [pursuant to his reply, 21 October 1986 c. 818]: On 1 July 1986 the MOD employed 1,746 civilians at Coulport, 1,701 at Faslane and 7,868 at Rosyth dockyard. No figures are available for other places in Scotland where work related to the strategic nuclear deterrent is carried out.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are employed in defence-related work in Scotland

Mr. Archie Hamilton [pursuant to his reply, 21 October 1986, c. 818]: Estimates of the total number of jobs in United Kingdom industry sustained by defence expenditure are derived from generalised statistical information. It is not possible to give a separate figure for Scotland. On 1 July 1986 19,701 United Kingdom service personnel and 17,934 MOD civilian staff were deployed in Scotland.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police (National Memorial)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what support he is giving to the proposed national memorial in St. James park to police officers killed on duty.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This proposal has been made by the Police Memorial Trust, a privately funded charity, to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has told him that the proposal has his full support.

Probation Service

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the study of the case for devolving to the probation service responsibility for administering and financing the present scheme of probation and bail hostels and of grant-aiding voluntary after-care projects to be completed; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I am considering, in the light of the responses to the consultative document which the Home Office issued earlier this year to all those with an interest in this subject, how this study might now be carried forward. I would not, however, envisage any such fundamental changes to the present arrangements taking effect before the 1988-89 financial year.

Extradition

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Her Majesty's Government propose to ratify the Council of Europe convention on extradition; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The white paper "Criminal Justice: Plans for Legislation" (Cmnd. 9658) explained that the proposals for extradition law reform would, if enacted, enable the United Kingdom to become a party to the convention.

Sporting Events (Alcohol)

Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the revised regulations governing the consumption of alcohol in private boxes at designated sporting activities will take effect; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hogg: The necessary amendments to the Sporting Events (Control of Alcohol etc.) Act 1985 are contained in Schedule 1 to the Public Order Bill. I cannot yet give a date for bringing the schedule into effect.

Visitors

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, for each of the last 10 weeks how many visitors have come from (a) India, (b) Pakistan and (c) Bangladesh, respectively; and in each week and for each country how many have been (i) permitted to enter, (ii) temporarily detained, (iii) returned immediately, (iv) given temporary admission and (v) been subject to a Member of Parliament's stop.

Mr. Waddington: The information is not available in the form requested to answer parts (a), (b), (c), (i), (iii), (iv), and (v). Information readily available to answer (ii) refers only to persons arriving at Heathrow and Gatwick airports. The following table shows details of nationals of India, Pakistan and Bangladesh who were detained for further examination between 6 August and 15 October 1986.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will give a breakdown by (a) country of origin and (b) date of entry into the United Kingdom of all those currently detained;

(2) if he will state the number and country of origin of visitors from the five visa countries who arrived in the United Kingdom up to and including 15 October who are still detained.

Mr. Waddington: The information readily available relates to passengers from the five countries who arrived at terminal 3, Heathrow in the period 11-15 October 1986 and, as at midnight 22 October, was as follows:

Nigeria	1
Pakistan	12

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors from the five visa countries who have sponsors residing in Newham are currently detained.

Mr. Waddington: No record of sponsors' addresses is maintained centrally. Of the passengers arriving at the Heathrow and Gatwick airports from Bangladesh, India, Pakistan, Ghana and Nigeria since 1 October 1986 who are currently detained, three are known to have sponsors residing in Newham.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors arriving at Heathrow and Gatwick airports between 6 and 15 October from the five visa countries gave an address of a sponsor living in the London borough of Newham.

Mr. Waddington: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what countries and organisations were officially notified of the visa requirements for India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Ghana and Nigeria prior to 15 October, and which of those countries and organisations expressed (a) support and (b) opposition.

Mr. Waddington: Representatives of the Governments of Bangladesh, Ghana, India, Pakistan and Nigeria were informed when the decision to change visa requirements was announced. We wrote to the following organisations with an information leaflet about the changes:

Members of the Home Secretary's Advisory Council on Race Relations.
All Community Relations Councils in England, Wales and Scotland.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give a daily breakdown of the number and category of immigration officers who were present at London airports from the date of his announcement of a visa regime on 6 October and 15 October when it was implemented.

Mr. Waddington: The information relating to immigration officers and chief immigration officers on duty at the four Heathrow terminals and Gatwick airport for the period in question is:

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional advice services were provided at Heathrow and Gatwick airports between 6 and 15 October to assist sponsors of intending visitors from the five visa countries.

Mr. Waddington: Special arrangements were made at terminal 3 for representatives of the Bangladesh and Indian high commissions, and Pakistan embassy to have unrestricted access to their nationals who were detained in the control areas and to visit them at detention centres. At terminals 2, 3 and 4 periodic situation reports were passed to waiting sponsors either by immigration staff direct or via the airport public address system.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many telephone lines were made available between 6 and 15 October for the use of sponsors inquiring about visitors arriving from the five visa countries at Heathrow and Gatwick airports; what telephone number was given; to whom they were connected; how many staff were available between 6 and 15 October to answer inquiries and between what hours; and how many telephone calls were received.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he advised right hon. and hon. Members of the visa requirements for India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Ghana and Nigeria; and what information he gave them about the new procedures.

Mr. Waddington: My right hon. Friend announced the changes in visa arrangements on 1 September and since then I have written to a number of right hon. and hon. Members. My right hon. Friend made a statement on 21 October. A copy of an information leaflet about the new procedures is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors to Britain who were refused leave to enter since the introduction of the visa regime were detained in one of Her Majesty's prisons; what was the duration of their imprisonment; what criteria his Department operated in order to decide which visitors were accommodated in hotels and which were put in prisons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The information readily available relates to Heathrow and Gatwick airports. No citizen of Bangladesh, India or Pakistan refused leave to enter at these airports since the introduction with effect from 15 October of the visa regime has been detained in prison.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors arrived at Heathrow terminal 3 on 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17 October; and how many arrived in October 1985.

Mr. Waddington [pursuant to his reply, 21 October 1986, c. 799]: Figures of admissions of visitors are compiled only on a monthly basis. A total of 137,000 non-EC foreign nationals were admitted as visitors at Heathrow terminal 3 in October 1985; the corresponding figure for October 1986 will not be available until early in the new year.

Mr. John Stalker

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give details of the date on which the inspectorate of constabulary became aware of allegations against the deputy chief constable of Greater Manchester; if he will give details of what action was taken by the inspectorate of constabulary at the time of this information; and if he will give details of what discussions took place between the inspectorate of constabulary and Greater Manchester police prior to the suspension of the deputy chief constable of Greater Manchester.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary was advised in October 1985 of the existence of information alleging that a relationship might exist between the deputy chief constable and certain persons whose activities were under investigation in Greater Manchester. No evidence was available to justify any action in respect of this information until May 1986. At that time the Inspectorate advised on the appointment of the chief constable of west Yorkshire to carry out the investigation instituted by the Greater Manchester police authority into the allegations. The decision to suspend the deputy chief constable from duty was taken by the police authority and approved by the Police Complaints Authority.

Visas

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state, in respect of each country concerned, the number of appeals against refusal of a visa to visit the United Kingdom which were (a) received and (b) upheld in 1985.

Mr. Waddington: The available information relates to appeals by persons refused an entry certificate or visa to the United Kingdom for any temporary purpose, analysed by broad nationality groups, and is given in the following table.

Appeals in 1985 by persons refused an entry certificate or visa to the United Kingdom for temporary purposes

[1]Including appeals which were subsequently withdrawn before determination and appeals over which the immigration appellate authorities had no jurisdiction.

[2]Appeals allowed in 1985 had not necessarily been referred in 1985.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for visas by nationals of Pakistan, Bangladesh and India have been received by Her Majesty's diplomatic missions in Saudi Arabia; and how many have been granted.

Mr. Waddington: The information requested is not available centrally.

ENVIRONMENT

Air Pollution

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the monitoring and enforcement of controls on industrial air pollution by the industrial air pollution inspectorate.

Mr. Waldegrave: Details of the industrial air pollution inspectorate's performance in monitoring and enforcing controls on industrial air pollution are published each year in the chief inspector's annual report. The latest report "Industrial Air Pollution, Health and Safety 1985", was publised by HMSO for the Health and Safety Executive on 15 October. Copies are available in the Library.

Rates

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average unrebated domestic bill in England, excluding local authority hereditaments, in each year since 1973.

Mr. Chope: Average rate bills of all properties, are:

Average unrebated domestic rate bills in England

1973-74	60
1974-75	77
1975-76	94
1976-77	103

1984-85	323
1985-86	351
1986-87	400

Comprehensive records excluding local authority hereditaments are not held centrally. The available data suggest that average unrebated domestic rate bills of non-local authority hereditaments are slightly higher than the average of all properties.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give figures to show, for each year since 1973, the average level of domestic rates, net of rate relief, payable as a percentage of gross household income, excluding those households where rebates are received.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is not held centrally. Following are the available United Kingdom figures for domestic rate income, gross of rebates, as a percentage of gross household income.

TRANSPORT

Bus Industry

Mr. Brandon-Bravo asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress of deregulation in the bus industry.

Mr. Moore: Deregulation has got off to a very good start. Service levels have been largely maintained, but there have been substantial savings in local authority subsidy, thanks to the introduction of competitive tendering. New forms of service have been introduced, including minibuses (by the end of the year the National Bus Company expects to be running 3,000 minibuses) and taxi buses (over 50 such services have been registered). Progress has been made with the privatisation of the National Bus Company as a series of separate subsidiaries, to promote competition; four subsidiaries have been sold already, three to a management buy-out. I am confident that deregulation will mean a better deal for those who depend on local bus services for transport, after many years of decline.

British Rail

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the chairman of British Railways.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend last met the BR chairman on 6 October.

National Bus Company

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the price obtained from the selling of the Badgerline, a National Bus Company subsidiary; and what was the estimated value of the assets sold;

(2) which subsidiaries of the National Bus Company have now been sold; and what selling price was obtained for each company and the individual company assets in each case.

Mr. Moore: So far, the National Bus Company has sold four of its subsidiaries: National Holidays Ltd., Devon General Ltd., Badgerline Ltd., and Southern Vectis Omnibus Company Ltd. The prices obtained in individual sales are confidential while sales are in progress. I shall report to the House in due course the aggregate proceeds of sale.

A423 (Stubbings Bypass)

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer of 3 June, Official Report, column 452, when he is likely to make a decision regarding the A423 Stubbings bypass.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The inspector's report is being considered. We hope to make an announcement during the first half of next year.

Uttoxeter Bypass

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make an additional allowance to Staffordshire county council for the construction of a bypass of Uttoxeter.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Staffordshire county council's current transport policies and programme includes an A518 bypass of Uttoxeter in a list of schemes to be undertaken in the medium to long-term. Assessment of relative priorities is a matter for it.

SCOTLAND

Hardwoods

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the promotion of greater self-sufficiency in hardwoods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The Government's policy for Britain's broadleaved woodlands was set out in a written statement made to the House on Wednesday 24 July 1985, columns 557-61, by my right hon. Friend the Member for Ayr (Mr. Younger)

Forestry Commission

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received concerning the large scale sale of Forestry Commission-owned forests.

Mr. Rifkind: Since 1 July 1986, my right hon. and learned Friend and his colleagues in the Scottish Office have received nine letters on various aspects of the Forestry Commission's sales programme.

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will ask the Forestry Commission to consult the Scottish Development Department on the protection of ancient monuments and historic sites;

(2) if he will make it his policy to prevent ancient monuments being lost through forest planting schemes.

Mr. Rifkind: The present procedures for safeguarding ancient monuments and historic sites against loss or damage by forestry planting schemes are being examined jointly by the Scottish Development Department and the Forestry Commission to see whether improvements can be made.

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on Government policy concerning the sale of Forestry Commission-owned forests in the Borders region;

(2) if he will make it his policy to conduct full inquiries into the social, economic and environmental implications of any proposal to sell off Forestry Commission-owned forests in the borders region.

Mr. Rifkind: The main purpose of the sale of land by the Forestry Commission, in the Borders region and elsewhere, is to enable the commission to rationalise its estate with a view to improving its efficiency and the commercial effectiveness of the forestry enterprise. It is the forestry commissioners who select the land to be sold, taking account of ministerial guidelines which include factors of the kind the right hon. Member has in mind. These guidelines were set out in appendix V to the commissioners' 62nd annual report (1981-82), copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Broadleaved Woodlands

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to monitor the effectiveness of the various broadleaved assistance schemes in reversing the decline of deciduous woodland in the borders region.

Mr. Rifkind: New measures for maintaining and enhancing broadleaved woodlands were announced by my right hon. Friend, the Member for Ayr (Mr. Younger) on Wednesday 24 July 1985 at columns 557-61. He indicated that the Forestry Commission had been asked to report regularly on the operation and effectiveness of these measures and that they would be reviewed after some three years.

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to prevent any further reduction of ancient broadleaved woodland areas by conversion to coniferous sites in the borders region.

Mr. Rifkind: In a statement on broadleaved woodlands made to the House on Wednesday 24 July 1985, columns 557-61, my right hon. Friend the Member for Ayr (Mr. Younger) indicated that one of the objectives of the Government's policy was to ensure that the special interest of existing ancient semi-natural woodlands was recognised and maintained.

Forestry and Woodlands

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will carry out a feasibility study concerning the establishment of a nature conservation and landscape strategy in relation to forestry and woodlands in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: The Forestry Commission maintains close contacts at national and local level with the Nature Conservancy Council, the Countryside Commission for Scotland, local authorities and a number of voluntary conservation organisations, with a view to ensuring that, as far as possible, forestry developments in Scotland are in harmony with the landscape and reflect the needs of nature conservation. The commission also liaises on a regular basis with the Scottish Development Department. I am not persuaded that any new initiatives are required.

Ancient Monuments

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to ensure that detailed designs of planting and drainage are devised in relation to ancient monuments on Forestry Commission land.

Mr. Rifkind: It is already Forestry Commission policy to plan forest work such as planting, soil cultivation and drainage, so as to safeguard known ancient monuments and their surroundings.

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures are being taken to preserve public access to ancient monuments in Forestry Commission sites and those Forestry Commission sites that have been privatised.

Mr. Rifkind: It is already the Forestry Commission's general policy to allow public access to ancient monument sites on its land. It does not impose public access conditions in the titles of land it sells, and there is no evidence to suggest that the majority of purchasers act unreasonably with regard to continuing public access.

Forestry Schemes

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make it his policy to encourage private forest companies to include recreational provision in their planting schemes;

(2) if the Forestry Commission will consult the Scottish Development Department on the inclusion of recreation provision in any large scale forestry grant scheme.

Mr. Rifkind: Applicants for grant under the Forestry Commission's forestry grant scheme and broadleaved woodland grant scheme are already required to accept as an objective that they should provide such opportunities for recreation, including provision for public access, as may be appropriate. Any necessary consultations on these matters are carried out by the Forestry Commission with the relevant local authority and the applicant at the time that the grant application is received, and the Scottish Development Department would not normally be involved. I see no reason to modify these arrangements.

Forestry (Access)

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to preserve current, and encourage future, new public access to Forestry Commission land and privatised forest sites.

Mr. Rifkind: Subject to any legal or safety constraints, the commission's forests are open to the public on foot.

It is not the commission's practice to impose public access conditions on the sale of land, other than those which are already in the title; there is no evidence, however, to suggest that the majority of purchasers act unreasonably with regard to public access.

Forestry Commission Roads

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the linking of Forestry Commission roads with the public road system in respect of weight restrictions on the public roads.

Mr. Rifkind: Where weight restrictions on public roads are of a permanent nature, the Forestry Commission plans its network of forest roads to avoid the restricted roads wherever possible. If the restrictions are temporary, the maximum use is made of forest roads where these can provide reasonable alternative access, but the commission's operational efficiency can be affected if these restrictions are for long periods.

Timber

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make data available on projected future output levels of timber, classified by major forests in the Scottish Borders.

Mr. Rifkind: For the three Forestry Commission forest districts of Lothian and Tweed, Borders and Lockerbie, the forecast of average annual timber production is as follows:

Cubic metres

Period	Lothian and Tweed	Borders	Lockerbie	Total
1987-1991	40,000	86,000	54,000	180,000
1992-1996	58,000	118,000	77,000	253,000
1997-2001	103,000	98,000	83,000	284,000

It is not possible to forecast accurately the production from privately owned forests, but the equivalent figures for the whole of the private sector in the Forestry Commission's south Scotland conservancy are as follows:

	cubic metres
1987-1991	306,000
1992-1996	424,000
1997-2001	598,000

Re-Chem International

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland on what date he received a transcript of the Re-Chem International log book of 28 May 1984, detailing the operations of its chemical waste disposal plant at Roughmute, Bonnybridge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: A transcript of the Re-Chem International log book of 28 May 1984 is contained in the dossier compiled by Dr. Jonathan Wills and submitted to the Scottish Office by Mr. Alex Falconer MEP on 28 January 1986.

Pollution

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Falkirk, West on 29 October 1985, Official Report, column 467, he will detail the difference in standards between manufacturers' instructions and specifications and the best practicable means as set out by Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate.

Mr. Ancram: Manufacturers' design specifications and instructions for plant which they supply must meet the best practicable means requirement for the industry concerned based on current technology. In applying the best practicable means to individual processes, HMIPI take into account any published guidelines and also local circumstances.

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what standards his Department uses as safe background soil levels of PCBs, PCDs and furans.

Mr. Ancram: At present there are no agreed United Kingdom standards for acceptable levels in soil of PCBs, PCDs and furans. The Government are, however, seeking advice from a number of expert committees on safe levels.

Waste Incineration

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether, pursuant to his written answers to the hon. Member for Falkirk, West on 29 October 1985, Official Report, column 471 and 25 June 1986, Official Report, column 200, he will now report on his Department's study of waste incineration operations in Sweden.

Mr. Ancram: The Scottish Development Department will continue to keep abreast of the relevant literature on waste incineration including operations in Sweden. The information obtained to date remains as set out in the answer I gave the hon. Member on 25 June 1986 at column 200.

Chemicals (Incineration)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will set a public inquiry in the light of the concern expressed by the Royal Commission on the Environment that there may be insufficient and inadequately distributed capacity to burn off chemicals for which incineration is the best environmental option.

Mr. Ancram: No. My right hon. and learned Friend is not at present aware of any insufficient or inadequately distributed capacity in Scotland.

Rates

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give figures to show, for each year since 1973, the average level of domestic rates, net of rates relief, payable as a percentage of gross household income, excluding those households where rebates are received;

(2) what was the average unrebated domestic rates bill in Scotland, excluding local authority hereditaments, in each year since 1973.

Mr. Ancram: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

School Transport

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when the hon. Member for Glasgow, Shettleston, can expect a reply to his letter dated 3 October regarding the effect of the Transport Act 1985 on contracts for school transport.

Mr. Ancram: I replied to the hon. Member on 22 October.

Protection of Children (Tobacco) Act 1986

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to implement and enforce the Protection of Children (Tobacco) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Circular NHS 1986(GEN)21 was sent on 2 October to general managers of health boards describing the content and implications of the Protection of Children (Tobacco) Act 1986 which came into force on 8 October 1986. The circular was also sent to chief constables, directors of education, directors of social work, health education officers, procurators fiscal, regional reporters to children's panels and regional chairmen of children's panels. Copies of the circular, which also refers to research undertaken into the incidence of smoking among secondary school children and suggests that the new Act clarifies the law and simplifies its enforcement by putting all tobacco products, including oral tobacco in sachets, on the same footing as cigarettes, have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and publicised by means of a news release.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Cervical Screening

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will list by region those district health authorities which do not have a call or recall scheme for screening for cervical cancer, detailing the date or dates on which Department of Health authorities presently plan to introduce either or both services.

Mrs. Currie: In January this year all health authorities were told to give priority to implementing computerised call and recall systems no later than March 1988. We are closely monitoring health authorities' progress towards achieving this objective through their annual outturn reports on short-term programmes. These showed that all those health authorities that were not operating a district-wide recall or call scheme as at 31 March 1986 were planning to implement computerised call and recall systems over the next two years. The health authorities concerned are as follows, together with the financial year in which they intend to implement computerised systems.

Regional Health Authority	District Health Authority	Planned year for implementation of call and recall
Northern	Hartlepool	1987-88
	Northumberland	1987-88
	South West Durham	1986-87

	Hampstead	1986-87
South East Thames	Eastbourne	1987-88
	Hastings	1986-87
	West Lambeth	1986-87
Wessex	Swindon	1986-87
West Midlands	Central Birmingham	1986-87
	East Birmingham	1986-87
	Mid Staffordshire	1986-87

	North Staffordshire	1986-87
	South Birmingham	1986-87
	West Birmingham	1986-87

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people claimed supplementary benefit in the Birmingham, Erdington constituency in 1979 and 1985; what percentage change that represents; and what was the percentage change in (a) staff handling supplementary benefit claims and (b) all staff at his Department's Kingsbury road, Erdington and Walsall road, Perry Barr offices for the same period.

Mr. Lyell: Birmingham, Erdington constituency is covered by two of the Department's offices, Erdington and Perry Barr, but their boundaries are not conterminous with the boundary of the constituency.

Comprehensive figures are not available before 1982-83 and information on the number of individuals who claimed supplementary benefit is not available in the form requested.

Information that is available for the offices is as follows:

	Erdington	Perry Barr
Number of new and repeat claims to supplementary benefit (including unsuccessful)
1982-83	21,503	13,619
1985-86	21,534	20,039
Percentage change	+0·1	+47·1
Number of people receiving supplementary benefit[1]
1982-83	13,629	13,027
1985-86	16,348	14,510
Percentage change	+20·0	+11·4
Percentage change in complement 1982-83 to 1985-86
Supplementary benefit staff	+29·8	+32·9
All staff	+6·1	+7·4

[1]Based on 100 per cent. count of cases in action at May.

Direct comparisons between numbers of staff and claims and misleading as work loads vary considerably by type and duration of claim and the action that has to be taken. All these factors vary over time as a result of legislative, policy and procedural changes. Examples of such changes are the introduction of housing benefit and postal claim forms.

AIDS

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to reduce the risk of acquired immune deficiency syndrome to students from countries known to be at high risk; if Her Majesty's Government have considered blood tests for those people on short stays in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: As my noble Friend has already said in the other place the present position is that visitors, or for that those returning to the United Kingdom, are not screened for AIDS and the Government have taken no decision to introduce such screening in the future.

Alternative Medicine

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he plans to meet representatives of practitioners of alternative medicine regarding the establishment of a state register of osteopaths; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what steps his Department take to monitor the standard of practice by alternative medicine practitioners; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what steps his Departmemt takes to monitor the adequacy of training given to alternative medicine practitioners; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Medical practitioners in the National Health Service, who must by law be registered with the General Medical Council, can offer to use any form of treatment, including alternative medicine, which they consider to be in the interests of their patients and which they feel competent to provide. Practitioners of alternative medicine who work outside the National Health Service are at liberty to offer their services privately, subject to the provisions of statute and civil law. The Department does not monitor or endorse the training of such practitioners. We have no plans to do so. The establishment of a state register of osteopaths is primarily a matter for the practitioners of that therapy. However, my noble Friend has met representatives of the General Council and Register of Osteopaths and the British Chiropractic Association, at their request, so that they could inform her of their proposals for state registration.

Protection of Children (Tobacco) Act 1986

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he has taken to implement and enforce the Protection of Children (Tobacco) Act 1986, and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Circular LAC(86)14 was issued on 8 October to coincide with the coming into effect of the Act. The circular, a copy of which has been placed in the Library, was sent to all local authorities and local authority associations, chief education officers and teachers' associations, chief officers of police, chief probation officers and probation committees, voluntary organisations, professional training councils and district health education officers. The circular refers to research which showed that 80 per cent. of children who smoked said they bought their cigarettes in shops or from machines, and to the fact that there were only 26 convictions in 1985 for illegally selling cigarettes to children. It suggests that the new Act clarifies the law and simplifies its enforcement by putting all tobacco products, including oral tobacco in sachets, on the same footing as cigarettes.

National Blood Products Laboratory, Elstree

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) why the national blood products laboratory at Elstree is behind schedule; when it was originally due to open; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when the national blood products laboratory at Elstree will be open;

(3) what estimate he has made of the financial implications for regional health authorities of the delay in the operation of the national blood products laboratory at Elstree.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Reye's Syndrome

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the over-the-counter medicinal products sold for babies and children which contain aspirin or aspirin derivatives; and what advice he has received regarding the continued sale of these products.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 23 October 1986]: I understand that, following the recommendation by the Committee on Safety of Medicines in June this year concerning a possible association with Reye's syndrome that aspirin should not be given to children under 12 except on medical advice, manufacturers voluntarily stopped the supply of all aspirin-containing products for children. At the same time they arranged for the recall of existing retail stocks. I am satisfied that the manufacturers would immediately follow up any detailed allegations that children's aspirin products are now still on sale and, if correct, would see that action was taken to withdraw them.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how significant was the risk factor study regarding Reye's syndrome in the decision of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on the use of children's aspirin; who paid for the study; what was the nature of his Department's involvement; and in what way he intends that his Department should support continuation of the study of work and its implications.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 23 October 1986]: The preliminary report to the Reye's syndrome risk factor study was one of several pieces of evidence which were examined by the Committee on Safety of Medicines in March 1986. The committee based its conclusion that the use of aspirin may in some cases be linked to the causation of Reye's syndrome on the totality of the available evidence which my right hon. Friend the Member for Brentford and Isleworth (Mr. Hayhoe) outlined in his reply to the right hon. Member on 13 June at columns 366-67.

The public health laboratory services board was responsible for meeting the costs of the risk factor study but received a contribution towards those costs from pharmaceutical industry. The Department is responsible for funding the PHLSB but had no direct involvement in the study. The risk factor study is now complete but the PHLSB has agreed to continue to fund the British Reye's syndrome surveillance scheme for the next three years. The CSM will continue to keep the issue of Reye's syndrome and aspirin under review and will make further recommendations if this is warranted.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the Committee on Safety of Medicines received any representations or communications from the aspirin manufacturers during the period in 1985 when it was considering the relationship between the use of aspirin and Reye's syndrome.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 23 October 1986]: Two papers were received from the Aspirin Foundation. These were among the many papers and publications from other sources considered by the Committee on Safety of Medicines in March and April 1985 before it advised at that time that the available evidence had not established a causal link between aspirin use and Reye's syndrome.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services precisely when the Committee on Safety of Medicines first received evidence from the United States that the number of reports of Reye's syndrome had fallen in line with the fall in the use of aspirin; what was the source of the information; wo sent it; and what was the response of the Committee.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 23 October 1986]: Evidence of a fall in the number of reports of Reye's syndrome in the United States of America was published in "Paediatrics" on 1 January 1986 and in the United States "Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report", on 7 February 1986. Both reports were seen by members of the secretariat of the Committee on Safety of Medicines shortly after publication. Evidence of a concurrent fall in aspirin use became available to the CSM's secretariat on 10 March 1986. These reports, with other evidence, were considered by the Committee on 26 March and its response has already been reported in the reply by my right hon. Friend the Member for Brentford and Isleworth (Mr. Hayhoe) to my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 10 June; at columns 145-46.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 102

SESSION 1985–86

21st July—24th October 1986

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc., under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speakers rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
